The conditions of sale under which a purchase was made provided that the abstracts should be delivered within twenty-one days from the day of sale. When seventy-eight days had expired without any abstract having been delivered, the purchaser gave notice to the vendor that he declined to complete. After one hundred & eighteen days had elapsed, abstracts of the title to some of the lots were delivered to the purchaser, & the abstract of the remaining lot was delivered a fortnight later, but were returned by the purchaser on the same days on which they were delivered. 774. — Delay in payment of purchase-money—Under right of pre-emption in will.]—A person having under a will a right of pre-emption of an estate for a given sum, provided he signified to the trustees within one month of testator's death his option to purchase, & paid the purchase-money within a further period of two months, duly signified his option to the trustees, & applied to their solicitor for an abstract of title. The solr. acknowledged this application, & promised to take an early opportunity of seeing his clients thereon. But no abstract was furnished; & hearing nothing further, the donee of the right of pre-emption allowed the two months to expire without paying his purchase-money, or taking any further step in the matter:—Held: under the circumstances & according to the true construction of the will, the trustees were not under any obligation to furnish an abstract; & the purchase-money not having been paid within the two months, the right of pre-emption was lost, the rule being that such a right must be strictly complied with.—*BROOKE v. Notice to purchase was given in due course; but the three months after the notice having been allowed to elapse without the money being paid the lessor refused to carry out the agreement for sale. Upon bill by lessee for specific performance:—Held: "at the expiration" meant the precise day on which the notice expired; until the condition of paying the money was performed, the relation of vendor & purchaser did not arise; time was of the essence of the contract; & the money not being paid at the fixed time the lessee had lost his right to purchase; and the ct. refused specific performance, & dismissed the bill with costs.—*RANELAGH (LORD) v. 776. — — — Effect of extending time.]—Where time is of the essence of the contract, the mere extension of time is only a waiver to the extent of substituting the extended time for the original time, & not an utter destruction of the essential character of the time.

By an agreement dated Jan. 1, 1873, the Clothworkers' co. agreed to grant a lease of a piece of land to M. & W. for eighty years from Dec. 25, 1872, M. & W. covenanting to erect a house of a specified value thereon within one year from Dec. 25, 1872; & in case of default in completing the buildings for two months from the expiration of the year the Clothworkers' co. were entitled to put an end to the agreement & take possession of the premises. By an agreement dated July 15, 1873, M. & W. agreed to sell their interest under the agreement of Jan. 1, 1873, to plffs. for £2,000; of which sum £1,000 was paid on the execution of the agreement, & the remaining £1,000 was to be paid on July 31, 1873, or at such deferred date as the parties might agree upon, & it was provided that plffs. should accept the title of M. & W., & that they should not require a formal assignment of the agreement, & that the purchasers should take upon themselves every liability under which M. & W. were; & the agreement provided that if plffs. should fail to pay the £1,000 on July 31, or at such deferred date as the parties might agree upon, all money paid previously to such default should be absolutely forfeited, & the agreement should become null and void. The £1,000 was not paid on July 31, nor was any deferred time for payment agreed on. On Aug. 16, 1873, at which time plffs. were in possession of the ground, but had not commenced building, M. & W. gave plffs. notice that unless the works were commenced on the following Monday, the £1,000 must be paid within one week from the following Tuesday which would be Aug. 26. The works were not commenced, nor was the £1,000 paid; & on Oct. 2, M. & W. gave plffs. notice that in consequence of default having been made in the payment of the £1,000, the agreement had become void; & that they would proceed to deal with the property as if the agreement had not been entered into. On the same day plffs. gave M. & W. a counter notice requiring them to perform the agreement, but without offering to pay the £1,000. On Oct. 17, the Clothworkers' co. sent M. & W. a notice, requiring them to proceed with the buildings, & on Oct. 20, M. & W. assigned the benefit of the agreement to B., who, on Dec. 26, took possession of the ground, & commenced building.

On Jan. 8, 1874, plffs. filed a bill offering to pay the £1,000, & interest, & praying for specific performance of the agreement of July 15, 1873, & that B. might be restrained from continuing in possession of the ground, & M. & W. from assigning their interest under the agreement with the Clothworkers' co., except to plffs.:—Held: (1) time was of the essence of the contract, & the notice of Aug. 16, was only a qualified & conditional waiver, the terms of which were not complied with, & the waiver did not take effect; (2) plffs. had not used that diligence which was incumbent upon them to use, to obtain the aid of a ct. of equity.—*BARCLAY v. 778. ————.]—By an agreement in writing dated Dec. 9, 1909, land in the province of Saskatchewan was sold for 16,000 dollars, of which 1,000 dollars were paid on signing the agreement, & the balance was payable by six annual instalments on Dec. 1, of each year. The agreement provided that, if the purchaser should make default in any of the payments, the vendor should be at liberty to cancel the agreement & to retain, as liquidated damages, the payments already made, & that time was to be considered as of the essence of the agreement. Default having been made in the payment of the first instalment, the vendor cancelled the agreement, assignees of the purchaser sued for specific performance:—Held: the parties having made time of the essence of the agreement, specific performance could not be decreed, but that the forfeiture of the money paid was a penalty from which relief should be granted on proper terms. *STIEDMAN v. Before the sale took place the auctioneer had received a letter from S., stating that he had been prevented from attending the sale, & asking if any of the lots remained unsold. After the sale was concluded the auctioneer informed D. that a client of his was inquiring about the property, & D. then said that he was willing to resell same for £6,600, of which £100 should be paid to the auctioneer as commission, provided the offer was accepted within a specified time. The offer was communicated by the auctioneer by letter to S., who wrote a reply to the auctioneer accepting it. S. brought an action against D. for the specific performance of the agreement. The evidence was conflicting as to the time within which D.'s offer was to be accepted, & his contention was that it was not accepted in time:—Held: the action must be dismissed on the ground that the offer had not been accepted within the time limited by D.—SAUNDERS v. Nor will it exercise its jurisdiction when the character of the property or when other circumstances will render such exercise likely to result in injustice. In such cases, the circumstances themselves, apart from any question of expressed intention, exclude the jurisdiction. Equity will further infer an intention that time should be of the essence from what has passed between the parties before the signing of the contract. But in such a case the intention must appear from what has passed before the contract, & its construction cannot be affected in the contemplation of equity by what takes place after it has once been entered into (LORD HALDANE). — JAMSHED KHODARAM IRANI v. 789. Whether time made essential by notice.]—Lapse of time, if not an essential object of the contract, is no objection to a specific performance. Injunction upon that, combined with other circumstances.

Though the party has not a title in law, as he has not complied with the terms, so as to entitle him to an action as to the time, for instance, yet if the time, though introduced as some time must be fixed, where something is to be done on one side, as a consideration for something to be done on the other, is not the essence of the contract, a material object, to which they looked, & the first conception of it, even though the lapse of time has not arisen from accident, a ct. of equity will compel the execution of the contract (LORD ERSKINE, C.). — HEARNE v. The son did not pay off the mtge. debt, nor did the father pay it off, or release the son therefrom, but the father paid the interest until his death in 1841, & after his death his devisees paid off the mtge. :—Held : neither party having performed the agreement, or apparently acted upon it, in the lifetime of the father, the ct. would not, after the death of the father, enforce the specific performance of the agreement; nor would the ct., in such a case, enforce specific performance of an agreement, which, apparently, was an agreement for the sale of the son's reversionary interest in the estate at an undervalue.

There is no covenant in the agreement to restrain the building of a brewhouse. A brewhouse is not necessarily a nuisance, & if it be so used as to become a nuisance, the law is open to deft. 804. —.]—The general rule in equity I take to be, that a party who asks the ct. to enforce an agreement in his favour must aver & prove that he has performed, or been ready & willing to perform, the agreement on his part. Where, however, the strict application of that general rule would work injustice, the ct. will relax it. A breach of an agreement may have been committed, for which a jury would only give a nominal damage. A breach may have been committed, which a jury would consider as waived ; & if the party committing those breaches has substantially performed other parts of the agreement, whereby, at his expense, the other contracting party has derived benefits under the agreement, a ct. of equity might fail in doing justice, if it refused to decree a specific performance (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—WALKER v. DUNN (1841), 10 L. J. Ch. 367, L. C.

807. — Provision for payment of total rents to defendant purchaser after completion—Intermediate tenant permitted to remain in possession.]—Houses described in the particulars as in the respective occupations of specified under-tenants, & as let to Messrs. J. "at the very low rent of £50 per annum, who have received notice to quit" at a day past, but with a subsequent written permission to occupy on the same terms as before until the tenements are sold, were contracted to be sold subject to a condition that the purchaser should be entitled to the rents from a specified day. On completion after that date the purchaser claimed to be allowed a rent at the rate of £150 a year, the sum which the undertenants paid the tenant, on the ground that, in allowing the tenant to continue in possession at the rent of £50 a year after the date of the contract for sale, the vendors were guilty of wilful default. On a claim by the vendors to enforce specific performance :—Held : the purchaser not having required the vendors to turn the tenant out, they were not guilty of wilful default in allowing him to remain at the lesser rent ; & specific performance was decreed, pltf's. accounting only for the lesser rent.—CROSSE v. BEAUFORT (DUKE) (1851), 5 De G. & Sm. 7 ; 64 E. R. 994.

o. Agreement for sale of land—Purchaser acquiescing in resale by vendor.]—Where it was shown that a purchaser could not pay for property, & after several demands upon him to complete the purchase, the vendor sold to a third party with the knowledge of the original purchaser, who appeared to acquiesce in it ; but afterwards, when, by reason of the construction examination with the abstract, should be respectively sought for & procured at the expense of the purchaser. A. became the purchaser of two lots. After the title had been approved, & a deed of conveyance prepared, a question arose as to whether or not the purchaser was entitled to attested copies of the title deeds at the expense of the vendors; & thereupon the vendors, under the power contained in the fourth condition, annulled the sale. On bill filed for the specific performance of the contract, the ct. held that the purchaser was not entitled to attested copies of the title deeds at the expense of the vendors, dismissed the bill, with costs.—ABBOTT v. DARNELL (1856), 2 Jur. N. S. 631; 4 W. R. 314.

809. — Plaintiff vendor declaring intention to resell—Where valid objections to title made by purchaser.]—A purchaser raised certain valid objections to his vendor's title, which the vendor refused to satisfy. The vendor gave notice, that if the purchaser refused to complete within five days, he should re-sell & charge the purchaser with the expenses. The purchaser thereupon gave the vendor notice, that he should bring an action for the deposit, if the requisitions were not complied with within a week. The action was commenced, & the vendor some time subsequently agreed to satisfy the requisitions at the purchaser's expense. Upon the purchaser's refusal, a bill was filed by the vendor for specific performance. The ct. held, that the notice of the vendor of an intention to resell, was equivalent to a declaration that he would not seek specific performance of the contract, & that the purchaser's action to rescind was effectual, & the bill was dismissed with costs.—*ROYOU v. The bill was lost in the first session, & after an alteration in the course of the line, was passed in the second session:—Held: the agreement was binding on the landowners, & it might be specifically performed at the suit of the co., notwithstanding objections for want of privity, want of consideration, want of mutuality, & vagueness.

(2) After the passing of the Act, the co.—before claiming the benefit of the agreement—served the deft. with a common notice to treat, & did not formally insist on the agreement until the deft. had appointed an arbitrator.

The co. subsequently entered under Lands Clauses (Consolidation) Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 85:—Held: this clause applied exclusively to compulsory purchases; the proceedings of the co. assumed the non-existence of any agreement; & on these grounds a bill by the co. & two promoters for specific performance of the agreement was dismissed.—*BEDFORD & CAMBRIDGE RY. 812. Agreement for lease — Prior action to set aside agreement.]—By an award made in June, 1863, under a reference at Nisi Prius, the arbitrator awarded that deft. should execute to pltf. a lease of the right to use such part of a certain railway made by pltf. as was upon the land of deft., the lease to be in the words set out in the award; & that deft. should have a right of running carriages over the whole line on certain terms, & might require pltf. to supply engine-power, while pltf. should have an engine on the railway; & pltf. should during the term keep the whole railway in good repair. The lease did not provide for these privileges awarded to deft. Pltf. applied at law to set aside the award, & ultimately in Apr. 1864, the application was refused. In July, 1864, pltf. filed his bill for specific performance of the award:—Held: (1) specific performance could not be decreed, inasmuch as the provisions in favour of deft. could not be enforced at once, but gave deft. a right to have certain duties continuously performed by pltf. for a number of years, & the ct. could not undertake to see to such performance; (2) semble: even if the award had been one of which specific performance could have been decreed, pltf. could not, after taking proceedings to set it aside, have enforced specific performance.—*BLACKETT v. The other trustees, afterwards, refused to concur in the sale. Pltf. having brought his action for specific performance of the contract:—Held: (1) the subject-matter of the contract was sufficiently defined as the vagueness, if any, about the meaning of the words: "Jolly Sailor, offices, etc." might be removed by an inquiry at chambers; (2) the contract for the sale of the entirety could not be enforced, & the property being trust property, it could not be

838. Agreement with officer of company—Failure of company.—A co. having been formed, or attempted to be formed, for the improvement of H. island, & for constructing a floating bridge, pltf., who claimed to be lord of the manor, entered into a contract with deft., the solr. to the co., to grant a lease of a portion of the island, which was to be fully carried out by a certain specified time. In consequence, however, of pltf. not being in a position to make out a good title to the property, he failed to fulfil his agreement, whereupon deft. in equity commenced proceedings against him at law for damages, upon which pltf. filed his bill for an injunction & specific performance of the contract; this injunction was afterwards dissolved. Upon the hearing of the cause upon the application for a specific performance of the agreement:—Held: as the agreement had reference to an object which had utterly failed, namely, the formation of a co., it was against equity to call upon deft. to fulfil that agreement; & the bill must be dismissed with costs.—*PADWICK v. 839. Agreement for transfer of shares—Transferring company wound up.—By an agreement in June, 1864, between two limited banking cos., it was agreed that co. L. should be dissolved and that their goodwill should be taken over by co. M.; that M. should increase their capital, & that 10,000 of the new shares, credited with £10 each, should be allotted "at par to the directors" of L. "for distribution amongst their shareholders," the L. directors paying £100,000 consideration for the new shares to be issued to them. Of the 10,000 shares only 9,740 were applied for and allotted to L. shareholders. In 1865 the L. directors issued a circular to their shareholders dissuading them from taking M. shares. In 1866 the M. bank made a call, which was badly met, & many shares were forfeited in consequence, including some held by the liquidators of the L. bank. In Mar. 1867, a mutual release was executed between the cos. It recited that the £100,000 had been paid & in inconsistently with the fact, that the M. bank had duly allotted to such persons as the liquidators of the L. bank directed the 10,000 shares mentioned in the agreement. In Nov. 1867, a right to "a large number" of unissued M. shares was asserted by the secretary of the L. liquidators in a letter, but no step was taken. In Sept. 1868, a formal demand was made by the solrs. of the L. liquidators for the remaining shares. In Feb. 1869, the M. bank was wound up, & the M. liquidators made a return of £5 10s. per share to their shareholders, calls having been made upon them & paid for moneys which were found not to be required. Upon the L. liquidators claiming to be entitled, on behalf of the L. shareholders, to participate in the return to the extent of 260 £10 shares:—Held: the agreement was now incapable of specific performance; & summons dismissed.—*Re MERCANTILE & EXCHANGE BANK, Ex p. 845. Whether defence to claim—Rescission by conduct.—If it clearly appears that pltf. in a ct. of equity insisting on such an agreement contained in letters, has by acts done, waived it, & thereby drawn in another to purchase, & complete his purchase, in such case it would be a good defence to be insisted on by the second purchaser, showing that he proceeded bonâ fide, & consequently would rebut any equity of the first purchaser (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—BUCKHOUSE v. CROSSBY (1737), 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 32 ; 22 E. R. 28 ; sub nom. BACKHOUSE v. MOHUN, 3 Swan. 434, n., L. C.

846. ———.]—Deft. having been left in possession as owner for a long time, & pltf. having done acts inconsistent with the notion of his being owner himself, which was considered as amounting to a waiver.—ROSSE (EARL) v. STERLING (1816), 4 Dow, 442 ; 3 E. R. 1221.

847. ——— Rescission of written contract by parol—Necessity for clear proof.—BUCKHOUSE v. CROSSBY, No. 845, ante.

848. ———.]—Though a parol waiver of a written contract, amounting to a complete abandonment, & clearly proved, would bar a specific performance, or even parol variations, so acted upon, that the original agreement could no longer be enforced without injury to one party ; variations, verbally agreed upon, are not sufficient to prevent the execution of a written agreement : the situation of the parties in all other respects remaining the same. In this case the variations were all for the advantage of deft. by gratuitous covenants of pltf.—PRICE v. DYER (1810), 17 Ves. 356 ; 31 E. R. 137.

849. ———.]—Although a parol waiver of a written agreement concerning land, amounting to a complete rescission of the original contract, may be a good defence to an action for specific performance, yet variations verbally agreed upon cannot be relied upon by way of defence, & the original agreement may, notwithstanding, be ordered to be specifically performed.—*VEZEY v. 850. ——— Rescission by novation—Subsequent parol contract inconsistent with written contract.—

(1) Where an undated written contract for a lease omits to state the period of commencement, & contains nothing from which it may be inferred, a specific performance of it cannot be enforced as a written contract.

(2) Where a party to a written contract enters afterwards into a parol one, inconsistent with it, he thereby so far abandons the written contract, that he cannot enforce a specific performance of it in equity.—GILBERT v. HALL (1831), 1 L. J. Ch. 15.

851. ——— Agreement with projected railway company.—Certain persons intended to form a railway from A. to B., which was to pass over pltf.'s estate. Pltf. opposed the project ; but, on the agent for the projectors agreeing, in writing, to pay him £20,000 for the portion of his estate over which the railway was to pass, he consented to withdraw his opposition. At the same time certain other persons intended to form a railway between the same termini, but by a different line, which also passed through pltf.'s estate, but not through the same part of it as the former line : 14 acres of pltf.'s land were required for the former railway, & 16 acres for the latter. The pltf. opposed the latter railway also. The agents for the rival projectors then entered into & signed an agreement, which was approved of & signed by pltf.'s agent, by which they agreed that the first line should be abandoned & the second adopted, & that the adopted line should take the engagements entered into, with the landowners, by the abandoned line ; & thereupon, pltf. withdrew his opposition to the adopted line ; & the Act of Parliament for making the second railway & for incorporating the projectors of it was passed :—Held : the incorporated co. were bound to perform the agreement made with pltf. by the projectors of the first railway.—STANLEY v. CHESTER & BIRKENHEAD RY. CO. (1838), 3 My. & Cr. 773 ; 9 Sim. 261 ; 1 Ry. & Can. Cas. 58 ; 40 E. R. 1124.

852. ———.]—Two railways called A. & B. were projected, by different parties, to run from M. towards N. An Act was passed incorporating the projectors of both railways into one co., & for making a railway partly in the line of A., & partly in the line of B., the latter being the line selected with respect to pltf.'s estate. Pending the Act, the promoters of the two railways agreed with each other that, where either co. should have entered into contracts with landowners whose property might be affected by either line, though in a somewhat different mode, the contracts entered into by the co. proposing the rejected line should be adopted by the united co. A copy of this agreement was subsequently sent to pltf. by the united co. The projectors of line A. afterwards vacated their agreement with pltf. :—Held : pltf. could not enforce that agreement against the united co.—*GREENHALGH v. MANCHESTER & BIRMINGHAM RY. 854. ———— Agreement for lease.]—In Aug. 1856, pltf. agreed to let a house to deft. for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years, deft. to keep the premises in repair, & paint & paper as therein mentioned, & deft. was let into possession. In 1869 pltf. agreed with deft. to accept a Mr. W. as tenant in his room upon the same terms, deft. guaranteeing the rent. W. had just before this been let into possession by deft., & he paid rent till 1863. In that year deft. gave a notice to determine his tenancy at the end of the first seven years. W. & deft. having both denied their liability to paint & paper according to the terms of the original agreement, pltf., in Nov. 1864, filed his bill to compel deft. to accept a lease:—Held: deft. could not be compelled to accept a lease.

The agreement of 1859 was substitutionary for the agreement of 1856, & although pltf., if he had within a reasonable time called upon deft. to procure W. to take the lease, would probably, upon deft. failing to do so, have been entitled to call for performance of the original agreement, he was not so entitled after the time which had elapsed, & semble, deft.'s notice in 1863 would have been sufficient to prevent specific performance.—MOORE v. MARRABLE (1866), 1 Ch. App. 217 ; 13 L. T. 725, L. J.

855. ———— Contract abandoned.]—A., by deed, contracted with B., that, in consideration of £100 expressed to be paid to A. by B. he, A., would maintain, educate, & apprentice B.'s child, a boy of five years, & that if he had no child of his own, B.'s child should, in case of his attaining twenty-one years, have all his, A.'s, real & personal estate at his death, subject to a life interest for his widow.

It appeared, from the circumstances of the case, probable, that the apparent consideration of £100 was not, in fact, paid, or intended by either party to be paid, & that it was stated in the deed pro forma only. There was some evidence that the child was at A.'s house after the date of the deed, but it appeared doubtful whether the child ever lived with A. in the manner provided by the contract, & he soon after was residing with his father, B., & the ct. was satisfied that A. & B., by agreement between themselves, abandoned the contract, & that the status of the child had not been altered by anything done by A. in pursuance of the contract. Upon a bill filed by the child, after the death of A.:—Held: the contract, having been abandoned by the contracting parties, could not be enforced by the child.

Qu.: whether this ct. would perform a contract, by which a person, for a sum of money, deprives himself of the possibility of realising property which he can dispose of by will, & thus destroys an active motive for bettering his condition in life.

Qu.: whether, if the contract had been so acted on by A. as to alter the status of the child, the child could have enforced the contract.—HILL v. GOMME (1839), 5 My. & Cr. 250 ; 9 L. J. Ch. 54 ; 4 Jur. 165 ; 41 E. R. 366, L. C.

856. ————.]—To hold that a contract can be put an end to by one of the contracting parties changing his mind with respect to it, whereby he has made the acquisition of the property a matter of no moment or use to him, would be introducing a most dangerous principle & innovation into the doctrines of this ct. with regard to the specific performance of contracts (ROMILLY, M.R.).—STUART (LORD JAMES) v. 858. ———— Threat to rescind—If contract not completed at time stipulated.]—In Mar. 1904, comrs. agreed to purchase land for a public purpose, subject to certain consents being obtained, which were in fact obtained in May, 1906.

In Apr. 1905, the vendor wrote: "After the expiration of the period named" for completion "I shall not consider myself bound by any agreement, but shall dispose of the lots as I may think fit"; & in June, 1906, he wrote: "The comrs. have most vexatiously delayed necessary procedure for upwards of two years. I therefore wish them clearly to understand that I shall not consent to extend the time of settlement for one day":—Held: the vendor had not debarred himself from asking for specific performance of the contract.—LAUGHTON v. 860. ———— Acceptance of instalments after breach of contract.]—Several suits at law & in equity, to determine the title to certain lands, were pending between persons claiming to be mtgees. of such lands, & one who claimed the same lands in fee by title, under a settlement, paramount to the mtge. Pltf., claiming to be a subsequent mtgee. of the same lands, contracted to purchase the interests of the prior mtgees. in their principal moneys, arrears of interest & securities, & to pay the purchase-money at certain stipulated times, all of which, except an annuity, were to be paid in 1843 ; & to pay & indemnify the prior mtgees. against the past & future costs of the suits & proceedings ; & time was to be of the essence of the contract. Pltf. did not pay the instalments until a considerable time after the stipulated period but such later payments were accepted by the vendors. The bill, filed in 1845, when some of the payments still remained to be made, alleged that defts. refused to perform the agreement, & prayed a specific performance:—Held: the time of performing the several acts by the agreement on both sides being past, the ct. would now enforce a contemporaneous performance of the contract by both parties.—*HUNTER v. 880. — Variation by agent without authority.—A landowner who had agreed to take shares in a railway co. contracted with the co. for the sale to them of certain land for a sum in cash. Subsequently, the landowner at the request of a person professing to act as the co.'s agent, agreed to vary the contract by accepting an annual rentcharge in lieu of the sum in cash, upon condition of being released from all liability in respect of certain of his shares. The conveyance purported to be made in consideration of the rentcharge. The co. took possession & paid the rentcharge for seven years. They afterwards made calls against their vendor on all the shares he had originally agreed to take, & brought an action against him for payment. The landowner thereupon filed his bill to restrain the action, or for specific performance of the original contract. The co. repudiated the authority of their agent to vary the contract:—Held: under these circumstances the vendor was entitled to specific performance of the original contract & to have the amount of calls set off as against the purchase-money due to him.—*PRICE v. 883. — Performance involving variation.—Defts. agreed to construct a road over land of pltf., who was to grant defts. a right of way over the road when completed, & to permit it to be declared a public highway by the local board. Defts. were to make the road according to a plan & specification already approved by the local board, & to do all things necessary to carry out a resolution passed by the board that the road should, six months after completion to their satisfaction, be declared by the board a public highway. The specification provided that the pathways should be gravelled, & did not provide for means of lighting. After completion of the road, the board were advised that the road did not comply with the requirements of Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 152, inasmuch as it was not flagged nor provided with means of lighting, & they withheld their sanction to its being declared a public highway.

Pltf. brought an action claiming specific performance by defts. of the agreement, on the ground that they had not done all things necessary to enable the board to declare the road a public highway, & claiming damages:—Held: inasmuch as to compel defts. to construct the road so as to conform with the provisions of the Act would be to enforce performance of terms at variance with the agreement & entirely outside the contemplation of the parties, specific performance could not be ordered.—SAUNDERS v. BRADING HARBOUR IMPROVEMENT RAILWAY & WORKS CO. (1885), 52 L. T. 426.

The line was completed in 1842 & buildings for a station called C. were erected & used without complaint for many years. In 1863 pltf. became possessed of the property of which the land sold formed part, & in 1869 he filed his bill complaining that the station in question was not treated as first class, & praying for a decree of specific performance of the covenant, & for an injunction to restrain the use of the land except as a first class station:—Held: pltf. was entitled to have the station used as a first class station for passenger traffic, & therefore that as many trains, excepting express, special, & mail trains, as stopped at any station between the two termini of the line, must in each twenty-four hours stop at C.; but so much of the judge's decree as directed a reference to inquire what additional conveniences ought to be supplied was discharged, their Lordships being of opinion that any objection which might have existed on the score of deficient accommodation at the station, had been waived by the lapse of time since the railway was opened.—*HOOD v. Plaintiff must come within reasonable time.—If one of two parties to a contract for the sale of land, give to the other notice that he will not perform the contract, & the person receiving the notice does not, within a reasonable time after the receipt of such notice, take steps to enforce the contract, equity will consider him to have acquiesced in the abandonment of the contract, & will leave the parties to it to their remedies at law; & the tendency of modern decisions has been to diminish the time allowed to either party for enforcing his right under the contract (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*PARKIN v. to elapse after deft. had rescinded the contract before filing his bill, it is not a sufficient explanation of the delay to state that deft.'s solr. was suffering from mental alienation.—HUXHAM v. LLEWELLYN (1873), 21 W. R. 766; previous proceedings, 28 L. T. 577.

916. Six months.—In the month of May, 1843, a parol agreement was entered into between A. & B. for a partnership between them, as to certain land intended to be used for building purposes, & a lease of it was afterwards executed by the lessor to B. only, the lessor declining to grant a lease to two persons. Certain acts of ownership were exercised by A. shortly after the agreement was entered into; but, afterwards, A. permitted B. to lay out his money in the erection of buildings on the land, without interfering therewith. After a lapse of eighteen months, A.'s solr. applied to B. to perform the agreement, which B. repudiated; six months afterwards, A. filed his bill against B., seeking specific performance of the agreement:—Held: the circumstances were such as to exclude A. from insisting on the specific performance of the agreement by B.—*COWELL v. One year.—Pltf., the vendor, having notice from the purchaser that the latter abandoned his contract, did not file his bill for specific performance, till about a year afterwards: the bill was dismissed on the ground of unreasonable delay.—*WATSON v. 918. Fifteen months.—A lease from A. to B. contained a provision that B. should not assign without the previous consent in writing of A. but that the consent should not be withheld unreasonably or vexatiously. B. subsequently agreed for the assignment, "subject to the landlord's approval," of the remainder of his term to C.; but A. having refused his consent, B. in Nov. 1864, gave notice to C. that the treaty for assignment must be considered at an end; & he shortly afterwards accepted an offer from A. for the surrender of the lease to him on similar terms to those agreed on between B. & C. C., being in possession, delayed filing his bill until Feb. 1856:—Held: the delay was fatal.—LEHMANN v. MCARTHUR (1868), 3 Ch. App. 496; 37 L. J. Ch. 625; 32 J. P. 660; 16 W. 920. Nineteen months.—A contract for the sale of the vendor's interest in a manor under a lease for lives was made on Oct. 16, 1840. Objections were taken to the title, & a correspondence between the solrs. of the vendors & purchaser took place, & continued until Aug. 20, 1841, when the purchaser gave notice to the vendors that the title being defective, he rescinded the contract. The correspondence with reference to the title still proceeded, the purchaser's solr. claiming his right to insist upon the notice, but giving the vendors

the evidence given threw considerable doubt on the contract:—Held: the doubt, coupled with the delay, was sufficient to prevent the contract being enforced.—KELLY v. SWEETEN (1870), 17 Gr. 372.—CAN.

two months more to complete the title, until Jan. 17, 1842, when the purchaser intimated that he should fall back to his position under the rescinded contract. The bill was filed on Aug. 30, 1843:—Held: the interval between Aug. 20, 1841 & Jan. 17, 1842 ought not to be regarded in the question of laches, but the delay after Jan. 17, 1842, before the bill was filed, precluded the vendors from sustaining their suit for specific performance.

The tendency of the ct. in modern cases has been to restrict the exercise of its jurisdiction in enforcing specific performance of contracts to those cases in which pltf. has been prompt in seeking his equitable remedy.—*SOUTHCOMB v. 921. Five years.]—Unless a valid acceptance be given, within a reasonable time, to a written offer to sell an estate, it will be treated as abandoned.

In 1827 A. wrote to B., that he had credited B.'s account with £220, in consideration of an agreement by B. to convey two houses. The abstract was delivered, but there was no acceptance in writing on the part of B. Five years afterwards B. filed a bill against A. for specific performance. A. swore, & it was not denied, that in 1827, he abandoned the contract, & that in 1829 it was considered broken off by both parties. It appeared, however, that B. had, in the meantime, the benefit of the credit for £220. The ct. dismissed the bill on the ground of the delay.—WILLIAMS v. WILLIAMS (1853), 17 Beav. 213; 51 E. r. Reasonable explanation of delay

924. Delay due to negotiations between parties.]

—Under two agreements for sale, one of which was to be completed on June 1, & the other on Sept. 29, both in 1846, disputes arose upon the title, and upon certain valuations incident to the purchase. The conveyances were engrossed on Jan. 4, 1847, & the vendor made two requisitions to the purchaser to complete the first on Jan. 11, & the second on Jan. 25, 1847, & intimated that non-compliance with the requisitions would be treated by the vendor as a breach of the agreements. The purchaser did not comply; but his solrs. reiterated claims to certain deductions & abatements. The disputes continued until after Feb. 13, 1847, when the purchaser filed a bill seeking specific performance:—Held: the circumstances & delay did not constitute a case of such default by pltf. as to preclude him from a title to specific performance; but, it appearing on the correspondence that the claims of deduction & abatements had not been the cause which delayed the completion of the purchase, but that want of means on the part of the purchaser to pay even so much purchase-money as, according to his view, he had to pay, was the cause of the delay up to & until after the date of the filing of the bill, the ct. held that the purchaser had so acted as to have lost the right to enforce a specific performance, & dismissed his bill.—*GEE v. Pltf. then filed a bill against deft. praying a decree for the specific performance of the agreement for the sale of the shares; the due registration of them in the name of deft. or his nominee; the rectification, if necessary, of the register of members of the co.; the execution by deft. of a proper indemnity to pltf. in respect of the shares; & that deft. might be ordered to pay the costs of the suit. Pltf. did not, at the hearing, succeed in proving the identity of the shares sold by him to deft. in respect of which he sought relief by his bill:—Held: the case was not one of specific performance at all, & under all the circumstances of it, the bill must be dismissed with costs.

950. Whether specific performance decreed — Contract to enter into partnership.]—As a general rule, the ct. will not decree specific performance of a contract for partnership. Where plff.'s appropriate remedy is an action at law, where there are no legal difficulties in his way which the ct. can remove, & where there has been no part performance, the ct. will not decree specific performance of a contract for partnership.—SCOTT v. RAYMENT (1868), L. R. 7 Eq. 112; 38 L. J. Ch. 48; 19 L. T. 481.

c. Agreement to assign mortgage.]—An agreement to assign a mtge. on land by way of absolute transfer or sale, or, as in the present case, to assign a mtge. on land in payment or part payment of other land sold by the proposed transferee to the proposed transferor, is a contract of which a ct. of equity would decree specific performance.—LUNCH v. SECT. IV. SECT. 16.

950 i. Whether specific performance decreed—Contract to enter into partnership.]—A ct. of equity will not decree specific performance of an agreement for a partnership unless the parties have engaged to execute some instrument of which execution can be ordered.—OGIER v. BOOTH (1883), 9

V. L. R. (Eq.) 160. —AUS.

950 ii. ——— ———.]—COLLINS v. SWINDLE (1857), 6 Gr. 282.—CAN.

950 iii. ——— ———.]—A parol agreement to form a partnership in the leasehold of a mine is enforceable against the owner of the leasehold who is one of the proposed partners.—WARREN & MACDONALD v. GALLAGHER, [1921] 2 W. W. R. 346.—CAN.

950 iv. ——— ———.]—The application of the doctrine of specific performance to partnerships is governed by the same rules as those which govern it in other cases. There are only two classes of cases in which specific performance of an agreement to enter into a partnership has been decreed; first, where the parties have agreed to execute some formal instrument which would confer rights that would not exist unless it was executed; secondly, where there has been an agreement which has come to an end to carry on a joint adventure, & the decree that the agreement is valid, prefaced by the declaration that the contract ought to be specifically performed, is made merely as the foundation of a decree for an account.—

duced, & under these circumstances the remedy did not lie in damages only, but that the son, though not entitled to specific performance, was entitled to other equitable relief as having become a partner in equity.—*BYRNE v. 954. ———.] — Deft. agreed, in writing, to take shares in a joint stock co., which were transferable, “& to execute the deed of settlement when required.”

Specific performance was refused.

I am, however, satisfied that this is not such a contract as a ct. of equity can enforce. It is a contract to become a partner in a partnership of which, according to the terms of the deed, deft. could cease to be a partner within fourteen days. I entertain no doubt that this ct. will not enforce the specific performance of a contract to enter into a partnership, which, so far as deft. is concerned, he may dissolve immediately afterwards (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*SHEFFIELD GAS CONSUMERS' CO. v. 955. ———.] — There are, however, many cases in which specific performance of a contract for a partnership has been refused. But the ground upon which those cases have been decided is not that a contract for a partnership is in itself such a contract as a ct. of equity will not specifically enforce, but that the contract being for a partnership, without any time fixed for its duration, if the partnership were completely formed, deft. could at his pleasure dissolve it the next moment, so as to leave pltf. in no better condition than if the partnership had never existed, & therefore, it would be idle & nugatory to compel the formation of such a partnership (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—*NEW BRUNSWICK & CANADA RAILWAY & LAND CO., LTD. v. 959. ——— Option to enter into partnership—Parties mortgagor & mortgagee—Option alleged clog on equity of redemption.]—On Apr. 23, 1896, an agreement was entered into between pltf. & deft., by which pltf. agreed to lend deft. £5,000 which was to be secured by a first mtge. of a ship belonging to deft., & was to be made payable six months from the date of the mtge. If interest was regularly paid pltf. were not to call in, & deft. was not to compel them to receive, the principal before the expiration of two years from the date of the mtge. If at any time within two years from Apr. 23, 1896, pltf. should elect to enter into partnership with deft., they were to be at liberty to do so, in which case they were to relieve deft. from payment of the mtge. money, & transfer the ship free from the mtge. for the purposes of the partnership. The capital, of which the ship was to form part, was to belong to pltf. & deft. in equal shares. On July 4, 1896, deft. executed a statutory mtge. of the ship to pltf. Pltf., did not within the two years elect to enter into partnership with deft., & no part of the £5,000 was paid. On June 27, 1898, deft. executed a mtge. to pltf. of some wharves as a further security for £2,000, part of the £5,000. By this deed deft. covenanted for the repayment of the £2,000 on Dec. 27, 1898, & there was a proviso for redemption upon payment on that day.

On July 9, 1898, another agreement was entered into between pltf. & deft. It contained a recital of the agreement of Apr. 23, 1896, & of the mtges. of July 4, 1896, & June 27, 1898; a recital that pltf. had applied to deft. for repayment of the £5,000, & that he was unable to repay it; & that he had requested them to extend the term of two years for a further period of five years, which they had agreed to do upon the terms thereafter appearing. It was then agreed & declared that, if at any time within the further period of five years pltf. should elect to enter into partnership with deft., they should be at liberty to do so, in which case pltf. were to release deft. from payment of the £5,000, & to transfer the ship free from the mtge. for the purposes of the partnership. The capital of the partnership, of which the ship was to form part, was to belong to pltf. & deft. in equal shares. On Feb. 24, 1900, pltf. gave notice in writing to deft. that they elected to enter into partnership with him. He refused to allow them to do so; & they thereupon brought an action to compel specific performance of the contract constituted by the agreement of July 9, 1898, & the notice of Feb. 24, 1900, or, in the alternative, payment of damages for breach of contract, in which case pltf. claimed the right to enforce their securities for the £5,000 & interest. Deft. alleged that the agreement of July 9, 1898, was invalid because it clogged the equity of redemption; & by a counterclaim he asked that that agreement might be delivered up to be cancelled, & a declaration that he was entitled to redeem the securities:—Held: the mtge. of June 27 & the agreement of July 9, 1898, were separate & independent transactions, & the fairness of the agreement of July 9 not being impeached, there was no reason why the mtgor. &

—(1) A., C. & E. were partners in trade, without any written agreement. A. died, & his exors. continued the business with C. & E. C. then died, & his exors. & the exors. of A. still continued the business with E. An agreement was entered into between the exors. of A., of the one part, the exors. of C., of the second part, & E., of the third part, by which the exors. of A. had the option of buying the shares of E. & of the exors. of C., or to sell the shares of A. under certain terms. The exors. of A. elected to purchase. Deft. agreed to buy pltf.'s interest in consideration of a certain annuity which was based upon the estimated profits of the business, & was to commence from the date of the last settlement of accounts, & to be in lieu of profits from that date. Pltf. afterwards agreed to purchase deft.'s interest, upon the same terms in all respects as he was to sell. Before the sale was carried out, the partnership accounts were taken, & it was found to be more advantageous to deft. to take the profits of the business from the last settlement of accounts up to the date of the agreement than to take the stipulated annuity from the same period. Pltf. filed his bill for specific performance, upon the footing of the annuity being payable from the date of the last settlement of accounts, in lieu of profits:—Held: when the position of the contracting parties was reversed, the stipulation as to the date of the commencement of the annuity formed no part of the contract, & it being for the advantage of deft., she was entitled to take the profits instead of the annuity up to the date of the agreement.—BONVILLE v. BONVILLE (1860), 3 L. T. 164; 6 Jur. N. S. 414.

962. — —.]—In an action for specific performance by deft. of a contract for the purchase of pltf.'s share as a partner in a firm constituted under articles of partnership, dated May 19, 1899, it appeared that, the business proving unsuccessful, pltf. in June, 1900, desired to withdraw, & this was agreed to by the other partners on the understanding that he left his capital in the business for two or three years. Deft. then offered to purchase pltf.'s share, & a correspondence ensued which, it was alleged by pltf., disclosed a binding contract to purchase for £175. This deft. denied, & alleged that all he offered to purchase was the share of the assets & profits free from liabilities:—Held: on the evidence that there was a binding contract to purchase the share for £175.

Specific performance decreed accordingly, with an express covenant to indemnify.—DODSON v. DOWNEY, [1901] 2 Ch. 620; 70 L. J. Ch. 854; 85 L. T. 273; 50 W. R. 57; 45 Sol. Jo. 739.

One of four partners offered his shares to the other three collectively, one of whom to his knowledge would not purchase. The remaining two declared their willingness to accept, & were told that no offer was made to them:—Held: the offer to the three enured for the benefit of the two, & specific performance decreed accordingly.—*HOMFRAY v. Pltf. consented to the terms proposed, & the marriage took place; but deft. subsequently conveyed the property by deed to a third person. In an action to recover damages for breach of contract:—Held: where a proposal in writing to leave property by will, made to induce a marriage, was accepted, & the marriage took place on the faith of it, if the proposal related to a defined piece of real property the ct. had power to decree a conveyance of that property after the death of the person making the proposal against all who claim under him as volunteers.—SYNGE v. 968. —.]—The donee of a general testamentary power of appointment over a fund borrowed a sum of money &, as security for the loan, covenanted with the lender that he would make a will appointing that the loan should be a first charge on the fund, & that he would not revoke the will. He made a will accordingly, & died:—Held: the covenant was ineffectual to bind the fund, &, notwithstanding that the will was made in pursuance of the covenant, the lender was a volunteer as against testator's general creditors, & therefore took subject to the rule that the exercise by will of a general power of appointment made the property which was the subject of the power assets for the payment of the debts of the appointor; consequently, he was not entitled to priority as regards the fund over the other creditors.

A contract to leave by will on the part of one who is merely donee of a testamentary power of appointment cannot be enforced by a judgment or decree for specific performance (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).—Re LAWLEY, ZAISER v. The execution of the former will was proved as alleged:—Held: this was not such part performance as to take the case out of Stat. Frauds, for the execution of the former will was the act of the person whose estate it was sought to charge, & not of the person seeking to enforce the contract, &, moreover, did

976. Agreement contained in proper order.]—A judge's order giving liberty to sign judgment, with a stay of execution in the event of certain conditions being performed, is not an agreement to perform those conditions; & even if the terms are ordered substantively to be performed, the remedy for default is in the ct. where the order was made, & not by a bill for specific performance.

Therefore, where shipbuilders had built a ship according to contract, & retained her by virtue of their lien for the balance of price unpaid, & had, in an action, obtained by consent a judge's order for the amount, with a stay of execution in case defts. should pay half & give a mtge. on the ship for the remainder, to a bill alleging these facts, & that the retainer of the ship involved great

The protector having died, the purchaser applied to the vendor to execute a disentailing deed to enlarge the base fee into a fee simple.—Held: Fines & Recoveries Act, 1833 (c. 74), s. 47, does not interfere with the jurisdiction of the ct. to decree against a tenant in tail specific performance of a contract for disentailment entered into by him, but only prevents the ct. from treating the contract as being in equity a disposition taking effect under the Act so as to bind the issue in tail & remainderman.—BANKES v. 982. Agreement to demolish buildings—Alleged public nuisance.]—About 40 bungalows of 2 or 3 rooms apiece constructed on footings above the level of the ground had been erected for occupation in the spring & summer months on some 11 acres of low lying land between a seawall & the sea without notice to the rural district council. They were erected on separate sites or plots, let at weekly rents. There were also a considerable number of tents on these sites. The land lay below the level of high tides, & no system of drainage was practicable. Sets of closets at different parts of the land were erected for men & women respectively & their contents were removed & emptied on land at a distance from the residences. The water supply was from standpipes. In an action by the A.-G. at the relation of the rural district council for an injunction to restrain defts. from continuing an alleged public nuisance, & from continuing to maintain the bungalows in contravention of bye-laws & from erecting more, & by the rural district council for specific performance of an agreement to take down existing bungalows:—Held: whilst it was a proper matter for investigation, plths. had on the evidence adduced failed to establish that the encampment was a nuisance to the public health. Overcrowding had not been proved. The sanitary arrangements were not so insufficient as to make the conditions insanitary. The bungalows showed no signs of damp, & there was a substantial surface of dry soil all over the camp. Smells from ditches were much exaggerated and were not a substantial danger to health. The nuisance suggested as arising from the mode of emptying the contents of the closets into the ground even taken in conjunction with the rest of the evidence was not made out. No injunctions would be granted and no specific performance ordered of the agreement to take down existing bungalows.—A.-G. & WIRRAL RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. KERR & BALL (1914), 12 L. G. R. 1277.

987. Proceedings on vendor & purchaser summons—To dispense with action for specific performance.]—The purchaser of a farm, consisting in part of 400 acres of heath land, took the objection that a title was not shown to the soil of the heath land, but only to rights of pasturage over it. The vendors took out a summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), asking that it might be declared that the purchaser's objections & requisitions were sufficiently answered. Affidavits were filed on both sides, & the deponents were cross-examined. The Master of the Rolls rejected the affidavits & cross-examination, on the ground that evidence by affidavit upon requisitions as to title under the Act ought not to be given unless required by the judge:—Held: the evidence ought to have been admitted, for, on a proceeding under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78) the parties are in the same position as they would have been under a reference as to title in a suit for specific performance.

I have always considered that the Act was intended to enable the ct. to decide in a summary way, without a specific performance suit, such questions as whether a requisition has been sufficiently answered according to the practice of conveyancers, whether a requisition is precluded by the conditions, & the like, but not to enable the ct. to try in this way disputed questions of fact (JAMES, L.J.).—Re BURROUGHS, LYNN & SEXTON (1877), 5 Ch. 988. — Whether bar to action for specific performance.]—A purchaser who has availed himself of the provisions of Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 75), & has thereby obtained an order on summons which has disposed of every objection which he thought fit to raise, & under which the vendor has been ordered to make compensation, is not entitled to bring an action, for specific performance of the contract for sale & damages. If a vendor does not comply with the order made on the vendor & purchaser summons, the purchaser should apply in chambers to get it enforced.—THOMPSON v. RINGER (1880), 44 L. T. 507; 29 W. R. 520.

989. Action for rescission—Motion for specific performance of part.]—A contract for sale of leasehold land provided that the purchaser should be let into possession on payment of part of the purchase-money, & should then pay rent & other outgoings, & perform the covenants & pay the costs of a certain fence. The purchaser was let into possession pursuant to the contract, but failed to pay the rent & other outgoings which the vendor was compelled to pay to prevent forfeiture of the land. The vendor commenced an action for rescission of the contract on the ground of misrepresentation, & moved in that action for an order that the purchaser should deliver up possession in default of his paying the moneys he had agreed to pay:—Held: the motion in effect asked for specific performance of part of the contract, & could not be allowed in an action for rescission.—*COOK v. Div. for trial before a judge & special jury. On a motion by defts. that the action might be heard before the Vice-Chancellor:—Held: under Ord. 36, rr. 3, 26, pltf. has no absolute right to have his action tried before a judge & jury, but the ct. or a judge has a discretion in the matter, & the action, being one for specific performance, was a proper one to be tried by a judge of the Ch. 994. ——— Production of indorsements on counsel's brief.]—A lunatic was tenant in tail in possession of an estate with remainder to his committee in tail. An agreement for making a road for the common benefit of the lunatics of two adjoining estates was entered into & approved by the Lords Justices on behalf of the lunatic, & as it was alleged, by the committee on her own behalf. The lunatic died without issue, & the agreement was not executed in his lifetime. After his death the committee refused to execute or perform the agreement. In a writ for specific performance she declined to produce the indorsements upon counsel's briefs, shorthand notes, & other documents relating to the proceedings in lunacy:—Held: she must produce them as showing whether she was bound by the agreement in respect of her own interest.—*Re BROWN, TYAS v. She entered into this contract as if she were a feme sole. A bill for specific performance was filed against her by the vendor. On his discovering from her answer that she was a married woman the bill was amended by making her husband a party. An allegation was introduced that she had separate property sufficient to answer the suit, & her trustee was also made a party:—Held: (1) the contract could be enforced against the separate estate; (2) the proper form of decree in such a case is to declare that the purchase-money, interest, & costs are chargeable on the married woman's separate estate, & the ct. does charge the same accordingly, & then to direct an inquiry of what the separate estate consists, & in whom the same is vested.—PICARD v. A lessee of premises covenanted with his underlessees of part, that in case he obtained an extension of the term or a renewal of his lease, he would give to the underlessees a like renewal or extension of his under term. A lease was subsequently taken from the ground landlord for an extended term in the name of a trustee for the separate use of the lessee's wife. The underlessees filed this bill against the lessee, his wife, & her trustee, charging that the extended lease had been taken in a trustee's name, in order to defeat their rights under the lessee's covenant, & praying that the wife & her trustee might be decreed to grant an underlease to the pl'ts. for the extended term:—Held: the relief sought could not be given, as the suit was virtually one for specific performance against persons who were not parties to the original covenant or contract to renew the underlease.—*LUMLEY v. A. In General.

1035. Sale of settled estate—Wife & children interested under marriage settlement.]—A husband reserves to himself a power by his marriage settlement, to sell the estate, which is settled, provided he settles other lands of a certain value to the same uses. He does settle other lands of that value accordingly, & then sells the lands which were originally purchased. The husband brings a bill against the purchaser in order to compel him to complete his purchase. The wife & children must be made defts. to this bill.—LAMPLUGH v. HEBDEN (1740), Barn. pursuant to mutual covenants to do so.—BELGO-CANADIAN REAL ESTATE CO., LTD. v. ALLAN (Man.), [1925] 1 D. L. R. 41; [1924] 3 W. W. R. 833.—CAN.

h. One of two owners of undivided half interests in land.]—Where the two owners of undivided half interests in land join in giving a stranger an option to purchase the whole interest & the option is accepted, one of them may compel specific performance, if the other, on refusing to join in the bringing of the action, is made a deft. thereto.—VITALY v. BRYAN (Alta.), [1926] 3 W. W. R. 785.—CAN.

k. Receiver.]—Where the receiver in a suit had, by order of ct., sold certain property in the suit, & had executed the contract of sale in his own name, a pliant praying for specific performance against the purchaser for refusing to complete the contract was admitted with the receiver as co-pltf., he having obtained leave to sue.—

m. Sale of land—Sub-purchaser on default of purchaser.]—A purchaser of land from A., whose only title to the land is under an agreement of purchase from B. the owner, may, after default of A. in carrying out his contract with B., on notifying B. of his interest & tendering the full amount owing to him by A. if it be refused, maintain an action against both A. & B. for specific performance & for an order that B. convey to him on payment of the amount due under his agreement with A.—SVEINSSON v. JENKINS (1911), 21 Man. L. R. 716.—CAN.

n. — Owner standing by when third person enters into contract.]—Where the owner of an estate stands by & allows a third person to appear as owner, & to enter into a contract as such, the owner will be decreed specifically to perform such contract.—DAVIS v. SNYDER (1850), 1 Gr. 134.—CAN.

o. — Executors & trustees.]—A vendor devised his estate to trustees, & on a division among the cestuis que trust, the trustees conveyed to one of them the sold property. These facts appeared on a bill by the purchaser against the grantee for specific performance. Defts. set up by answer that the exors. & trustees were necessary parties. The objection was 1041. — Sub-sales & purchases—Joinder of sub-vendor or sub-purchaser.]—Vendors, to their bill against their purchaser for specific performance of, or for rescinding the agreement, made a sub-purchaser a deft.; & the sub-purchaser afterwards filed a bill against his vendor for specific performance of his agreement, & made the original vendors defts.

A demurrer by the original vendors to the sub-purchaser's bill, was overruled on the ground that they had made him a deft. to their bill.—FENWICK v. BULMAN (1869), L. R. 9 Eq. 165; 21 L. T. 628; 18 W. R. 179.

1042. Sale by mortgagor — Mortgagee.]—No persons ought to be made parties to a suit for specific performance of a contract for the sale of an estate except the parties to the contract.

When a bill for specific performance is filed by a person who has contracted to purchase the absolute legal & equitable interest in a mtged. estate from the supposed owner of the equity of redemption, neither the mtgee. nor a person who claims an interest in the equity of redemption, but has not joined in the contract, can be made deft.; & the circumstance that the mtgee. does not object to being made a party, but requires the sanction of the person so claiming an interest in the equity of redemption before joining in the conveyance, does not make that person a proper party.—*TASKER v. t. Vendor's heir.]—The principle of the Droit de Retrait (as formerly existing in Jersey) is to place the person exercising the right in the same situation as the vendee; but by the law of Jersey the heir is not bound to perform the stipulations of an original contract where it is personal, where, therefore, a contract was of a mixed nature, the price of the purchase being to be paid partly in money & partly in services.—Held: such contract of the contract. A decree was made ordering specific performance, & that C. should execute a proper conveyance of the lands, & that such conveyance should contain a covenant by the S. co. to erect the station, & that trains should stop there for passengers & luggage. This conveyance was duly executed. Under Acts of Parliament of 1867 and 1873, confirming agreements between the S. co. & the L. S. W. co., the latter co. were empowered to take a lease for 1,000 years of the S. railway, & to work it, & were, during such lease, to be liable to all duties & obligations to which the S. co., if the Acts had not been passed, would be subject & liable. No station was erected. On bill filed by C. against both cos.:—Held: though the L. S. W. co. were necessary parties to the suit, no case whatever had been made out against them inasmuch as they were not bound either in law or in equity by the covenant entered into by the S. co. with C. to erect a station, but that they would be bound, when the station was made, to stop their trains there.—*CHURCHILL v. Deft. afterwards became bkpt. After the adjudication, & before the ct. had made any vesting order as to the copyholds, pltf. filed a bill alleging that deft. had been applied to & refused to perform his undertaking to execute a conveyance or to sign any mtge. of the copyholds, & praying for specific performance of the agreement. The assignees in bkpcy. were not made parties to the suit, bkpt. being sole deft. :—Held: the assignees in bkpcy. were necessary parties to the suit.—POOLE v. BURSSELL (1862), 6 L. T. 777; 8 Jur. D. Person claiming Interest in Subject-Matter of Contract.

1066. Whether proper parties.]—A bill was filed by a vendor against a purchaser; averring, that before completing the contract the purchaser had entered on the land, & praying a specific performance, & in the meantime an injunction to restrain deft. from entering on, or continuing to hold the premises :—Held: a tenant of the land contracted to be sold, is not a necessary party.

It is a new doctrine, that to a bill for a specific performance & injunction, you cannot get intermediate relief, without having before the ct. every person who may be affected by an injury committed on the subject-matter of the contract. The owner of an estate has agreed to sell it, whether to a railway co. or not is immaterial, & he seeks an equitable performance of that agreement; the co. have not paid the money, but have entered & are dealing with the property in a manner that may or may not affect the tenant; to say that pltf. cannot restrain this without bringing the tenant before the ct., is to exclude the jurisdiction of the ct. (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—ROBERTSON v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1839), 1 Ry. & Can. Cas. 459; 10 Sim. 314; 9 L. J. Ch. 17; 59 E. R. 635, L. C.

1067. —.]—A. entered into a written agreement with B. for the purchase of certain freehold premises. The agreement stipulated, "that, if any dispute should arise as to the title, the same should be submitted to a conveyancer, to be agreed upon by both parties; the objections to be stated in writing, within six months of the date of the agreement, to the solr. of the vendor; & in case he should be of opinion that a good title could not be made out, then either party should be at liberty to rescind the contract on two calendar months' notice after the opinion of counsel had been obtained." This agreement was entered into by A., at the request of C., which circumstance, however, was not known to B. By a subsequent agreement, A. agreed to sell the premises to C., upon the same terms etc. under which he had contracted to purchase of B. D., the mother of B., had a life estate in the premises, which circumstance, though known to B., & his solr., was not known to either A. or C. D. did not, in respect of her life estate, sanction the agreement. A. & C., as co-pltfs., filed their bill against B. & D. for specific performance of the original agreement. After that bill had been answered, but before either party had gone into evidence, A. died intestate, & C. then filed a bill of revivor & supplement against the original defts. & the heir-at-law & personal representatives of A. Upon those two bills, no answer to the latter having been filed, the parties joined issue :—Held: (1) A. & C. were not improperly co-pltfs. in the original bill, & after the former's death, the suit was properly revived by the latter; (2) C. was entitled to have specific performance of the agreement, with compensation in respect of D.'s life estate.—*NELTHORPE v. 1071. —.]—In 1861 pltf. was colonel, & deft. M. lieutenant-colonel of a volunteer rifle corps. Adjoining the premises occupied by deft. C. was a leasehold piece of land convenient for the regiment, which M. requested C. to purchase on its behalf, & C. bought it in 1861 for £500. In Mar. 1862, C. wrote to M., stating that he was willing to give the land to the regiment for the whole of the term held by him; the regiment was to observe all the covenants of the lease, to pay a merely nominal rent, & to level & prepare the ground suitably for drill. M. signed this letter, & had it stamped as if it were a mutual agreement, & paid the nominal rent for one year in advance. In June, 1864, he also executed a deed purporting to assign the land to himself, & deft. H. as trustees for the regiment. Shortly before this date pltf. & C. had entered into another agreement, by which the former was to purchase of the latter the said lands without reservation, except as to the disputed right claimed by M. in respect of the letter of Mar. 1862, & was to be at liberty to use C.'s name in all proceedings necessary for setting aside that letter, & any rights that might be claimed under it. In order to clear the title & carry out this agreement this bill was filed, alleging that the letter of Mar. 1862 had been obtained by M. from C. by concealment, surprise, & undue influence, & that C. had had no professional advice in the transaction, praying a declaration of the rights of the parties, that the letter, Mar. 1862, conveyed no estate or interest to M., & was merely a licence revocable at pleasure, & that it ought to be cancelled and that a specific performance of the last agreement might be decreed. Deft. C. did not resist, & at the hearing the judge decreed specific performance against him, but dismissed the bill with costs against M. & H.:—Held: the agreement, which in effect was the purchase of a right by pltf. to complain of the alleged fraud committed against C., savoured too much of maintenance for the ct. to enforce it; & further, that M. & H., as entire strangers to the agreement, & claiming under an adverse title to it, could not be parties to a suit for its specific performance.—*DE HOGHTON v. 1078. Reference to master as to rights of parties—Agreement to exercise power of appointment.]—C. being indebted to J., C.'s wife, who by a settlement was empowered to appoint certain estates, entered into a verbal agreement with J. that she should make her will, & exercise her power of appointment, by giving the property to J. to hold upon trust, in the first place, for the payment of the moneys due to him from his brother C. & subject thereto in trust for C. in fee. The appointment was stated to have been prepared upon that understanding, & was made with the concurrence of J. who agreed to take the property about to be settled upon those trusts. Upon the death of C.'s wife, the heir of J. having claimed the property, C. filed his bill for specific performance:—Held: there was sufficient evidence of an agreement to direct a reference to the master to ascertain the several parties' rights.—ROBINSON v. ROBINSON (1848), 10 L. T. O. S. 479.

1079. Rights of parties not co-extensive—Dependent upon conduct.]—(1) A railway co., having contracted with a party who, under a contract made some years previously, was a purchaser of land which the co. required for the railway, but who had not paid his purchase-money, & appeared for some time to have abandoned the possession of the land, filed their bill for specific performance against both the vendor & purchaser:—Held: as the purchaser was not, after the lapse of time & under the circumstances, entitled in equity to a decree for specific performance of the contract against the vendor, the bill must be dismissed as against him, with costs; & as against the purchaser, without costs.

(2) The rights of parties to agreements to enforce a specific performance in equity are not co-extensive; for their respective rights depend upon their conduct, & the conduct of one may give him the right to apply to the ct., while the conduct of the other may debar him from that right.—*SOUTH EASTERN RY. 1082. Claim for alternative relief—Against one defendant—In case relief not obtainable against other.]—A contract having been entered into by a firm of solrs. acting on behalf of their client, to pay pltf. certain sums of money, pltf. filed his bill against the client & the solrs., alleging that the client was bound by the contract, but that the client denied that he was so bound on the ground that the solrs. had no authority to enter into such contract; & the bill prayed specific performance by the client; or otherwise if it should appear that the solrs. were not authorised, then that the solrs. themselves might be declared personally liable to perform the same. A demurrer to the bill by the solrs. was allowed on the ground that pltf. did not himself allege that the client was not bound, & also, that alternative relief could not be prayed against one deft. in case relief could not be obtained against another deft.—*CLARK v. 1085. In default of defence—Necessity for affidavits to support statement of claim.—An action was brought by a vendor for specific performance of an agreement against a purchaser who was in possession. The statement of claim set out the agreement. Deft. had not put in any defence. A motion was made on behalf of pltf. for judgment in default of defence, the action being set down as a short cause. The agreement had not been proved ; but it was contended that deft., by making default in defence, had admitted the agreement as alleged, & that evidence of it was consequently unnecessary :—Held : the agreement must be duly verified by affidavit & the action was ordered to stand over for the purpose.—*HOLMES v. SUB-SECT. 4.—REFERENCE AS TO TITLE.

A. In General.

1110. Necessity for reference—General rule.]—JENKINS v. HILES, No. 1123, post.

1111. ———.]—Questions of title ought not, as a rule, to be discussed at the hearing of a suit for specific performance. They should be referred to chambers; but everything which affects the validity of the contract, or bears upon its enforcement, ought to be then disposed of. If, however, deft. at the hearing alleges that, through some mistake, the contract ought not to be enforced against him, that question must be then disposed of, although it may involve one of title.

Where a purchaser instituted a suit for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of an estate, & the question was whether the vendor was owner in fee, or had only a power of exchanging the estate:—Held: the question might be decided at the hearing without a reference as to the title.—HOOD v. OGLANDER (1865), 34 Beav. 513; 6 New Rep. 57; 34 L. J. Ch. 528; 12 L. T. 626; 11 Jur. N. S. 498; 13 W. R. 705; 55 E. R. 733.

u. Restraining parties from denying date of lease.]—A judgment for the specific performance of an agreement for a lease directed the lease to be ante-dated:—Held: the judgment should also restrain the parties, in any action on the lease, from averring that same was of any other date.—M'ILROY v., [1898] 1 I. R. 459.—IR.

1117. — Court asked to decide question of title — Title alone in dispute.]—(1) In a purchaser's suit for specific performance the ct. at the request of both parties, & on an assurance that the only question in dispute was one of title, which the ct. was asked to decide, made a declaration that deft. could show a good title without directing a reference as to title or the settlement of the conveyance at chambers.

(2) A devisee of real estate in trust for sale & who was also exor. of testator, disclaimed the trusts & renounced probate of his will. The devisee was also a mtgee. of part of testator's real estate. As such mtgee. he joined with testator's heir-at-law & legal personal representative in conveying the mtged. property to deft. in fee. Deft. afterwards contracted for the sale of it in fee absolutely to pltf. On a bill for specific performance of the contract:—Held: deft. could make a good title to the property, without having new trustees of the will appointed, & as pltf. had taken an untenable objection he was ordered to pay costs until the hearing.—AUSTIN v. MARTIN (1861), 29 Beav. 523; 4 L. T. 817; 7 Jur. N. S. 871; 9 W. R. 674; 54 E. R. 730.

1120. Failure to prosecute action—Whether action dismissable pending reference.]—DORIN v. HARVEY (1845), 15 Sim. 49; 6 L. T. O. S. 42; 9 Jur. 648; 60 E. R. 534.

1121. — Pending a reference of title ordered upon motion, in a suit for specific performance, deft. cannot, under Ord. 114 of May, 1845, dismiss the bill for want of prosecution.—COLLINS v. GREAVES (1817), 5 Hare, 596; 67 E. R. 1048.

1122. — A reference as to title was made before hearing. A motion to dismiss for want of prosecution pending the reference was refused.—GREGORY v. SPENCER (1848), 11 Beav. 143; 50 E. R. 771.

B. When Ordered.

(a) In General.

1123. In vendor's action.]—General rule that the ct. will not decide upon a title without a reference to the master, unless unequivocally, & without fraud or surprise, waived; pltf. seeking a specific performance of a contract being entitled to the opportunity of making out a better title before the master; & deft. having a right to farther inquiry, beyond the objections arising on the abstract, upon the principle, that the bill seeks relief beyond the law.—JENKINS v. HILES (1802), 6 Ves. 646; 31 E. R. 1238, L. C.

1124. — Under the usual power of sale contained in an indenture of mtge. a contract was entered into by defts. to purchase the property of the mtgees. before the three months notice required by the mtge. deed to be given to the mtgor. had elapsed. Defts. refused to complete the purchase in consequence of the non-concurrence of the mtgor.; & on bill filed for the specific performance of the contract the ct. declined to decide as to the necessity of such concurrence as the time for making a valid contract had not when it was entered into arrived; & the only order made was, that the title should be investigated.—FORD v. HEELY (1857), 3 Jur. N. S. 1116; 5 W. R. 516.

1127. — Necessity for proving original abstract incomplete.]—If, in a suit by the vendor for specific performance of a contract of this description, the purchaser desires to have an inquiry inserted in the decree as to whether a complete abstract was delivered & good title shown, the burden of proof lies upon him to show that the original abstract delivered was incomplete.—WARD v. GRIMES (1863), 8 L. T. 782; 9 Jur. N. S. 1097; 11 W. R. 794.

1128. Freedom of property from tithe charges.]—No reference of title upon a question whether the estate was tithe free, having been sold as such.—WALLINGER v. HILBERT (1815), 1 Mer. 104; 35 E. R. 615, L. C.

1131. Contract by vendor to make good title.]—In an agreement for the purchase of an estate, the purchaser stipulated to pay the residue of the purchase-money on a day specified, "upon the vendor's making a good title, or, otherwise, if such title should not be then completed, upon his executing a bond to complete such title, & to convey the estate as soon as the same could be completed:" the vendor is bound to show a good title; & till a good title is shown, the purchaser, though he had entered into possession, is not bound to pay the purchase-money. I think, therefore, the question as to the title was properly referred to the master (LORD LYNDHURST, C.).—CLARKE v. FAUX (1827), 3 Russ. 320; 38 E. R. 596; sub nom. CLARKE v. VAUX, 6 L. J. 1133. Sale of shares.]—A vendor by public auction of shares in a railway co., incorporated by Act of Parliament, at the request of the purchaser, who had paid his purchase-money, executed a transfer to a third party, who did not accept the transfer, or register himself as a shareholder. On a bill filed by the vendor against the purchaser for a specific performance, the ct. directed the usual reference as to title.—SHAW v. FISHER (1848), 2 De G. & Sm. 11; 5 Ry. & Can. 1136. Terms of contract excluding reference.]—Deft. sold & conveyed to pltf. some undivided shares in various properties. Disputes afterwards arose as to what shares had been purchased. They agreed to settle all these disputes, & signed a written agreement that pltf. should pay deft. £9500, & that deft. should execute such deeds as pltf. should require for the conveyance of the estates. Upon a bill for specific performance:—Held: deft. was not bound to deduce any title to the property.—GODSON v. TURNER (1851), 15 Beav. 46; 51 E. R. 453.

1137. Compulsory purchase—Title not investigated.]—(1) The ct. will not, in a suit on the part of a landowner against a railway co. for specific performance of an agreement to take lands, make a decree where there has been no investigation of title, but will refer it to chambers to see whether a good title can be made

(2) Where there has been great delay on the part of the company, the ct. will reserve costs specially.—GUNSTON v. EAST GLOUCESTERSHIRE RY. CO. (1868), 18 L. T. 8.

1138. Common mistake.]—Deft. contracted to buy from pltf. freeholds & leaseholds under the condition that he should assume that E., who died in 1841, was seised in fee of the freeholds, & should not "require the production of or investigate or make any objection in respect of the prior title" thereto. He accepted the title, & before completion contracted to sell the lands, with a farm of his own adjoining the freeholds, to a sub-purchaser, who discovered, from an inclosure award prior in date to 1841, as to the effect of which both pltf. & deft. had been under a misapprehension, that the freeholds had never belonged to E. but at the date of the contract belonged to deft. himself in fee, subject to a leasehold interest in pltf. Deft. then refused to complete, & pltf. filed her bill for specific performance, stating that she too had discovered that part of the lands she had contracted to sell as leaseholds belonged to her in fee simple, & offering mutual waiver or compensation:—Held: deft. was not precluded by the condition or the acceptance of title from taking the objection, & the ct. could not decree specific performance; but, although there was no fraud yet, there being a common mistake, deft. was entitled to an inquiry as to the title to the freeholds at the date of the contract.—JONES v. 1140. To determine right of purchaser to compensation.]—Under an Electric Lighting Confirmation Order Act, it was directed that a co. should sell, & a local authority might, & should, purchase that part of the undertaking & business of the co. which was situate in the area of the local authority. After a notice to treat had been given, the co. incurred a considerable amount of further capital expenditure in respect of the undertaking. The purchase price having been left to arbn. & the arbitrators referring it to an umpire, the umpire in fixing the purchase price considered that the adjustment of the rights of the parties in respect of such capital expenditure did not come within the award, & fixed the price without considering it. On an action brought by the co. for specific performance, it was submitted by the local authority that the co. could not show a good title to certain property comprised in the purchase. At the time of the hearing of the action the local authority were endeavouring to obtain leave to borrow the purchase-money on the security of their rates:—Held: (1) there must be an inquiry as to the title of the co. to the property sold, for the purpose of seeing if the local authority were entitled to any compensation. (2) A decree for specific performance would be made in favour of the co., & a date fixed for completion; with liberty to apply to extend the date.—METROPOLITAN ELECTRIC SUPPLY CO., LTD. v. 1156. What amounts to waiver—Delay in completion.]—On an agreement to purchase a leasehold interest, the purchasers, who had previously bought the reversion, subject to the vendor's lease, from the lessor, the freeholder, investigated & accepted the vendor's title, & prepared & engrossed the surrender. They subsequently delayed completion upon the discovery of an ancient lease which they alleged to be still outstanding, & to override the lessor's title. 1157. Necessity for pleading.]—CLIVE v. BEAUMONT, No. 1103, ante.

1158. ——— Where waiver inferred from facts pleaded.]—Deft., a married woman, having separate estate & living apart from her husband, entered into a contract to take a leasehold house for a term of seven or fourteen years. The agreement being reduced into writing by the lessor's agent, was, after alterations by deft.'s solrs., signed by the agent & left with deft., who retained but did not sign it. In letters which she & her solrs. wrote, it was treated as an agreement between the parties, & she entered into possession of the house:—Held: inasmuch as deft. had by occupying & continuing to occupy the house, & by other acts, adopted the agreement, a decree directing a reference as to the lessor's title could not be sustained, although it was not expressly alleged in the bill that deft. had waived the production of the lessor's title.—*GASTON v. C. Time for Reference.

1159. Interlocutory order — Before hearing — Necessity for consent.]—This ct. will not, on a bill for specific performance, make an interlocutory order to refer a title, the validity of which is denied by the answer, and depends on facts, to the Deputy Remembrancer, until the cause is brought to a hearing, without consent.—BOWYER v. BRIGHT (1816), 3 Price, 300; 146 E. R. 268.

1160. Motion at commencement of action.]—A motion may be made on a bill for a specific performance, for a reference as to the title, & whether a title was shown prior to the filing of the bill.—ANON. (1818), 3 Madd. 495; 56 E. R. 587.

1161. After decree.]—When, in consequence of the contract itself having been disputed, an action for specific performance is heard before there has been a reference as to the title, judgment will at once be given for specific performance, & an inquiry ordered whether a good title can be made.—FLOOD v. PRITCHARD (1879), 40 L. T. 873.

D. Form and Scope of Reference.

1162. Reference in general terms.]—JENKINS v. HILES, No. 1123, ante.

1163. ———.]—Upon a bill filed by the vendor for the specific performance of a contract, it appeared that deft., in the course of correspondence between the solrs., & upon a case stated on his part for the opinion of counsel, expressed himself willing to accept the title if a particular objection then referred to were removed. That objection not being removed, the bill was filed, & the ct. ruled that the reference to the master as to the title must be in general terms, & not confined to the particular objection.—LESTURGEON v. MARTIN (1834), 3 My. & K. 255; 40 E. R. 97.

1164. ———.]—When money in ct. is subject to a trust for investment in land, & the tenant for life enters into a provisional contract for the purchase of an estate, subject to conditions of sale, the ct. makes a general reference as to the title, & not whether a good title can be made subject to the conditions of sale.—MEYRICK v. LAWS (1864), 34 Beav. 58; 55 E. R. 554.

Reference to particular matters.]—See Sub-sect. 4, D. (b), post.

1165. Extension of terms of reference—By subsequent motion—After order for reference made—Delivery of abstract.]—A reference having been made as to title on one motion, the party cannot afterwards, by another motion, have a reference as to the delivery of the abstract.—HYDE v. WROUGHTON (1818), 3 Madd. 280; 56 E. R. 512.

1166. ——— Time when title first shown.]—The ct. will not, on motion, after an order for a reference, direct the master to inquire, if he found that a good title can be made to premises, the subject of a suit for specific performance, when such good title could first be made. Such direction should be applied for at the hearing, when the ct. is in possession of the merits.—LUBIN v. LIGHTBODY (1820), 8 Price, 606; 146 E. R. 1310.

1167. ——— Matters set up in defence against execution of contract.]—In a suit by a vendor for specific performance, the decree at the original hearing having directed merely a reference of title, the ct. will not, at the hearing on further directions, enter into the consideration of any other objection which the answer had set up against the execution of the contract.—LE GRAND v. WHITEHEAD (1826), 1 Russ. 309; 38 E. R. 120.

(b) To What Matters Directed.

i. In General.

1168. All matters concerning title.]—On a reference of title on a bill for a specific performance, the reference may extend to all that concerns the title, but not to other matters; it may be extended, therefore, to inquire, whether it appeared by the abstract in the pleadings mentioned, that a good title could be made.—JENNINGS v. HOPTON (1816), 1 Madd. 211; 56 E. R. 79.

1169. ———.]—In suits for specific performance between vendor & purchaser, everything connected with the title may be the subject of the usual reference upon motion as to the vendor's title, & may be added by way of inquiry to that reference; but the ct. will not allow any inquiry to be added as to matters which have no reference to the title, & which are not admitted by the answer.

It was directed by Sir John Leach, that in every order by which it was referred to the Master to inquire whether a good title could be made, there should be inserted a direction that, if the Master should find a good title could be made, he should inquire when it was first shown: & so the order is now always made, unless for some reason stated at the time, & by the express direction of the ct., the inquiry as to the time when a good title was first shown, should be omitted (LORD LONGDALE, M.R.).—BENNETT v. REES (1836), 1 Keen, 405; 5 L. J. Ch. 360; 48 E. R. 362.

1178. ———.]—In Nov. 1861, S. agreed to purchase of pltf. "the mill property, including six cottages in E. village." Pltf. being, at the date of the contract, only equitably entitled under an agreement for sale from the beneficial owners, stipulated by parol that he should only be bound to show such title as he was himself entitled to require from his vendors; it was also agreed that all the property, part of which was then copyhold, should be sold as freehold. The copyholds had as to a moiety been devised by testator to his daughter B. in fee, but were not surrendered to the uses of the will. After his death his two daughters, A. & B. were admitted as coparceners, & the subsequent enfranchisement was made to them, their heirs, & assigns. After the enfranchisement, A. being out of the jurisdiction, an order was obtained upon petition, under Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60), s. 9, vesting her outstanding legal estate in trustees for B. Negotiations in respect of the title were carried on between the parties for three years, in the course of which the purchaser objected to the above order on the ground that it was ineffectual, & that a fresh order should be obtained under Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60), s. 10. This was the principal requisition, & the only one with which pltf. refused to comply. In Dec. 1864, the purchaser gave notice that unless, within one week, pltf. would comply, or consent to comply, with the requisitions sent therewith, he should require a good & marketable title to the whole property, & in default of such title being shown within five weeks, he should treat the contract as rescinded. After some further negotiation pltf. in Aug. 1865, filed his bill for specific performance:—Held: the notice to rescind was a waiver of all delay up to that time, & an admission that the contract was then in force; the vesting order had been properly made under Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60), s. 9, A. being "solely seised upon trust" for B. both under the admission & under the enfranchisement; consequently, the notice to rescind was bad, being also unreasonable in point of time. Decree made for specific performance, with a declaration that the deft. was bound to accept such title as pltf. could require from his vendors; the inquiry in chambers to be limited to such requisitions as were specified in an opinion of counsel which had been sent to pltf. in June, 1863, & subject to which the title had then been accepted, & the purchaser was ordered to pay the costs of the suit up to the hearing.

Laches will not be imputed to a vendor on account of delay, however long, in filing his bill for specific performance, where negotiations respecting the title have been going on the whole time.—McMURRAY v. SPICER (1868), L. R. 5 Eq. 527; 37 L. J. Ch. 505; 18 L. T. 116; 16 W. R. 332.

1180. Objections abandoned by purchaser before action.]—Possession by a purchaser given or permitted by a vendor without receipt of rents & profits by the purchaser, does not render the purchaser liable to pay the purchase-money into ct.; but he will be ordered to give up possession or to pay the purchase-money. If the common decree for specific performance & for an inquiry for title be made, the purchaser may raise objections which he abandoned before the suit, & the ct. will not add any inquiry on the subject to the decree, or direct the chief clerk to state special circumstances. On further consideration the ct. will not, on the question of costs or interest, look at any evidence but that in the cause, & not at the proceedings & evidence in chambers or an interlocutory motion.—CURLING v. AUSTIN (1862), 2 Drew. & Sm. 129; 10 W. R. 682; 62 E. R. 570.

1187. —.]—A., in Dec. 1812, agreed to become the purchaser of a reversionary estate; B., the vendor, agreed, on or before May 1 then next, to make out a good title. A. was to be entitled to the rents & profits of all & singular the messuages, etc., from May 1 then next, or from such time as the purchase should be completed. A. had at the time of making the agreement paid part of the purchase-money, & he promises, for the considerations aforesaid, that he would, on May 1, pay the remainder as & for the absolute purchase, etc. A. further agreed to pay all & every such sum & sums of money for the increased value of the messuages, etc., by or in consequence of the deaths of any persons for whose life or lives any of the messuages were theretofore granted. The purchase was not completed for a very considerable period. The vendor filed his bill for a specific performance. The ct. made a decree, referring it to the master to inquire when the vendor could make a good title, & how much the value of the estate had been increased by the deaths of the persons on whose lives any portions of it were holden:—Held: this decree was correct, & the contract did not give the vendor a right to demand payment for the increased value of the estate from the wearing as well as the dropping of lives.—*BROOKE v. ordered the usual reference to the master, & directed, that if a good title could not be made, the master should state when it was first shown that a good title could not be made, with liberty to state special circumstances as to the time when it was first shown that a good title could or could not be made to the estate contracted to be sold.—*MARTIN v. No agreement was executed or signed, but in the letter which passed between A. & the agent, A. consented to take the lease, & added, "the other articles which you included in your list, I will also take at a valuation":—Held: as deft. disputed the contract, the ct. would only allow the common reference as to title, without the inquiry when a good title could be shown.—*MORRIS v. (a) In General.

1197. Action against vendor for recovery of estate—Whether report suspended until decision.]—The master's report on a reference of title, will not be suspended, to wait the decision of a suit commenced against the vendor for the recovery of part of the estate, but the two suits may be heard together.—OSBALDISTON v. ASKEW (1821), 2 Jac. & W. 539; 37 E. R. 734, L. C.

1198. Re-opening of case after master's report—Discovery of misrepresentation.]—Matter discovered after a decree has been made, though not capable of being used as evidence of any thing which was previously in issue in the cause, but constituting an entirely new issue, may be the subject of a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review. A party may obtain leave to file, & may file a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, though he has not performed the decree in the original cause, if the proceedings under the decree are not at the time in such a state as to enable the adverse party to bring him into default for not having done what the decree orders. A party will not be allowed, except under very special circumstances, to file a bill of review or a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, or to prosecute it after he has obtained leave to file it, unless he performs at the proper time all that the decree commands him to do. A purchaser, who was deft. in a suit for specific performance, did not in his answer mention any warranty given, or representation made by the vendor, & insisted merely that a good title was not shown; a reference on the question of title was ordered; the master reported in favour of the title, & a decree for specific performance was pronounced. After the order of reference had been made, deft. discovered that the timber on the estate, which constituted its principal value, was much less in quantity than it had been represented to be in a statement, the accuracy of which was alleged to have been warranted at the sale; but the fact of such warranty having been given was strongly controverted; under these circumstances leave was given to file a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, in order that deft. might have the same benefit of the alleged warranty, as if he had originally insisted upon it in his answer. After leave given, he has a right to file such a bill without having previously paid the purchase-money which the decree commands him to pay, if the time, at which the adverse party in the due execution of the decree, can compel payment, has not yet arrived:—Semble: as soon as that time arrives, he will not be allowed to proceed with his bill, until he pays the purchase-money to the vendor; & such payment will not be dispensed with, nor will payment of the money into ct. be allowed to be substituted for it, though the sum be very large.—PARTRIDGE v. USBORNE (1828), 5 Russ. 195; 7 L. J. O. S. Ch. 49; 38 E. R. 1000, L. C.

1200. Report conditionally in favour—Concurrence of third party necessary.]—Bill by purchaser for specific performance, ordered too be dismissed for defect of title, a necessary party not choosing to concur in conveying. Order to dismiss, without costs, it being against the principles of the ct. to order deft. to pay pltf. his costs.—LEWIS v. LOXHAM (1817), 3 Mer. 429; 36 E. R. 165.

1201. ———.]—When a necessary party to a title, is neither in law or equity under the control of the vendor, the master ought to report against the title, unless there is produced to him a legal or equitable obligation on the part of the stranger to join in the conveyance.

If the master should report against the title, & at the hearing, upon further directions, the vendor had cured the defect, the ct. would then compel the purchaser to take the title, although it would not suspend the contract with a view to a future proceeding to perfect the title (LEACH, V.-C.).—*ESDAILE v. A decree was made for specific performance & reference as to title. The master found in favour of the trustee; & upon exceptions, the purchaser contended that the rule as to the concurrence of the cestuis que trust being one for their protection, it was a breach of trust to stipulate that they should not concur; but the ct. held the point concluded by the decree.

1227. Replacement of deposit by vendor's solicitor—Deposit paid away without concurrence of purchaser—Mortgagee refusing to join in conveyance.]—On a contract for purchase, a part of the purchase-money was paid as a "deposit" to the vendor's solr., who paid it away at the desire of the vendor, without the concurrence of the purchaser. This created a difficulty in completing the purchase, as a mtgee. of the estate would not join in the conveyance without payment to him of the deposit. In a suit by the purchaser for specific performance, the solrs. were declared liable to make good the money.—WIGGINS v. LORD (1841), 4 Beav. 30; 49 E. R. 248.

PART V. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 6.

l. General rule.]—The circumstance that a purchaser is not entitled to specific performance is by no means conclusive against his right to a return of the deposit. If, having regard to the terms of the contract, he is justified in refusing to accept the title, which the vendor is able to give, he is entitled to a refund of the deposit.—IBRAHIMBAI v. FLETCHER (1896), 1 L. R. 21 Bom. 827.—IND.

m. Return of part of purchase-money—No good title shown.]—Where a bill by a purchaser for specific performance is dismissed because a good title cannot be shown, the ct. will order a sum paid on account of the purchase-money to be returned to the purchaser, & in default, give him a lien therefor on the estate agreed to be sold; but, unless the vendor has been guilty of fraud, the bill will be dismissed without costs.—HURD v. ROBERTSON (1859), 7 Gr. 142.—CAN.

n. Repayment of moneys paid on account—Default in payment of instalments.]—Pltf. agreed to purchase from defts. certain lands for the sum of $500, payable as follows: $60 cash & $20 per month thereafter till the full amount should be paid. The agreement provided that time should be of the essence of the contract & contained the usual proviso for cancellation by notice in case of default fully set out in the judgment. Pltf. having made default in payment of six monthly instalments, defts. gave notice of cancellation pursuant to the agreement & afterwards sold & conveyed the land to a third party. About two & a half years after the last payment by pltf., he brought this action for specific performance, or, in the alternative, for a return of the money he had paid:—Held: the effect of the default, the giving of the notice & the continued default was, at common law, to cancel the contract & unless equity would relieve, to enable the vendor to retain both the land & the money paid, & that pltf., having deliberately refrained from continuing his monthly payments for over two years & a half because the land diminished in value & he was in doubt whether it "would do him any good" to pay any more instalments, was not entitled to any equitable relief, either by way of specific performance or against the forfeiture provided for by the contract, & therefore could not recover the amount he had paid.—*DALZIEL v. SUB-SECT. 7.—PAYMENT INTO COURT.

A. In General.

1228. Deposit—Order against auctioneer.]—Auctioneer, on motion of vendor, ordered to pay deposit into ct., minus his charges & expenses; & vendee restrained by injunction from proceeding in his action against the auctioneer for the deposit; in which action he had obtained a judgment for the whole amount of the deposit.—ANNESLEY v. MUGGRIDGE (1816), 1 Madd. 593; 56 E. R. 218.

1229. ———.]—Bill against vendee & auctioneer, praying a specific performance, & that deposit may be paid into ct. Auctioneer admits the deposit to be in his hands, & states his claims upon it. On motion, he was ordered to pay in the deposit, after retaining the amount of his claims, & without prejudice to any question as to the money retained.—YATES v. FAREBROTHER (1819), 4 Madd. 239; 56 E. R. 694.

1230. Rent—Possession taken by lessee.]—Pltf. & deft. entered into an agreement, that when a certain house belonging to pltf. should be completed & finished fit for habitation, pltf. would grant to deft. a lease of such house for twenty-one years. Deft. took possession before the house was completed, & occupied it for a year; but refused to pay rent or execute the lease. Pltf. filed a bill for specific performance, & moved that deft. might be ordered to pay the year's rent into ct. Motion refused, with costs.—FAULKNER v. LLEWELLIN (1862), 31 L. J. Ch. 549; 26 J. P. 515; 10 W. R. 378; subsequent proceedings (1863), 9 L. T. 557, L. JJ.

1231. Royalties—Lessee of mine in possession.]—Pltfs. commenced an action against deft. for specific performance of an agreement for a lease of a coal mine by pltfs. to deft. at a royalty, as pltfs. alleged, of 10d. per ton. Deft. counter-claimed to have specific performance with a royalty of less amount. Deft. was in possession & raising & selling large quantities of coal, but he alleged that he had expended on the mine more than the value of the coal raised. He also brought an action against pltfs. in the Q. B. Div. to obtain damages for misrepresentations alleged to have been made to him for the purpose of inducing him to enter into the agreement, which action was still

p. Right to retain money—Contract not open one.]—Where a vendor sues for specific performance & prays that in default thereof he may have the purchaser's interest cancelled & determined, he is entitled, if the purchaser does not pay the amount due within the time fixed by the ct., to have the agreement determined & to retain the moneys paid thereunder, even if the agreement is an open one in that it contains no clause permitting the vendor to cancel it & retain the moneys paid to him.—*EPISCOPALE CATHOLIQUE ROMAINE DE PRINCE ALBERT CORPN. v. pending. Pltfs. moved for an interlocutory order that deft. might be ordered to pay into ct. the amount of royalties at 10d. per ton on the coal he had raised:—Held: although it would not be right, while the rate of royalty was in dispute, to order deft. to pay into ct. the amount of royalties at the rate claimed by pltfs., he ought to be ordered to pay in the amount of royalties at the rate which he himself alleged to be the one agreed upon, & as his carrying away coal diminished the value of the property he would not have the usual option of giving up possession instead of paying money into ct.—LEWIS v. JAMES (1886), 32 Ch. D. 326; 56 L. J. Ch. 163; 54 L. T. 260; 50 J. P. 423; 34 W. R. 619, C. A.

1234. — Agreement for compulsory purchase.—A public body acting under the powers of their Act & of Lands Clauses (Consolidation) Act, 1845 (c. 18), gave notice to pltf. who was a tailor to take his house which was leasehold. After some negotiation they offered him £400 of which £150 was to be apportioned to his leasehold interest & £250 to his trade damage & personal expenses to which pltf. agreed. Pltf. had mortgaged his leasehold interest & could not make a good title. Pltf. then brought an action for specific performance of the agreement & defts. afterwards paid the £400 into ct. under Lands Clauses Act (c. 18), s. 76, executed a deed poll & took possession:—Held: pltf. was entitled to judgment in the action & to have the £250 paid at once to him with interest from the time when defts. took possession. Although in some cases the goodwill of trade premises passes to a mtgee. that does not apply to a case where the goodwill depends on the personal skill of the owner.—*COOPER v. B. Purchaser in Possession.

(a) In General.

1235. Whether payment in ordered.—Order on a purchaser, before conveyance, to pay into ct. instalments due, & interest according to the contract, the subject being a coal mine, & the purchaser in possession, & working it.—BUCK v. LODGE (1812), 18 Ves. 450; 34 E. R. 387.

1236. ——The ct., on motion in a bill for specific performance, ordered the purchaser, who had been let into possession previously to signing the contract, to pay the purchase-money, with interest from the day fixed by the contract for such payment, into ct.—LILLEY v. ALLEN (1866), 14 L. T. 52; 12 Jur. N. S. 181.

1237. — Option to give up possession.—The co. have taken possession as purchasers & the whole question is whether they have or not accepted the title. The ordinary course is to direct either that the purchase-money be paid into ct. or that the possession be given up. The vendor by filing this bill has elected his ct.; & in case of specific performance he can require nothing more than that the purchase-money should be secured (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—*HYDE v. 1240. — — ——Where title has been accepted & the purchaser has gone into possession before completion, & has failed to complete, & the vendor has commenced proceedings for specific performance, the vendor can obtain on motion an order directing the purchaser to lodge the balance of the purchase-money in ct., together with the interest under the contract from the date fixed for completion within four days, or in default to deliver up possession to the vendor, & in that event to lodge in ct. the interest due under the contract.—Re CASSANO & MACKAY'S CONTRACT (1919), 64 Sol. Jo. 259.

1241. — Unreasonable delay.—BONNER v. JOHNSTON, No. 1261, post.

1242. — Possession taken without consent of vendor.—Purchaser taking possession without the consent or privity of the vendor, ordered on motion, before answer, to pay the purchase-money into ct.—BLACKBURN v. STACE (1821), 6 Madd. 69; 56 E. R. 1016.

1243. — Possession given without prejudice to objections to title.—A purchaser under the ct. will not be allowed to take possession "without prejudice to objections to the title" even upon payment of his purchase-money into ct.—HUTTON v. MANSELL (1840), 2 Beav. 260; 48 E. R. 1180.

1244. — — ——A purchaser who takes possession although for the benefit of the vendor & expressly without prejudice to any objection he may afterwards make to the title will be ordered to pay the money into ct. if he admits the contract.—FOWLER v. WARD (1842), 6 Jur. 547.

1245. — Long possession without objection to title.—Where a purchaser who had been in possession for some years made no objection to the title, a specific performance was decreed, & the money ordered to be brought into ct.; & an inquiry was directed whether a trustee was authorised to make an agreement touching an adjoining field, 1257. — — —.]—A purchaser under an agreement entered into possession & into receipt of the rents & profits of certain messuages & premises in the year 1827, without prejudice as to any question of title. After the delivery of the abstract, the purchaser took objections to the title, & by reason of a party necessary to the conveyance being a minor, the conveyance was postponed. The purchaser remained in possession down to the time of filing the bill, performing certain acts of ownership, & still offering objections to the title. Upon motion of the vendor in a suit for specific performance:—Held: deft. ought to pay the purchase-money into ct. with interest, after the usual rate of £4 per cent.—ADAMS v. HEATHCOTE (1846), 7 L. T. O. S. 317; 10 Jur. 301.

1258. — Objection waived by delay.]—By an agreement for the sale of an estate, the purchaser was to pay part of his purchase-money on Dec. 24 then next, when the conveyance was to be executed, & the residue was to be secured by a mtge. of the estate, payable at not less than twelve months from the date of the conveyance. The purchaser entered into possession immediately after the execution of the agreement, but, on some objections to the title, refused to pay his purchase-money. A bill was filed by the vendor, for the specific performance of the contract, & more than twelve months having elapsed from the time when the conveyance ought to have been executed, deft. was on motion ordered to pay the purchase-money into ct.—YOUNGE v. DUNCOMBE (1831), You. 275; 159 E. R. 995.

(c) Possession Obtained Independently of Contract.

1259. Payment in not ordered.]—Motion, for a purchaser in possession to pay money into ct. refused, under the circumstances of possession given independently of the agreement to purchase, & laches on the part of the vendor in completing his title.—*FOX v. 1260. — Possession as tenant in common.]—Motion by one tenant in common who had agreed to sell to the other, that the latter should pay his purchase-money into ct., refused; where such purchaser had been before & at the time of the purchase in possession of the whole, with the approbation of the other tenant in common.—FREEBODY v. PERRY (1815), Coop. G. 91; 35 E. R. 489, L. C.

1261. — Possession as tenant of vendor.]—On bill by vendor for a specific performance, the ct. will not, before answer, make an order for payment of the purchase-money, by deft. in possession, unless under special circumstances, such as unreasonable delay, committing acts of ownership in alteration of the property, etc. In this case, deft. being in possession, not under the agreement to purchase, but as tenant to pltf. at the time of the purchase, no order was made.—BONNER v. JOHNSTON (1816), 1 Mer. 366; 35 E. R. 709, L. C.

1262. — — —.]—The purchasers of a mining property, subject to leases, were in possession of part as lessees, & of part under an agreement with the lessees, & were working & disposing of the minerals, but they had paid no rent since the time when, according to the agreement, possession was to be given. Upon motion, after answer, in a suit for specific performance by the vendors, for payment into ct. of the balance of the purchase-money:—Held: defts. could only be required to pay into ct. the rent in arrear.—ROBERTSHAW v. BRAY (1866), 35 L. J. Ch. 844; 14 L. T. 101; 12 Jur. N. S. 224.

A co. having taken a small portion of an estate, the whole of which was subject to a rentcharge, & a reference having been directed to ascertain what would be a proper amount to be deducted from the purchase-money by way of compensation, but no reference as to indemnity:—Held: regard being had to the provisions for indemnity thereafter directed, a proper sum to deduct was a sum which bore such a proportion to the whole present worth of the rentcharge as the quantity of lands taken by the co. bore to the whole lands out of which the rentcharge issued. The provision for indemnity then directed by the order was a covenant by the vendor to pay the annuity; & that all the other lands should, as between the vendor & purchaser, be solely chargeable therewith, in exoneration of the small parcel now sold.—*POWELL v. The additional houses were not built, but for forty six years the lessor received the rent, & thus waived the obligation to build. The leasehold interest being sold:—Held: the purchaser was not bound to accept either a compensation or indemnity.

An indemnity the purchaser would not be bound to take, if in such a case it could be given, & I am of opinion that such a liability as this is not a fit subject for either compensation or indemnity. It is . . . impossible to ascertain with any reasonable accuracy the amount or value of any such liability (LORD LANDALE, M.R.).—NOUAILLE v. FLIGHT (1844), 7 Beav. 521; 13 L. J. Ch. 414; 8 Jur. 838; 49 E. R. 1168.

Under this power leases were granted of two plots of ground, upon which the lessees erected two particular houses in the line of one of the new streets. Each of the leases described the plot of ground which it demised as being "on the north side of a new street then forming there, called," etc., & as "fronting towards the south on the new street." The plan referred to in the Act of Parliament exhibited an open space in front of the sites of these houses; but that plan was not mentioned in either of the leases.

The intended streets were completed, & the space in front of the houses was left open. The Comrs. of Woods & Forests, & the paving committee of the parish, afterwards gave permission to certain persons to erect an equestrian statue in the open space, & those persons proceeded to place it upon a part of that open space, but without interfering with the line of the carriage way of the new street in which the houses stood. The lessees of the houses thereupon filed a bill to restrain the erection of the statue, alleging that, upon the treaty for the leases, the lessees were shown the plan of the intended new street & parts adjacent, by which it appeared that the space in question was to be quite open & free from all obstructions, & that it was upon the treaty represented & stated, that opposite the two houses a free passage would be left of certain dimensions, which would be contracted by the erection of the statue; they also alleged, that the proposed erection would diminish the value of their property, & be a public & a private nuisance.

The parcels being deficient, the purchasers sued on the covenant. 1296. Mutual mistake.—In a written agreement for the sale & purchase of a leasehold house the number of the house was inaccurately described as No. 232 instead of 233. There was no dispute as to the identity of the house, which was admitted by the vendor to be No. 233. In an action by the purchaser against the vendor for the specific performance of the agreement to sell No. 233, the defence was raised that in such an action no parol variation of the written agreement could be made, according to the rule in Woollam v. Hearn, No. 1285, ante. applied in May v. Platt, No. 1287, ante. Stat. Frauds was not pleaded by deft., & pltf. did not ask for rectification of the written agreement, or seek to introduce any parol evidence:—Held: as there was a common mistake of both parties to the agreement the rule in Woollam v. Hearn, No. 1285, ante. had no application, & pltf. was entitled to specific performance of the contract alleged.—FORGIONE v. LEWIS, [1920] 2 Ch. 326; 89 L. J. Ch. 510; 123 L. T. 562; 64 Sol. 1297. Sufficiency of evidence.—An agreement to grant a lease of a house was contained in three letters, which specified the term & the amount of rent, & stipulated that the intended lessee, pltf., was to do all repairs, painting, decorating, etc. The intended lessor, deft., refused to grant a lease on the footing of the agreement, on the ground that pltf. had at the time of entering into the agreement also verbally undertaken to expend £1,000 on the premises in a particular manner, & to allow covenants to compel him to do so to be inserted in the lease; that pltf. had not performed that part of his agreement, & had objected to such covenants; & further, that the agreement as contained in the letters was too uncertain for the ct. to enforce. On a bill filed for specific performance of the agreement as contained in the letters:—Held: the alleged parol collateral agreement was not substantiated by the evidence, & there was no ground for saying that the terms of the letters were uncertain, & therefore pltf. was entitled to a decree.—*DEAR v. Several years after a solr. had ceased to act for his client, an agreement was entered into between them, for the delivery up of the client's papers, in consideration of a fixed sum to be paid to the solr. when the Ct. of Ch. should declare that he was one of the next of kin of E. & entitled to a fund in ct. No bill was delivered, & five years afterwards the right of the client was established:—Held: the agreement was valid, there having been no fraud or undue pressure, the client having had the full benefit of the agreement, & it being impossible to replace the parties in their original position.

PART V. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 11.—A.

g. Discretion of court.—The right to ask that damages shall be awarded a purchaser in lieu of specific performance is largely personal to the vendor, & the ct. will not substitute the one remedy for the other where it will not benefit the vendor but only a subsequent purchaser from him.—CRAMPTON

1304. Under Chancery Amendment Act, 1858 (c. 27)—Only where claim for specific performance entertainable.]—(1) A ct. of equity will not decree the specific performance of a contract to borrow a sum of money on mtge.

(2) In a case where the ct. has no jurisdiction to grant a specific performance of a contract, it has no jurisdiction, under above Act, to award & assess damages for its non-performance.

The ct. has said that the reason for compelling a specific performance of a contract is because the remedy at law is inadequate or defective. But by what possibility can it be said that the remedy here is inadequate or defective (ROMILLY, M.R.).—ROGERS v. CHALLIS (1859), 27 Beav. 175; 29 L. J. Ch. 240; 6 Jur. N. S. 334; 7 W. All the shares had been allotted before the filing of the bill:—Held: as no relief by way of specific performance was possible, pltf.'s claim for damages under above Act failed also.—*FERGUSON v. 1307. ———.]—Where an agreement is entered into between two parties, & performance by the first party of his part goes to the root of the whole agreement, & the first party fails to perform his part, & the second party also fails to perform his part, the Ct. of Ch. will restrain the first party from bringing an action against the second party for non-performance of his part, until he, the first party, shall have performed his part; & that, although the Ct. of Ch. has no jurisdiction to compel the first party to specifically perform his part, & no jurisdiction to award damages for its non-performance.

A lease of a colliery contained an implied covenant on the part of the lessor to procure land by certain compulsory powers, for the lessees to make a railway to a neighbouring canal, without which they had no access to any available market. The lessor did not procure the land, but brought an action against the lessees for rent. The lessees applied to the Ct. of Ch. for an injunction, &, the powers having expired, they asked at the hearing for an inquiry as to damages:—Held: the ct. would restrain the action at law until the land was provided, but, as it could not have compelled deft. to provide the land, it had no jurisdiction to award damages.—ACRAMAN v. PRICE, DAVIES v. PRICE (1870), 18 W. R. 540; varied (1871), 24 L. T. 487; 19 W. R. 364, L. C.

1310. ———.]—A contract for the sale of "the building materials" of a house, with a condition that all materials were to be taken down & cleared off the ground within two months, "after which date any materials then not cleared will be deemed a trespass & become forfeited, & the purchaser's right of access to the ground shall absolutely cease"—is a contract for the sale of an interest in or concerning land within Stat. Frauds, s. 4, & accordingly, from the absence of any sufficient description in the contract of the vendor avoided:—Held: the jurisdiction to give damages in substitution for, or in addition to, specific performance, has not been extended to cases where specific performance could not possibly have been directed; &, accordingly, the contract having, from lapse of time, become at the hearing incapable of specific performance, the equitable doctrine of part performance, as avoiding the operation of Stat. Frauds, did not enable pltf. to obtain relief in damages.—LAVERY v. PURSELL (1888), 39 Ch. D. 508; 57 L. J. Ch. 570; 58 L. T. 846; 37 W. R. 163; 4 T. L. R. 353.

1311. ———.]—Where order for specific performance disobeyed.]—The ct. has no power under above Act upon motion in a cause, after a decree for specific performance of a covenant, to add an order for assessing damages for the breach of the covenant. Such an order would be a supplemental decree upon facts which had subsequently occurred.—HYTHE CORPN. v. EAST (1866), L. R. 1 Eq. 620; 35 L. J. Ch. 257; 13 L. T. 788; 14 W. R. 273.

1312. ———.]—Where damages previously recoverable at law.]—In a purchaser's action for specific performance pltf. cannot recover damages for breach of contract unless he establishes misrepresentation on the part of deft. The object & intention of above Act which gives the ct. jurisdiction to award damages in substitution for specific performance in all cases in which the ct. has jurisdiction to entertain an application for specific performance, was not to give any new right to damages, but to prevent the mischief arising from two distinct methods of procedure which pre-

Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (11), does not extend the equity jurisdiction so as to enable the ct. to grant damages in a case wherein before the Act damages were not recoverable, e.g., in the case of an oral agreement not capable of specific performance in equity, & in respect of which, in an action at law for damages, deft. could have successfully pleaded Stat. 1315. ———.]—Vendors entered into an alleged agreement, consisting of letters, for the sale to purchasers of certain patent rights by which the vendors were to receive £15,000, payable by Mar. 1, 1886, for the patent rights, works, plant, & book debts, & 25 per cent. of the profits made in dealing with the patents, the purchasers to form a co. to work the patents. No co. having been formed & the purchasers refusing to carry out the agreement, the vendors brought an action claiming specific performance of the agreement, payment of the £15,000 & damages in addition to specific performance of the whole or any part of the agreement, & in substitution for specific performance of any part of the agreement of which the ct. might decline to enforce specific performance.

The defence denied the agreement, & pleaded that the formation of a co. to work the patents was a condition precedent to the payment of the money. An order was made under R. S. C., 1883, Ord. 34, r 2, directing the following questions of law to be set down for argument: (a) what was the construction of the letters constituting the alleged agreement; (b) whether plffs. were entitled to any & what relief by way of specific performance, or damages, or both, in respect of such agreement.

Held: (1) under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), the ct. had complete jurisdiction both in law & in equity; so whether the ct. could in a particular case grant specific performance or not, it could give damages for breach of the agreement.

(2) Under Chancery Amendment Act, 1858 (c. 27), plff. had first to make out that he was entitled to specific performance before he could get damages at all; now, he may come to the ct. & say, "If you think I am not entitled to specific performance of the whole or any part of the agreement, then give me damages:—Held: on the pleadings plffs. were entitled to some relief, & defts. must pay the costs of the present hearing.—ELMORE v. PIRRIE (1887), 57 L. T. 333.

B. Damages in lieu of Specific Performance.

1316. Whether damages awarded—Plaintiff disentitling himself to specific performance.]—Plff. will not be entitled to damages in equity for the non-performance of an act for which prima facie he might have obtained specific performance, after he himself has done some act which disentitles him to specific performance.—COLLINS v. STUTELEY (1859), 7 W. R. 710.

1317. ———.]—Plff. by his statement of claim claimed specific performance of a contract by which he agreed to sell & deft. agreed to purchase the lease, goodwill, fixtures & stock-in-trade of a business; plff. alleging that he was & always had been able & willing to perform the contract but that deft. refused to perform the same. The statement of claim in the alternative claimed £100 as liquidated damages fixed by the contract for the refusal to perform the contract. The statement of defence alleged false representations by plff. as to the character of the business, & denied that plff. was able & willing to perform the contract. Plff., after the close of the pleadings, gave notice to deft. that, unless deft. completed the purchase within a week, he should resell the business, which he accordingly did. No amendment of the pleadings was then asked for by plff. & the action went on to trial. At the trial plff.'s counsel, admitting that the claim for specific performance must be abandoned, sought to recover the £100 as liquidated damages. He did not apply for any amendment of the pleadings. The judge dismissed the action on the ground that the claim for specific performance failing through plff.'s own act the alternative claim for damages must fail also:—Held: in the absence of any amendment of the pleadings, which ought not at that stage of the action to be allowed, the action must be treated as one for specific performance with a claim for damages in the alternative as a substitute for specific performance, according to the practice existing before Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), in the Ct. of Ch. & plff., having by his own act rendered specific performance impossible, was not in such action entitled to damages.—HIPGRAVE v. CASE (1885), 28 Ch. Pltf. brought an action against deft. for specific performance of the agreement, or in the alternative for damages for breach thereof:—Held: though as an agreement to enter into a contract it could not be decreed to be specifically performed, the agreement was one for breach of which deft. was liable in damages; & semble, not merely in nominal damages.—*FOSTER v. In case of default for thirty days in the payment of any instalment, the whole of the unpaid instalments were to become immediately due & payable, & in the event of default for thirty days in payment, the vendor was to be at liberty to resell the land, & to retain out of the proceeds of sale the unpaid instalments with interest, & was to pay the balance to the purchaser. The purchaser went into possession under the contract, & retained possession for a considerable time, & though generally in arrear with the instalments, he had by Aug., 1895, paid them all except the last. The last instalment became due on Sept. 29, 1895, but it was never paid. Correspondence took place, in which the vendor called on the purchaser to pay, but he never gave him notice that, if payment was not made within a specified time, he should treat the contract as abandoned. In Oct., 1896, the purchaser went away, & the vendor was unable to find him. The vendor resumed possession of the land & endeavoured to sell it, but without success, and in Mar. 1898, he agreed to let it for three years to a tenant, who took possession.

1329. ———.]—Two houses, stated in the particulars to have been "recently in the possession of F.," were put up by pltf's, mtgees. from F., for sale by auction, & were bought by deft. A day was fixed for completion of the purchase, when rents or possession were to belong to the purchaser. At that day F. was still in possession, & remained so until he was turned out by the sheriff, more than a month after. The purchaser had agreed to let the houses to a tenant as from a day five days later than the day fixed for completion, but the tenant, finding that he could not have immediate possession, had refused to take the houses which had remained unoccupied, & had also been damaged by the removal of some fixtures & otherwise. The vendors brought an action for specific performance simply. Deft. counterclaimed for specific performance with compensation :—Held : the purchaser was entitled to damages in the nature of compensation for loss of a tenant, & damages for the deterioration of the property.—*ROYAL BRISTOL PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. SUB-SECT. 12.—ANCILLARY RELIEF.

A. In General.

1335. *Delivery of deeds—Deposited with master By defendant.]—*Bill filed for a specific performance of an agreement to purchase, & demurred to. Order made, that on a conveyance of the estate from pltf. to deft. being deposited with the master, the vendee should pay into ct. his purchase-money; which order was complied with. Motion, that master should deliver the conveyance to the vendee, refused.—CUTLER v. BROUGHTON (1818), 3 Madd. 95; 56 E. R. 445.

1336. ———.]—*By plaintiff.]—*In a case where deeds had been brought into the master's office, under an order of reference made in a suit for specific performance of two contracts relating to different parts of lands of the parties, one for an exchange, & the other for a purchase, referring it to the master to settle a conveyance from deft. to a purchaser, a third person, of the exchanged lands, upon whose report so much of the bill as related to that contract, was ordered to be dismissed with costs, an application was made to the ct. that the documents belonging to pltf., which had been brought into the master's office, according to the terms of the order, might be delivered back to him; but it was refused, on deft. showing that they would yet be of service, breach of the contract, & also as to damages sustained by the vendor by reason of breach of covenants in the instrument constituting the agreement.—CASEY v. HANLON (1875), 22 Gr. 445.—CAN.

e. Order for account—With reference to ascertain true agreement.]—HUGHES v. MOORE (1885), 11 A. R. 569.—CAN.

*f. Appointment of receiver.]—*A vendor suing for specific performance of an agreement for the sale of land, under which the purchaser was in possession & which contained no pro-

& necessary to him in defending the same suit as to the other contract: upon the ground that the order, in such cases, was matter of regulation: & it was held that, under the circumstances, the ct. might still retain the papers, deft., having an interest in the order & the documents brought in under it, & having paid the purchase-money & interest into ct.—BOWYER v. GREEN (1824), 13 Price, 250; 147 E. R. 981.

1337. Order for account—Payment made by purchaser at different times—Whether account taken with rests.]—Where payments have been made by a vendee at different times on account of his purchase, all exceeding the interest due at the times of such payments, & the decree in a suit by the vendor for a specific performance directs an account to be taken of what is due to pltf. for the principal & interest in respect of the purchase, rests are always made in taking the account.—GRIFFITH v. HEATON (1823), 1 Sim. & St. 271; 1 L. J. O. S. Ch. 197; 57 E. R. 109.

1338. — Compulsory purchase of land.]—The vendor's title & the contract being admitted, decree will be made for sale, & satisfaction to the vendor out of the moneys, & for payment of the deficiency, if any, by the purchaser, notwithstanding an Act of Parliament has dealt with the lands in question since the date of the contract.

Mode of directing sales of lands held in trust. The order should direct the sale to be made by the trustee or by the judge at chambers, not by the trustee with the approbation of the judge.—NASH v. WORCESTER IMPROVEMENT COMRS. (1855), 1 Jur. N. S. 973.

1339. — Of rents & profits.]—I do not see how in a decree directing an account of rents & profits they can have an account of business carried on by them upon the premises which has resulted in a loss. Whether it was necessary or not I do not know; it is not in the decree (BUCKLEY, J.).—BENNETT v. STONE, [1902] 1 Ch. 226; 71 L. J. Ch. 60; 85 L. T. 753; 50 W. R. 118; 46 Sol. 1340. Directions as to settlement of conveyance—Subsequent motion.]—Where a contract was decreed to be specifically performed, nothing being said as to interest on the purchase-money, & the ct. afterwards, on motion, referred to the master to settle a conveyance; a subsequent motion to direct the master to calculate & charge interest on the purchase-money, & to give particular direction as to the mode of settling the conveyance, was refused.—BYFIELD v. PROVIS (1835), 4 L. J. Ch. 214.

1341. —.]—By the terms of a contract for the purchase of real estate, it was stipulated that "a copy of the pedigree on which the claim of the vendor as heir-at-law to the last owner was based should be furnished to the purchaser, who should admit the right of the vendor as such heir-at-law, & should not require any further evidence of marriages, births, failure of issue, descents, intestacies, survivorships, or other matters of pedigree than such as were in the possession of the vendor." The vendor furnished a pedigree which was defective:—Held: upon the construction of the contract, the purchaser had thereby admitted the vendor's right as heir-at-law to the last owner, & he could not object to any defect in the vendor's pedigree purporting to show such heirship.

1342. Directions as to settlement of lease—Insertion of particular clause.]—When the ct. directs a reference to chambers to settle the terms of a lease, it will, when convenient, at the same time make a declaration as to the insertion of a particular clause with regard to which an issue has been raised in the pleadings.—STRELLEY v. PEARSON (1880), 15 Ch. D. 113; 49 L. J. Ch. 406; 43 L. T. 155; 28 W. R. 752.

1343. — — —.]—By an agreement in writing (contained in two letters) deft. agreed to grant to pltf., a brewer, a lease of a public-house for a certain term, at a certain rent "a proper lease to be drawn up with all proper clauses & approved of by" deft. & his solr. Afterwards deft. refused to grant a lease unless it contained a clause against underletting. In an action to enforce specific performance of the agreement:—Held: the clause was not a "proper clause"; deft. was bound to grant a lease without putting in any such clause, & specific performance decreed.

There will be a declaration as claimed that the restrictive covenant is not to be put in the lease (PEARSON, J.).—EADIE v. ADDISON (1882), 52 L. J. Ch. 80; 47 L. T. 543; 31 W. R. 320.

A. B. executed a voluntary settlement of real estate in favour of his wife & children, & afterwards contracted to sell it for valuable consideration. The purchaser filed a bill for specific performance against the vendor, his wife, children & the trustees in whom the legal estate was vested. One of the children was out of the jurisdiction & did not appear. The ct. decreed a specific performance, & ordered the trustees to convey to the purchaser, saving the rights of the absent party.—WILLATS v. BUSBY (1842), 5 Beav. 193; 12 L. J. Ch. 105; 49 E. 1347. Vesting order—Non-appearance of defendant.—Where defts. to a bill for specific performance cannot be found, pltf., after entering an appearance & filing replication, may, by advertisement in the "London Gazette," give him notice of a subpœna to hear judgment, & if he fail to appear, the ct. at the hearing will, on proof of the case made by the bill, make a decree & an order vesting the estate in pltf.—MURPHY v. VINCENT (1871), 40 L. J. Ch. 378.

1348. — Lunacy of defendant.—Deft. agreed to grant to pltf. leases of houses built by pltf. on deft.'s land. Before the leases were granted deft. became of unsound mind, though he had not been so found by inquisition, nor had any committee of his estate been appointed. In an action for specific performance, deft. offered to submit to a decree, and to have himself declared a trustee for pltf. under Trustee Act, 1850 (c. 60), & to have a person appointed to execute the leases on his behalf, or to have the houses vested in pltf. on the terms of the agreement:—Held: the proposed order would vest a legal term in pltf. pursuant to the contract, but would not give him the benefit of the express covenant for quiet enjoyment.—COWPER v. HARMER (1887), 57 L. J. Ch. 460; 57 L. T. 714; 4 T. L. R. 16.

1349. Appointment of receiver—When appeal pending.—In an action for the specific performance of an agreement to accept a lease of a farm, in which judgment had been given for deft., pltf. having appealed, the Ct. of Appeal, no previous application having been made to the Div. Ct. or a judge, appointed pltf. receiver & manager of the farm without security, on his undertaking to abide by any order which the ct. might make in the matter.—HYDE v. WARDEN (1876), 1 Ex. 1350. Vacation of registration of action as lis pendens—Where claim unsuccessful.—The ct. may on giving judgment dismissing an action by a purchaser for specific performance include in the judgment on the vendor's application an order vacating the registration of the action as a lis pendens unless the purchaser sets down an appeal within a limited time.—*BAXTER v. See INJUNCTION, Vol. XXVIII., pp. 456, 457, Nos. 729–738.

1352. Stay of action for ejectment—By judgment creditor of vendor.—A. entered into an agreement for the purchase of an estate, & paid a deposit, & entered into possession, but did not pay the remainder of the purchase-money. Afterwards a creditor of the vendor obtained a judgment against him, sued out an elegit, & brought an action of ejectment against A. A. filed a bill against the vendor & the judgment creditor praying to have the agreement specifically performed & for an injunction to restrain the judgment creditor from proceeding in any action against him:—Held: he was entitled to such injunction.—BRUNTON v. NEALE (1844), 14 L. J. Ch. 8; 9 Jur. 338, L. C.

1354. Agreement for nomination of directors—Restraint of alteration of company's articles.—By an agreement binding on deft. co. it was provided that so long as pltf. syndicate should hold 5,000 shares in deft. co., pltf. syndicate should have the right of nominating two directors on the board of deft. co. A clause to the same effect was contained in art. 88 of deft. co.'s arts. of assocn. Another art. provided that the number of directors should not be less than three nor more than seven. Pltf. syndicate had recently nominated two persons as directors. Deft. co. objected to these persons as directors & refused to accept the nomination, & a meeting of the shareholders was called for the purpose of passing a special resolution under Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908 (c. 69), s. 13, cancelling art. 88:—Held: deft. co. had no power to alter its arts. of assocn. for the purpose of committing a breach of contract & an injunction ought to be granted to restrain the holding of the meeting for that purpose; the contract was not incapable of being specifically enforced, & a declaration ought to be made that the two persons nominated by pltf. syndicate became & were directors of deft. co. with ancillary relief by way of injunction if it became necessary.—BRITISH MURAC SYNDICATE, LTD. v. ALPERTON RUBBER CO., LTD., [1915] 2 Ch. 186; 84 L. J. Ch. 665; 113 L. T. 373; 31 T. L. R. 391; 59 Sol. Jo. 494.

1355. — Restraint of preventing nominees acting as directors.—In consideration of pltf. co. guaranteeing an issue of debentures deft. co., the latter agreed to appoint two nominees of pltf. co. as directors. Two directors were nominated by pltf. co., but deft. co. refused to appoint them. On an application to restrain deft. co. from preventing the two nominees from acting as directors:—Held: the nomination had not the effect of appointing the nominees as directors, &

C. Declaration of Lien.

See, generally, LIEN, Vol. XXXII., pp. 212 et seq.

1356. When declaration made—Condition for resale on default of purchaser—Liberty to apply if decree not obeyed.—Pltfs., vendors, contracted to sell property to defts., a railway co., & the conditions of sale provided that if default was made by the purchasers in the completion of their contract, the vendors should be at liberty to resell the property. The purchasers never completed their contract. Pltfs. filed a bill praying a decree for specific performance or, in the alternative, that the condition as to the resale of the property might be enforced. They also asked to have it declared that they had a lien on the property for the unpaid purchase-money:—Held: pltfs. were only entitled to a decree for the specific performance of the contract by defts., with the liberty to apply “in case that decree was not obeyed,” with respect to the lien.—DICKENSON v. SECT. 7.—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE WITH COMPENSATION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—CONTRACT WITHOUT CONDITION FOR COMPENSATION.

A. Right of Vendor to Specific Performance Subject to Compensation.

(a) In General.

1358. How far principle carried by court.—Objects of parties defeated.—In enforcing contracts upon the principle of compensation for a variance from the description the ct. has gone so far, to the extent even of wholly defeating the object of the purchaser, that, where the principal subject of the contract was all the corn & hay tithes of a parish, & of the hay tithe half was allotted to the vicar, & the other half commuted for a customary payment, the nature of that payment, the extent of meadow, & the possible conversion from arable, not distinctly appearing,

1359. ———.]—I think that the cases of specific performance with compensation ought not to be extended. In many of them a bargain substantially different from that which the parties entered into has been substituted for it & enforced, which is not right (JESSEL, M.R.).—CATO v. THOMPSON (1882), 9 Q. 1374. ——. Risk accepted—Vendor acting bonâ fide. — In an agreement for the sale of seventeen undivided shares of a coal mine there was an article stating two conveyances by which six undivided shares of the land beneath which the coal lay had been conveyed to the vendors' predecessor in title, but stating that there was no express mention in the conveyances of the minerals under the land, & requiring that the purchasers should assume that six undivided shares of the minerals passed by the conveyances of the land, & thereby became absolutely vested in the vendors' predecessor in title. In the abstract of the vendors' title sent to the purchasers mention was made of a certain indenture, but nothing further was said about it. The purchasers' solr. inquired of the vendors' solr. what this deed was, & was told that it could not be found, and no abstract of it or information about it could be furnished, but that it was believed not to affect the property sold. The vendors' solr. also said, as he really believed to be the case, that though the title to the six undivided shares could not be strictly proved, yet the vendors had a good holding title to them. After these transactions the purchasers entered into the agreement, & paid the deposit money. Subsequently, the deed which was supposed to have been lost was found, when it was discovered that by virtue of it the six undivided shares of the mine belonged to some person quite different from the vendors, & that neither they, nor their predecessor in title, had ever had any title to those shares. The purchasers refused to proceed with the agreement, whereupon the vendors brought this action for specific performance of it. The purchasers contended that without these six shares the mine would be useless to them, & claimed to be entitled to be released from the agreement:—Held: as there had been no fraud in the matter, but the vendors had acted under a bonâ fide mistake, & the purchasers had had the fact that there was a doubt as to the title brought to their notice before entering into the agreement, & had thought fit to run the risk of taking the property without having the matter cleared up, specific performance of the agreement ought to be decreed, but a deduction must be made from the purchase-money as compensation to the purchasers for the loss of the six shares.—ENGLISH v. MURRAY (1883), 49 L. T. 35; 32 W. R. 84.

1375. Restriction on acquisition of easement. — Deft. agreed to purchase houses in F. street, on the other side of which was a recreation ground belonging to the mayor & corpn. of S. After signing the contract deft. discovered that the vendor had entered into a covenant with the corpn. to pay 1s. a year by way of acknowledgement that he had no right to the flow of light & air to his windows over the recreation ground.

The covenant was expressed to bind the "owner for the time being" of the houses, & on having notice of it, deft. declined to complete the purchase. The vendor having brought an action for specific performance, the purchaser relied on the covenant as sufficient reason for declining to complete, & in the alternative claimed compensation:—Held: (1) in a purchase of property there was no right to the potentiality of the acquisition of an easement, & specific performance must be decreed; (2) it was not a case for compensation, but there would be no order as to costs, on the ground that the vendor ought to have informed the purchaser of the existence of the covenant.—*GREENHALGH v. (2) Considering that all the witnesses for deft. speak as to [the portion of the land] being material & that nothing is said with regard to the question on the part of pltf., & regard being had to the decided cases & to the circumstance that this ct. is from time to time approaching nearer to the doctrine that a purchaser shall have that which he 1383. — — — — ——A farm was put up for sale under the direction of the ct. by particulars accompanied by a plan, & was described as "a compact small farm containing 41 acres 3 roods 35 poles, divided as follows." Among the parcels was "490a, Bottlesey Green, containing 7 acres 1 rood 27 poles," opposite to which, in the column showing the amounts which made up the 41 acres 3 roods 35 poles, was entered 4 acres 0 roods 38 poles. The conditions provided that any error, misstatement, or omission in the particulars should not annul the sale, nor should any compensation be allowed except such, if any, as the judge in chambers should direct. G. bought the property in his own name, & was certified as purchaser. He in fact bought as agent for B., who was the owner of immediately adjoining property. On investigating the title it turned out that the vendors were only entitled to four undivided sevenths of 490a, which was a narrow close containing 7 acres 1 rood 27 poles, having a long frontage to a high road & at one end adjoined B.'s property. B. alleged that it was of great importance to the enjoyment of his property that he should have the whole of 490a, & G., by his directions, refused to complete. The vendors then entered into an arrangement with the owner of the other three-sevenths to give them up, receiving an equivalent out of another part of the farm having a frontage to another road:—Held: G., having only purchased as agent for B., could take any objection which B., had he been the nominal as well as the real purchaser, could have taken; for the purpose of resisting completion, the purchaser was entitled to say that he bought the farm as shown on the plan; as the possession of 490a was important to the enjoyment of B.'s property, completion could not be compelled unless he could get the whole of it, & he was not bound to accept the arrangement by which he would obtain the whole of it by giving up another part of the purchased property; & he must therefore be discharged from his purchase.—Re ARNOLD, *ARNOLD v. particulars of sale as containing 5 acres, 0 roods, 26 poles, & as bordering on a lake on S. common, the sale being subject to conditions of sale, one of which was as follows: "The property is believed & shall be taken to be correctly described in the particulars as to quantity & otherwise . . . & if any error, misstatement, or omission in the particulars be discovered, the same shall not annul the sale, nor shall any compensation be allowed by the vendors to the purchaser in respect thereof." The only part of the property to which a good title was shown contained 4 acres, 3 roods. Another part of the property offered for sale bordered on the lake & as to this the only title offered was what purported to be a title by possession for less than forty years. Pltf. claimed rescission of the contract & a return of the deposit paid by him, & defts. counterclaimed for specific performance:—Held: even if defts. had established a possessory title to the border land for twelve years that would not have been sufficient, as the contract, as far as it related to that land, was an open one, in which case a forty years' title by possession was required; defts. were not entitled to specific performance in respect of the part of the property to which a good title had been shown; & pltf. was entitled to rescission of the contract & the return of his deposit.—JACOBS v. JENKINS (1831), You. 295; 159 E. R. 1004.

1386. ——— Property subject to lease for lives.—An estate was put up for sale by a particular describing it as "now or late in the several occupations of H.R. & others," & by one of the conditions, it was provided that on completion, the purchaser should be "let into the receipt of the rents & profits." Some parts of the property were subject to leases for lives at a low rent:—Held: a purchaser, who entered into the contract without knowing of the existence of such leases, could not be compelled to take the title without compensation.

A claim for specific performance raising no question of notice or waiver having been filed by the vendor, & a reference as to title in the common form having been made, the order directing which was not appealed from:—Held: proof of notice to the purchaser of the existence of the leases for lives when he entered into his contract, & proof of subsequent conduct from which a waiver of the objection might be inferred, would not take away his right to compensation.—HUGHES v. JONES (1861), 3 De G. F. & J. 307; 31 L. J. Ch. 83; 5 L. T. 408; 8 Jur. N. S. 399; 10 W. R. 139; 45 E. R. 897, L. JJ.

(d) Misdescription of Property.

1391. Whether specific performance decreed — Misdescription of tenure—Tenancy at will—Described as freehold.—Agreements for the sale of an estate, especially if by auction, depend on the bond fides of the transaction; therefore trifling errors in the description are not material. Advertisement of an estate for sale by auction described it all as freehold, though a small part was held at will: after execution of articles a treaty for an exchange of that part took place; pending which, at the time appointed for completing the purchase, purchaser took possession forcibly; but proceeded in the treaty afterwards till he finally refused to agree to the purchase; on bill of vendor purchase-money decreed to be paid with 4 per cent. from the time it ought; but inquiry directed as to what ought to have been the compensation at that time for the part not freehold; that, with the outgoings to be deducted.—*CALCRAFT v. The committee having failed to complete the purchase A. L. Waring brought an action for specific performance. On Nov. 2, 1887, judgment was given in the said action directing the usual inquiry whether a good title could be made. The chief clerk's certificate, dated Mar. 22, 1888, found that a good title could be made, to a derivative term of ninety-three & a quarter years from Dec. 25, 1824, less three days :—Held : the words of the agreement took the case out of the authority of *Madeley v. 1396. ——— Redemption of land tax.]—Redeemed land tax, amounting to £41 per annum, was sold by auction in one lot. The particulars represented £3 14s., part of it, as charged on three houses, but stated that the title consisted of a contract for redemption of the land tax of Mar. 25, 1818. This contract, when produced after the sale, showed that the £3 14s. was not charged on three houses, but consisted of three small sums, each charged separately on one of the houses :—Held : (1) the misdescription was fatal; (2) the reference to the contract did not give the purchaser notice of the actual state of the title; (3) it was not a matter susceptible of compensation, & a bill by the vendor for specific performance was dismissed with costs.—*COX v. The manufactories in the town were generally supplied with water from wells upon the properties themselves, though small steam engines in warehouses frequently were not :—Held : there was a misdescription, & a purchaser who purchased on the faith of the description of the particulars, without knowing the real state of the case, could not be compelled to complete his purchase without compensation.—*LEYLAND v. On a bill being filed for specific performance, the purchaser, admitting that he had been for several months in possession of the property, & had exercised acts of ownership over it, on the faith that a good title to 349 acres would be shown, insisted, that, in the contract, acres meant statute acres, & that he was not bound to perform the contract, unless 349 statute acres were conveyed to him :—Held : in such a case, a reference of title would not be directed on motion.

Semble : the stipulation that the premises should be taken at the quantity before stated, be the same more or less, would not cover so large a deficiency as existed here.—PORTMAN v. MILL (1826), 2 Russ. 570; 38 E. R. 449, L. C.

misrepresentation by the vendors as to the value. As to several allegations the purchasers were held to have failed, & specific performance was decreed, but with compensation to the purchasers in respect of an alleged misrepresentation as to the amount of stores consumed in the collieries, & a consequent excess in the statement of income. An inquiry was directed as to such compensation, & it was found that there was a large excess in the statement of income beyond its true amount:—Held: (1) the purchasers were entitled to a deduction from their purchase-money bearing the same proportion to the whole purchase-money as the excess bore to the income stated; (2) as no direction as to costs was given by the original decrees in the suits, & as the purchasers were held to be entitled to a considerable abatement, the vendors must pay the costs of the suits, & could not on the hearing on further consideration be relieved from payment of any parts of the costs on account of the failure of the purchasers as to part of their case on the original hearing.—*POWELL v. performance of a contract to purchase a timber estate, where the particulars of sale described it as comprising a certain wood "with upwards of 65 acres of fine oak timber trees, the average size of which approached 50 feet," & in the particulars of the lot described it only as 65 acres 2 roods & 12 perches of growing timber." B. Right of Purchaser to Specific Performance with Compensation.

1425. ———.]—Where a husband & wife agreed to sell the wife's estate in fee simple, the purchaser being aware that the estate belonged to the wife, & the wife afterwards refused to convey:—Held: the purchaser could not compel the husband to convey his interest & accept an abated price.

If a man professes to be owner of the fee simple & undertakes to sell the fee simple & it turns out that he had not the power so to do, the purchaser not being at the time aware of the difficulty, then the vendor must convey as much as he can & submit to an abatement. But the case is wholly different where the vendor does not profess to sell the fee but only that estate which he is able to dispose of (LORD HATHERLEY, C.)—CASTLE v. WILKINSON (1870), 5 Ch. 1426. ———.]—(1) The ct. will not, at the instance of the purchaser under an open contract containing no provision for compensation, decree specific performance of the contract with compensation in respect of covenants restricting the building on or user of the land sold. By granting the purchaser such relief, the ct. would not only be making a new contract never contemplated by the parties, but would also be extending the equitable doctrine of specific performance with compensation beyond its proper limits.

The extreme difficulty in assessing compensation in respect of covenants of that nature is another consideration which will influence the ct. in refusing such relief.

(2) Where the purchaser seeks specific performance with a proportionately large abatement of the purchase-money in respect of defects of which, as the purchaser knew, the vendor was unaware at the time of entering into the contract, the ct. will not grant him relief, because of the great hardship which would be thereby imposed upon the innocent vendor.

(3) The jurisdiction to enforce specific performance with compensation for defects on a vendor, in cases where the contract is silent as to compensation, rests on the equitable estoppel referred to in Mortlock v. Buller, No. 19, ante, & Castle v. Wilkinson, No. 1425, ante, namely, that where a vendor has represented & contracted to sell an estate as his own, & the purchaser has relied on the representation, the vendor cannot afterwards be heard to say he has not the entirety.—*RUDD v. He had in fact given the tenant notice to quit at that time; the tenant did not quit. These representations were proved by witnesses:—Held: pltf. was entitled to be released from the agreement, or he might at his election perform it & have compensation. He elected to have performance, & it was decreed to him, with compensation & costs.—BESANT v. RICHARDS (1830), Tam. 509; 48 E. R. 203.

1431. Decree without order for compensation—Compensation unjust.—An estate was put up to sale in lots. In the particulars the lots were described respectively as "All that, etc., comprising Lot—in the sale plan." The sale plan, circulated at the auction, represented a well on Lot 4, with a drain & pipe conveying the water given to a purchaser by English cts. of equity, is unknown to the law of Scotland. That law rejects the actio quanti minoris, & its principle, for the reason apparently that to assess compensation to the purchaser for part of the estate sold, which the vendor has it not in his power to convey, would virtually be to make a new bargain for the parties which they had not

Pltf. the purchaser of Lot 1, filed his bill for specific performance, with compensation for the loss of the water, the vendor having conveyed away the other two lots without any reservation to pltf. of a right to the flow of water from the well:—Held: the sale plan, accurately describing the existing state of the property, would not carry the case higher than a view of the property by the purchaser, decree for specific performance without compensation.

Nothing could be more unjust after the vendor has put it out of his power, by conveyances, to grant it himself, to allow a purchaser to make this claim. . . . The ct. would not, after that, give pltf. the relief asked in respect of compensation (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—FEWSTER v. TURNER (1842), 11 L. J. Ch. 161; 6 Jur. 144.

B. aware that on a former occasion an attempted sale had gone off in consequence of A.'s wife refusing to bar her dower, asked as to this, & was informed that she would now join. Afterwards she refused to join:—Held: B. was entitled to compel a specific performance, with a compensation & indemnity against the right to dower.

Seemle: a proper indemnity would be to retain in ct. a third part of the purchase-money, the dividends to be paid to A. & his assigns during the joint lives of himself and wife: & if she survived A. to B. during her life: & upon her decease, the capital so retained in ct. to be paid to the husband A.

(2) At the hearing, the decree, as drawn up by pltf., was simply for specific performance, although the ct. had directed it to be without prejudice to the question of compensation:—Held: pltf. was not thereby precluded, as having elected to take the decree in that form, from asking for compensation.

Difficulty in decreeing a partial performance of a contract, where a vendor has not the power of fully performing it.

The general rule, subject to some qualification, undoubtedly is that where a party has entered into a contract for the sale of more than he has, the purchaser if he thinks fit to accept that which it is in the power of the vendor to give is entitled to a performance to that extent (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—GRAHAM v. 1453. ———.]—By a memorandum in writing, deft. agreed to let, & pltf. agreed to take, business premises for one year, with an option for pltf. at the end of the year to have a lease for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years. Pltf., having gone into possession under the agreement, & having laid out money in alterations, at the end of the year gave notice of their intention to exercise the option; but when deft.'s title came to be investigated it was found that she was possessed of only a moiety of the premises, the other moiety being vested in her son, a minor. Deft. was decreed to perform specifically so much of the contract as she was able to perform, with an abatement of one moiety of the rent.—BURROW v. SCAMMELL (1881), 19 Ch. D. 175; 51 L. J. 1456. ———.]—Necessity for purchaser's ignorance of state of title.—Pltf. & deft. had been partners in a brewery to which a number of tied houses were attached. In an action between them an order was made for dissolution & sale by tender. By the chief clerk's certificate deft. was declared the purchaser, as being the highest bidder, of the moiety of pltf.

The conditions, which were prepared by pltf.'s solr. & approved by deft.'s solr. & deft., provided that the title should be accepted as it stood, the properties being well known to both parties, & nothing was said about compensation. It subsequently transpired that certain of the properties which were to be conveyed as freeholds were copyholds. Negotiations thereupon took place between the parties & their legal advisers, & as it was feared that there would be delay, the properties being in mtge., a conveyance was executed by pltf. in the form settled by counsel. Deft., having had to pay a large sum in respect of enfranchisement of the copyholds, took out a summons in the action, in which he asked that pltf. might be ordered to pay him one-half of that sum in effect by way of compensation:—Held: the principle laid down in Mortlock v. Buller, No. 19, ante, which allowed the purchaser to insist on having all the vendor could convey, with a compensation for the difference, was confined to the class of cases where the vendor knew the title & the purchaser did not, & had no application to the present case, & therefore it was unnecessary to consider whether compensation could be enforced by a purchaser after the money was paid & the conveyance executed. The summons was accordingly dismissed.—HOPCRAFT v. HOPCRAFT (1897), 76 L. T. 341.

The ct. will not decree a specific performance which involves a breach of trust.

I think that pltf. when he filed this bill was aware of the circumstances in which this part of the matter rested & that he did so at his own risk, being aware or having good reason to believe that no good title could be made to the whole of these premises (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*MAW v. 1467. Whether specific performance decreed.—Deft. agreed to sell to pltf. certain lands in New South Wales free from incumbrances, & the greater part of the purchase-money was paid. On investigation of the title it appeared that these lands were held with other lands under a Crown grant, containing various reservations & conditions, with a proviso for re-entry on breach of condition. An order was made on appeal, declaring him entitled to compensation, & directing a reference as to the amount. In answer to this inquiry it was found that the amount of compensation could not be ascertained. Pltf. then filed a supplemental bill, asking that if the compensation could not be ascertained deft. might be decreed to repay with interest the part of the purchase-money which he had paid, & that pltf. might be declared entitled to a lien on the land for it:—Held: as pltf. was not bound to take the property without compensation, & as the compensation could not be ascertained, he was entitled to the return of his purchase-money with interest at 4 per cent., & to a lien on the estate for the amount.—*WESTMACOTT v. This is not a case in which the ct. could, upon any principle, assess compensation so as to make everything fair between them (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*DURIAM (EARL) v. The deposit money was paid & it was agreed that the remainder of the purchase-money should be paid & pltf. be let into possession on Feb. 4, then next. On Jan. 23 a tenant of the manor died, & the vendors thereupon admitted a new tenant on the ct. roll before Feb. 4 without communicating with the purchaser. By this admittance the property was for the first time brought within the operation of Copyhold Act, 1852 (c. 51), by which the lord may be compelled to enfranchise at the instance of the tenant. Pltf. insisted, first, that he was entitled to the fines paid on this admittance; & secondly, that having entered into the contract upon the faith of certain statements, he ought not now to be prejudiced by finding the enfranchisable value of the property impaired, & prayed for specific performance of the contract, with an abatement out of the purchase-money. Deft. demurred to the bill:—Held: the purchaser was not entitled to relief on account of calculations of value, founded on matters of chance, turning out to be fallacious.—*CUDDON v. SUB-SECT. 2.—CONTRACT WITH CONDITION FOR COMPENSATION.

A. Right of Vendor to Specific Performance Subject to Compensation.

1472. Error must not go to essence of contract.—The particulars of sale of certain property put up for sale by auction by deft. described the property as “four freehold ground rents of £19 4s. each—viz., £15 ground rent, & £4 4s. garden rent, amounting to £76 16s. a year, arising from four capital residences of the annual value of £384, held by four leases granted to W. R. for a term of ninety-five years each, wanting ten days, from Sept. 29, 1844, with reversion to the property in about eighty years”; & stated that the gardens would remain in the hands of the freeholder, & would be kept up by him; & that the property sold was to be taken as that comprised in the leases mentioned in the particulars, the counterparts of which would be produced at the sale. The 8th of the conditions of sale stated that the conveyance to a purchaser should contain a grant on the part of the vendor of the perpetual right of user of the gardens then enjoyed by the tenants of each house, as appurtenant to each house; & that the purchaser should, in consideration of such grant, grant to the vendor a perpetual yearly rentcharge of £1 1s. out of each such house, with the usual powers of distress; & the 10th condition provided that errors of description in the particulars should not vitiate the sale, but should be matter for compensation, as provided. Pltf. became the purchaser, & paid a deposit. The vendors to make out their title produced four counterparts of leases granted by one Roy to W. R. By each of the leases Roy, in consideration of the yearly rents thereafter reserved, & of the covenants thereafter contained, demised to W. R. a piece of land, with a messuage thereon for a term of ninety-five years, wanting ten days, at the yearly rent of £15; &, for the consideration aforesaid, & also in consideration of the further rent thereafter reserved, covenanted with W. R. that it should be lawful for him, & the tenants & occupiers of the messuage, at all times during the term, to enter into & use the pleasure ground or garden described in the lease, & that he, Roy, would keep it in order. Then followed a covenant by W. R. that he would pay Roy the said yearly rent thereinbefore reserved; &, also, “the further yearly rent or sum of £4 4s.,” in respect of the right of user of the garden, “such last mentioned rent to be payable on the days, & in all respects in a similar manner, with the rent of £15. Proviso for re-entry if the said yearly rents should be in arrear:—Held: (1) upon the construction of the leases, the £4 4s. was not an additional rent arising from the residences, but a sum in gross payable under the covenant; &, therefore, as no freehold ground rents of £19 4s. each, arising from the residences, could be conveyed to the purchaser, that he was entitled to rescind the contract, & recover back the deposit; (2) the thing sold was a different thing, & of a different nature from that contracted for; &, therefore, the purchaser was not bound to take it, with compensation under the 10th condition.—*ROBINS v. compensation, under a provision for arbn., authorising the arbitrator of either party to proceed in certain events ex parte. The title proved to be an underlease, for a term less by three days than the term of ninety-nine years granted by the original lease. The vendor filed a bill to enforce specific performance, with compensation to an amount which had been assessed, in conformity with the conditions, by one arbitrator, nominated by the vendor, the purchaser having taken no part in the arbn. 1482. — Renewable leaseholds.]—A vendor described part of the property as leasehold, renewable every twenty-one years on certain terms. The fourth condition of sale provided that the purchaser should, within fourteen days after delivery of abstract, send in his objections to the title, & that the vendor should be at liberty, at any time afterwards, to vacate the sale. The fifth condition provided that the existing lease should be taken as sufficient title to the leasehold part; & the sixth provided that if the estate should be improperly described, the error should not vitiate the sale, but should be the subject of compensation. The purchaser required further evidence of the right of renewal, & it was then discovered that no such right existed:—Held: "title" referred to title to the thing described, & not to the description of it; the vendor could not claim to vacate the sale, but the purchaser had a right to have the contract performed, with compensation.—PAINTER v. NEWBY (1853), 11 Hare, 26; 1 Eq. Rep. 173; 1 W. R. 284; 68 E. R. 1172; sub nom. NEWBY v. PAYNTER, 22 L. J. Ch. 871; 21 L. T. O. S. 299; 17 Jur. 483.

1483. — Condition that measurements be taken as correct—Condition for compensation for error—Error of magnitude.]—On a sale one of the conditions provided that if the purchasers should make any objection to, or requisition as to the title, evidence, conveyance, or as to compensation or otherwise which the vendor should be unwilling to remove or comply with, the vendor should be at liberty to vacate the sale. Another condition was that the admeasurements were presumed to be correct, but that if any error were discovered therein no allowance should be made or required either way. Another provided that if any error of any kind should be made in the description of the premises, such error should not invalidate the sale, but that compensation should be settled by a referee named in the condition. On a bill for specific performance by the purchaser with a deduction to be assessed by the referee for a deficiency in quantity of nearly one-half:—Held: although the ct. would not have enforced against the purchaser the condition as to erroneous admeasurements where the error was so great that condition was sufficient to exclude any right in the purchaser to a specific performance with a deduction, & the ct. in his suit for that relief decreed specific performance without deduction.—CORDINGLEY v. CHEESEBOROUGH (1862), 4 De G. F. & J. 379; 31 L. J. Ch. 617; 6 L. T. 342; 26 J. P. 644; 8 Jur. N. S. 755; 45 E. R. 1230, L. C.

1484. Condition allowing vendor to rescind contract—Action for specific performance & notice to rescind.]—On the sale of a copyhold manor, it was stated, that the "fine was two years' improved value." The 8th condition enabled the vendor, in case of any objection to title, to rescind, & the 11th condition provided for compensation in case of mistake or error. The abstract was delivered, & no objection was taken to the title, within the time prescribed for that purpose. Subsequently some doubt arose as to whether the fine was of one or two years' improved value:—Held: (1) so far plff. was entitled to specific performance with a compensation.

The purchaser having afterwards raised a question as to title, & filed a bill for specific performance, the vendor on the same day, gave notice to rescind:—Held: although the objection as to title was waived at the bar, the vendor had a right to insist on the contract having been rescinded, & the bill was dismissed.

(3) By the 8th condition of sale, a vendor reserved a right to rescind, in case of objection to title, etc., & by the 11th misdescriptions were not to annul the sale, but be the subject of compensation. Semble: the 8th condition did not apply to cases of misdescription within the 11th condition.—HOY v. SMYTHIES (1856), 22 Beav. 510; 28 L. T. O. S. 183; 2 Jur. N. S. 1011; 52 E. R. 1205.

1485. — —.]—Upon a sale of land, one of the conditions provided that if any objection was persisted in, the vendors might rescind the contract; & another condition provided that if any mistake should appear to have been made in the description of the property, or of the vendors' interest therein, such mistake should not vitiate the sale, but compensation should be given. The purchaser objected that certain minerals under the land appeared to belong to the lord of the manor; the vendors answered that this would not be compensated for, being the result of an enfranchisement as to which there was a condition.

o. Misdescription of property—Property subject to tithe-rentcharge.]—HAMILTON v. BATES, [1894] 1 I. R. 1—IR.

The purchaser persisted in the objection, & the vendors gave notice that they should rescind the contract. The purchaser then filed his bill for specific performance with compensation, & the vendors by their answer alleged that they had in fact a title to these minerals, but had rescinded under the conditions :—Held : the objection taken by the purchaser was an objection to title to part of the property sold, the removal of which might involve a long & expensive inquiry ; the vendors had a right to rescind, & performance with compensation would not be compelled.—MAWSON v. FLETCHER (1870), 6 Ch. App. 91 ; 40 L. J. Ch. 131 ; 23 L. T. 545 ; 35 J. P. 391 ; 19 W. R. 141, L. J. J.

1486. Defective title—To subjacent mines.]—

A condition giving the vendor the right to rescind in the event of his unwillingness to comply with an objection to the title, must not be considered as giving him an arbitrary power to annul the contract ; some reasonable ground for his unwillingness must be shown. Before a vendor will be allowed to rescind, he must satisfy the ct. that he entered into the contract in ignorance of some material fact or document, or under some mistaken notion that he was entitled to sell & could make a title ; there must be no failure of duty on his part, no element of shortcoming, & he must have omitted nothing which the ordinarily prudent man, having regard to his contractual relations with other persons, is bound to do.

J. & others contracted to sell to H. a villa residence by a description wide enough to include the mines & minerals under it. The contract provided, clause 13, that if the purchaser should "insist on any objection or requisition as to title" which the vendors should "be unable . . . or decline" to comply with, the vendors might rescind the contract ; & clause 14, that any error or misstatement should form the subject of compensation. The vendors believed that it was well known in the district that the minerals were reserved. The purchaser having insisted on a requisition that the vendors' title to the minerals should be furnished, the vendors gave a notice purporting to rescind the contract under clause 13 :—Held : though the purchaser's objection, was "an objection to the title" within the terms of clause 13, it was not an objection that the vendors could avail themselves of as a ground for rescinding the contract, having regard to the facts & their own conduct : & the purchaser was entitled, under clause 14, to a conveyance of the property with compensation in respect of the mines & minerals.—Re JACKSON & HADEN'S CONTRACT, [1906] 1 Ch. 412 ; 75 L. 1490. ———.]—Pltf. who had inspected the premises but not the leases, agreed to buy premises in the schedule to the contract for £1,400. The freehold property sold—viz. thirteen freehold houses—was stated in the schedule as Nos. 1 to 25, odd numbers, T-road ; Nos. 1 & 3 leased for ninety-nine years at £11 10s. per annum ; Nos. 5 & 7, 9, 11, 13, & 15, 17, & 19 respectively at £11 per annum ; & Nos. 21, 23, & 25 at £16 10s. per annum. In each lease there was reserved a separate rent for each house. There was evidence that the market value of adequately secured ground rents is unaffected by the number of amounts in which they are collected. The contract contained a clause (4) that no compensation should be allowed for any misstatement or error in the description of the premises, nor should it annul the sale, & in clause 6 there was a reference to the leases by which the "ground rents hereby sold are reserved." The purchaser claimed rescission, & the vendor counterclaimed for specific performance :—Held : the contract on its true construction referred to the houses in respective leases as being let at entire rents of £11 10s. £11, & £16 10s., & as there was a separate rent reserved for each house, this was an inaccurate statement by the vendor upon which the purchaser was entitled to rely. With reference to that misstatement the vendor was entitled to rely on clause 4 of the contract, & the misstatement or error would not annul the sale unless it was in a material & substantial point, but for which the purchaser would not have entered into the contract. The ct. ought not to regard the value alone, & pltf. being offered something substantially different from that which he contracted to buy was entitled to rescission & return of his deposit.—*LEE v. Pltf. executed the assignment, & tendered the deeds to deft. Deft. refused to receive the deeds, or to pay the money. Pltf. moved for leave to issue execution for the amount certified to be due, on the ground that he had performed the condition :—Held: pltf. must deposit the executed assignment & the deeds in ct., & on such deposit an order should be drawn up that pltf. should pay the amount certified & the costs of the motion within four days.—*BELL v. This order was not served on deft. The chief clerk made his certificate & fixed a time & place for payment. Pltf.s. attended on the day at the time & place fixed with the conveyance & title deeds, but deft. did not attend. Pltf.s. then moved that deft. might be ordered within four days after service to pay into ct. to the credit of the action the amount certified to be due from him, & that thereupon pltf.s. might execute a proper conveyance to him & deliver to him the title deeds :—Held: an order for payment into ct. could not be made as the judgment became a final & absolute order upon the certificate being made finding the amount due, & fixing the time & place for payment, but pltf.s. were entitled to a new order for payment to themselves of the amount found due within seven days after service of such new order for the purpose of working out the former order.—*ROBINSON v. A. In General.

1524. How liability determined—Whether title perfected on reference.]—Where strips of land lie between the highway & the adjoining inclosure, the legal presumption is, that the soil belongs to the owner of the adjoining old inclosure.

The fact of a title having been perfected in the master's office, does not determine the question of the costs of a suit for specific performance, which depends upon whether the defects which have been removed there, were the occasion of the suit.—*SCOONES v. 1528. ———.]—The costs of a suit for specific performance do not depend upon when a good title was first shown, but upon the conduct of each party in causing the litigation.

When costs are occasioned by the conduct of either party, the general rule is, that the party who occasioned must bear them; & when by the misconduct of both parties, neither has his costs.—PARR v. LOVEGROVE (1858), 31 L. T. O. S. 364; 4 Jur. N. S. 600; 6 W. R. 709.

1533. Action by first purchaser—Against vendor second purchaser & auctioneer—Action dismissed as against second purchaser & auctioneer.]—Conditions of sale stipulated that the sale should be completed on a certain day; & that objections to the title not made within twenty-one days from the delivery of the abstract should be considered as waived; & that, if the purchaser should not comply with the conditions, his deposit should be forfeited, & the vendor be at liberty to resell the property. The purchaser did not deliver his objections until several weeks after the expiration of the twenty-one days, & after the day appointed for completing the purchase: the vendor's solr., however, received them, and entered into a long correspondence with the purchaser on the subject of them, but without coming to a satisfactory conclusion. Finally, the vendor resold the property, but at a less price, notwithstanding the purchaser protested against the resale, & gave notice to the vendor of his intention to file a bill to enforce the contract. About six months afterwards he filed his bill, making the auctioneer & the purchaser at the resale, to whom he had some months before given notice of his prior contract, co-defts. to it. The court held that the benefit of the conditions had been waived by the vendor's solr., & decreed a specific performance, with a reference to the master as to title, & dismissed the bill, with costs as against the auctioneer, because he denied that he had ever intended to part with the deposit, & without costs as against the purchaser at the resale, who claimed the benefit of his contract if the ct. should think that pltf.'s ought not to be performed.—*CUTTS v. 1538. Set-off of costs against purchase-money—When allowed—Rescission action by vendor—Counterclaim for specific performance by purchaser.]—A vendor brought an action claiming a declaration that his contract for sale was at an end. The purchaser made a counterclaim for the specific performance of the contract. Judgment was given for deft., with costs on both claim & counterclaim:—Held: deft. was entitled to deduct his costs from his purchase-money in priority to a mtgee. of pltf., whose mtge. had been created after the contract for sale, but before the commencement of the action.—*GREEN v. Deft. had a beneficial interest, to the extent of one-fourth, in the intestate's estate, & it was alleged that except a mtge. there were no unpaid debts of the intestate, & that the purchase-money payable by pltf. represented the whole of the intestate's estate. The judgment not having been passed, & entered, pltf. moved for the addition of a direction enabling him to deduct the costs due to him from deft. from so much of the purchase-money as represented her beneficial interest in the intestate's estate:—Held: without some form of administration order, which the ct. had no power to make in this action, it was impossible to ascertain what the amount representing the beneficial interest of deft. was, so as to

B. Liability of Vendor.

1540. No title shown.—Vendor not making a good title ordered to pay costs, though he was only a trustee to sell.—EDWARDS v. HARVEY (1809), Coop. G. 40; 35 E. R. 470.

1541. ——A vendor who contracts to sell an estate, & files a bill for specific performance, must pay the costs, if it turns out he has no title.—EAGLE v. TAYLOR (1833), 3 L. J. Ch. 16.

1542. ——Where, in a suit by vendor for specific performance it was certified that a good title was not deduced, the ct. ordered a return to deft. of his deposit money, with interest at 4 per cent., & declared deft. entitled to a lien on the estate for same, & also for his costs, with liberty to apply, & subject thereto, dismissed the bill.—TURNER v. MARRIOTT (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 711; 15 L. T. 607; 15 W. R. 420.

1543. — Purchaser subsequently abandoning objections.—Where a vendor of land fails to make out a good title, the purchaser is entitled to the costs of an action for specific performance, though he afterwards abandons his objections to the vendor's title. But his right to costs may be lost if he brings the action to trial to obtain a decision on a separate point on which he eventually fails.—BALLARD v. SHUTT (1880), 15 Ch. D. 122; 49 L. J. Ch. 618; 43 L. T. 173; 29 W. R. 73.

1545. Title established before master—On different grounds from those in abstract.—Costs to a purchaser, the vendor having established his title before the master, after contest, upon a different ground from that in the abstract delivered.—FIELDER v. HIGGINSON (1814), 3 Ves. & B. 142; 35 E. R. 432, L. C.

1546. Title shown after action brought—Costs up to report of good title.—Vendor not making a title when bill filed, pays the costs up to the report of a good title.—HARFORD v. PURRIER (1816), 1 Madd. 532; 56 E. R. 195.

1548. Delivery of imperfect abstract—Costs until defects supplied.—WILSON v. ALLEN, No. 619, ante.

1549. Vendor unable to convey—Without direction of court.—Where it appears on the face of a bill for specific performance, that pltf. could not convey, according to the agreement, without the direction of the ct., he will not have the costs up to the hearing; but if deft. insists on inquiries into the title, & fails in them, pltf.'s costs incurred in these inquiries, & at the hearing on further directions, must be paid by deft.—ALLEN v. CURRIE (1823), 2 Coop. temp. Cott. 223; 1 L. J. O. S. Ch. 135; 47 E. R. 1139.

1550. — Without concurrence of third party.—Where the ct. has declared, in a suit for specific performance by a vendor, that the concurrence of judgment creditors where necessary, that being the substantial ground of the litigation, although a question of conveyance & not of title, vendor pltf. failing must pay the costs of the suit.

It is the duty of a vendor plaintiff who has a defective title, when the objection is removed, to offer to the purchaser the costs up to that time & to give him a conveyance.—FREER v. HESSE (1853), 4 De G. M. & G. 495; 2 Eq. Rep. 13; 23 L. J. Ch. 338; 17 Jur. 703; 43 E. R. 600, L. J.J.

1551. Vendor contracting to deduce title at own expense—No laches on either side—Costs out of vendor's estate.—Testatrix devised a freehold property in which she had an equitable estate in fee, to A. for life, with remainder to B. for life, with remainder to the family of B., who were infants, in strict settlement. She then contracted to sell part of the estate, & died before conveyance. After her decease the legal estate was got in, & the owners of it, together with the tenants for life, were willing to complete the purchase:—Held: in order to give the purchaser an immediate estate in fee, both legal & equitable, a decree for specific performance of the contract was necessary, & as this was a question of title, & the vendor had contracted to deduce a good title at her own expense, & there was no laches on either side, the costs of the suit must be paid out of the vendor's estate.—FARRAR v. WINTERTON (EARL) (1841), 4 Y. & C. Ex. 472; 160 E. R. 1092.

1552. Vendor having good title before hearing—Vendor's conduct causing great expense on reference—Costs only up to hearing.—Where pltf., vendor, has shown a good title according to the conditions of sale prior to the hearing but has been the means of great expense being incurred in prosecuting the inquiry at chambers, whither the cause was referred, instead of having the question decided at the hearing, the ct. will, in decreeing a specific performance, give him his costs up to the hearing only.—GOULD v. WHITE (1854), Kay 683; 2 Eq. Rep. 1100; 24 L. T. O. S. 43; 69 E. R. 291.

1553. Vendor insisting on unusual mode of executing conveyance.—A vendor insisted on executing the purchase deed without the purchaser or by agent of the purchaser being present, & also insisted on the purchase-money being paid not to himself but to his solr. or his solr.'s clerk, to neither of whom he had given any written authority to receive it. On the purchaser declining to complete the purchase in that mode, the vendor brought an action against him for the purchase-money:—Held: the vendor ought to pay all the costs of a suit instituted by the purchaser for the specific performance of the contract & for an injunction to stay the proceedings at law.—VINEY v. CHAPLIN (1858), 2 De G. & J. 468; 27 L. J. Ch. 434; 31 L. T. O. S. 142; 4 Jur. N. S. 619; 6 W. R. 562; 44 E. R. 1071, L. C. & L. J.J.; subsequent proceedings, 3 De G. & J. 282, L. C. & L. J.J.

1559. Declaration of right to forfeit deposit & re-sell—In lieu of decree for specific performance.—In an action by a vendor for the specific performance of an agreement to purchase real estate, the purchaser having accepted the title, but having failed to complete at the time fixed, there being a condition empowering the vendor, in case of the failure of the purchaser to comply with any of the conditions of sale, to forfeit the deposit & resell the property:—Held: in lieu of judgment for specific performance, a declaration may be made even though deft. had not appeared to the writ, that the vendor was entitled to forfeit the deposit, & resell the property, if the writ has claimed such a declaration in the alternative, but the order should direct pltf. to pay the costs of the action.—KINGDON v. KIRK (1887), 37 Ch. D. 141; 57 L. J. Ch. 328; 58 L. T. 383; 36 W. R. 430.

1564. ——— Knowledge of defects before hearing—Waiver of objections.—A bill prayed the specific performance of an agreement, "if a good title could be made." At the hearing it was declared that the agreement ought to be specifically performed, & it was referred to the master to inquire whether a good title could be made. The master reported in the negative. Pltf. on further directions waived all objections to the title, & proposed to take the property; this was resisted by the vendor:—Held: pltf. was entitled, but being aware at the first hearing, of the objections to the title, he ought to pay the costs of the investigation in the master's office.—*BENNETT v. complete, & never expressed a wish to rescind. In 1857, S. filed a bill for partition, & died in Mar. 1858, leaving a will made in 1856, by which he devised his estates to infants, two of whom were his heirs. In July, 1861, S.'s exors. revived the partition suit, & in Jan. 1862, G. was made a party by amendment, pursuant to an arrangement made at his request in May, 1861. In July, 1862, a decree for partition was obtained & the certificate made in July, 1863. G., who had, in June, 1854, when the dispute arose with the co-owner, given notice that he would not pay interest, but had ever since employed the purchase-money in his trade, refusing to pay interest, S.'s exors., in 1864, filed a bill against him & the infant devisees for specific performance, & the Master of the Rolls decreed specific performance, & ordered G. to pay interest from June, 1854, & to pay all pltf.'s costs:—Held: the purchaser ought not to have been ordered to pay the whole costs, for if there had been no dispute about the interest a suit would have been necessary on account of the devise to the infants, & in such a suit the purchaser, in the opinion of KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J., would have been entitled to his costs; & in the opinion of TURNER, L.J., would in the circumstances of the case neither have received nor paid costs.—*WILLIAMS v. (c) Groundless Objections by Purchaser.

1582. Whether liable for costs.—Lands were settled on A. for life, remainder to his wife for life, remainder to their children, with a power of revocation & appointment to new uses by the husband & wife jointly; proviso that if A. should become bkpt., etc., then the limitation to him for life should cease, & the lands should go to trustees during his life, for the benefit of his wife & children. A. agreed for the sale of this estate, & proposed to make title to the purchaser by executing this power of revocation. The conveyancer on the part of the purchaser required an indemnity against A.'s having committed any secret acts of bkpey., for that the power of revocation would be extinguished by the forfeiture of the life interest of A. On a bill filed by A. to compel the performance of this contract, the ct. thought there was no ground for the objection, & that the mistake in opinion of the conveyancer could not save deft. from costs.—MALING v. HILL (1785), 1 Cox, Eq. Cas. 186; 29 E. R. 1121, L. C.

1583. —.]—THORPE v. FREER, No. 1595, post.

1584. —.]—To a bill by a vendor for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of property, deft. raised three objections, & at the hearing failed in two; the usual reference was made to inquire if pltf. could make a good title:—Held: deft. ought to pay so much of the costs of the suit as had been occasioned by his unsuccessful objections.—SMALLWOOD v. COTTY (1837), 6 L. J. Ch. 265.

1585. —.]—(1) Where a vendor had entered into a covenant for himself, his heirs, exors., & administrators, not to erect certain buildings upon a piece of land contracted to be sold, & neither in the agreement for sale of the land nor the abstract of title was any notice taken of the covenant:—Held: the purchaser was not bound to complete his contract.

(2) Unnecessary evidence having been gone into on both sides, & some untenable exceptions having been taken to a title in a suit for specific performance of a contract for the purchase of land, the ct., though it gave judgment for deft., would not allow him his costs of the evidence or the costs occasioned by the untenable exceptions.—BRISTOW v. WOOD (1844), 1 Coll. 480; 14 L. J. Ch. 50; 4 L. T. O. S. 92; 9 Jur. 99; 63 E. R. 508.

1586. —.]—A trustee, having power to sell land in order to raise £600, & the expenses, put it up to sale in two lots, & sold the first for £600, & the second for £510. The second lot consisted of more than 3 acres of land, & was described in the particulars of sale as readily convertible into building ground:—Held: the sale of the second lot was not improper, & the purchasers must pay the costs of a suit for specific performance brought against them by the trustee.

A purchaser failing in his objections to the title, must pay the costs of the suit (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—THOMAS v. TOWNSEND (1852), 16 Jur. 736.

1588. — On reference as to title—Plaintiff insisting on reference.—ALLEN v. CURRIE, No. 1549, ante.

1589. — — — Costs of action after first decree.]

—A suit was instituted by A., as vendor, against B. for the specific performance of a contract of sale of leasehold property. B. by his answer, stated that the sale had been made by auction, & insisted that A. was not entitled to a decree, on the ground that he had employed puffers at the sale. At the hearing of the cause, it was decided that the case set up by B. was not a valid defence to the suit, & the usual reference was made to the master. In the master's office, an objection was made by B. to the title, which was at once removed by A. The master found that A. had made a good title to the property, but had first shown a good title in the master's office:—Held: B. ought to pay all the costs of the suit after the first decree.—WOODWARD v. MILLER (1846), 16 L. J. Ch. 16; 8 L. T. O. S. 183; 10 Jur. 1027.

1590. — — — Costs of proceedings in which vendor's title established.]—On a sale of real estate by a trustee, under a will open to suspicion as having been obtained by undue influence, the title was approved, but before the actual completion of the contract the heir-at-law gave notice that he intended to dispute the will, & brought an action against the tenant for rent: the purchaser thereupon refused to complete, & a bill for specific performance was filed, but before it came to a hearing the action brought by the heir was tried, & a verdict given against the heir; a reference as to title was then directed, & the master having reported in favour of the title, a decree was made for specific performance. On appeal, however, by the purchaser, the Lord Chancellor ordered the case to stand over generally, with liberty for the vendor to take such proceedings for establishing the will as he should be advised. The vendor then instituted a suit against the heir, which resulted in the will being established. The Lord Chancellor

the costs of the suit.—MILLER v. OSTRANDER (1866), 12 Gr. 349.—CAN.

e. Attempt to repudiate after agreement to complete.—Action to obtain decree for specific performance against a purchaser who sought to repudiate contract, but who, prior to hearing of action agreed to complete:—

Held: pltf. was entitled to a decree & to have costs of the action paid by deft.—MCCREEDY v. TREANOR (1918) 52 I. L. T. 100.—IR.

thereupon confirmed the decree for specific performance, & directed the purchaser to pay interest from the time when under the contract the sale ought to have been completed, & also to pay the costs of the suit subsequently to the hearing when the reference as to title was directed; his Lordship held that at that time there had been such reasonable inquiry into the title as ought to have satisfied the purchaser, & that therefore the consequences of the further proceedings by which the will was established, both in reference to the costs of the suit for specific performance & the payment of interest, must fall on the purchaser.—GROVE v. BASTARD (1851), 1 De G. M. & G. 69; 42 E. R. 478, L. C.

D. No Costs Given.

1591. Title not clear on abstract.]—Decree for specific performance without costs to pltf. the vendor: the title, though established before the master, not being clear upon the abstract.—v. COLLINGE (1814), 3 Ves. & B. 143, n.; 35 E. R. 433.

1592. No title shown.]—LEWIS v. LOXHAM, No. 1200, ante.

1593. ———.]—Where a bill for specific performance is filed by a purchaser, & it turns out that the vendor cannot make a good title, the bill is dismissed, but without costs.—MALDEN v. FYSON (1816), 9 Beav. 317; 7 L. T. O. S. 108; 50 E. R. 377; subsequent proceedings (1847), 11 Q. B. 292. Annotations:—Refd. Swinfen v. Chelmsford (1860), 5 H. & N. 890; *Omions v. 1594. Fair objection to title.]—Specific performance decreed against a purchaser of the fee, but without costs, a fair objection having been made to the title.—ASLABLE v. RICE (1818), 3 Madd. 256; 56 E. R. 503.

Annotation:—Mentd. Egerton v. Brownlow (1853), 4 H. L. Cas. 1.

1595. ———.]—If a purchaser makes frivolous objections to a title, he pays the costs; but not if he makes a fair objection, or insists on inquiry as to a material fact, respecting which there is a fair doubt.—THORPE v. FREEER (1819), 4 Madd. 466; 56 E. R. 777.

1596. Vendor refusing to produce documents insisted on by purchaser.]—NEWALL v. SMITH, No. 621, ante.

1597. Allegations on both sides incorrect.]—A vendor filed a bill for specific performance, alleging that deft. had accepted the title; deft. resisted it on the ground that the bkpcy. under which pltf. claimed was invalid. Neither allegation turned out correct, & though a good title was first shown in the master's office, the decree was made without costs.—SIDEBOTHAM v. BARRINGTON (1842), 5 Beav. 261; 49 E. R. 578.

Annotation:—Refd. Fraser v. Wood (1845), 8 Beav. 339.

1598. Vendor unable to convey.]—A railway co. having under their act the usual power to sell surplus lands, with a direction to offer them in the first instance to the owners of the adjoining lands, entered into a contract for sale to a stranger, & then made an offer of the same lands to the parties who were entitled to the right of pre-emption, which offer was declined; the purchaser refused to complete his contract, because the last mentioned offer had not been made prior to the contract with him, & the co. filed a bill to compel specific performance:—Held: the objection was a question of conveyance & not of title, & the purchaser must complete the contract; but the ct. refused to give pltf. the costs of the suit.—LONDON & GREENWICH RY. CO. v. GOODCHILD (1844), 3 Ry. & Can. Cas. 507; 13 L. J. Ch. 224; 8 Jur. 455.

1599. Walver by purchaser of time for completion—Vendor unable to give vacant possession—Purchaser refusing to complete.]—Where a purchaser had by his acts waived the time of completion in the first instance & had gone on for some time inducing the vendor to incur expenses to perfect his title, & suddenly, upon the discovery that vacant possession could not be given according to stipulation, declined to complete, the ct., although it dismissed a bill filed against such a purchaser for a specific performance, dismissed it without costs.—NOKES v. KILMOREY (LORD) (1847), 1 De G. & Sm. 444; 63 E. R. 1141.

1602. Vendor's conduct necessitating action.]—A contract for the purchase of copyright from deft. not having been completed, in consequence of his having, though he considered time was of the essence of the contract, fixed a later period than that originally agreed upon for that purpose, and for the payment of the purchase-money, it was, on motion by deft. to dismiss a bill for specific performance with costs, & on cross motion by pltf. to dismiss the bill without costs:—Held: as pltf. had been compelled to resort to the ct. for relief, his bill must be dismissed without costs.—GOODDAY v. SLEIGH (1854), 24 L. T. O. S. 121; 1 Jur. N. S. 201; 3 W. R. 87.

1603. Misconduct of both parties.]—PARR v. LOVEGROVE, No. 1528, ante.

1604. Claim by third party—Independently of vendor & purchaser.]—HESELTINE v. SIMMONS, No. 589, ante.

1605. Groundless objection by purchaser.]—A vendor being entitled under a limitation to uses to bar dower, without a power of appointment, the purchaser insisted on the concurrence of the dower trustee. The trustee being abroad, the vendor filed a bill to enforce specific performance, without his being a party to the conveyance. The judge held, that the objection was well founded, & made a decree for specific performance, with an order vesting the estate of the dower trustee in the purchaser upon the execution of the conveyance by the vendor; but considering the objection, though tenable, to be frivolous & vexatious, he gave no costs to either party:—Held: an appeal by the purchaser, the objection was frivolous & vexatious, & ought not to have been insisted on; & costs ought not to be given to the purchaser.—COLLARD v. ROE (1859), 4 De G. & J. 525; 28 L. J. Ch. 560; 7 W. R. 623; 45 E. R. 204, L. C. & L. J.J.

1606. Action rendered necessary by lunacy of vendor—To obtain vesting order.]—Where, by the lunacy of a vendor, a decree in a suit for specific performance is necessary as ground for a vesting order, no costs will be given on either side.—CRESSWELL v. HAINES (1861), 31 L. J. Ch. 237; 8 Jur. N. S. 208; 10 W. R. 121.

have possession on a certain day; "all outgoing" up to that day being cleared by the vendors. The vendors refused to pay half a quarter's rent which had accrued due between the last quarter day & the date fixed for completion. The purchaser, after several attempts at accommodation, declined to complete:—Held: the vendors were entitled to specific performance, subject to their paying the half quarter's rent in question; but as the purchaser had refused to accede to inexpensive modes which had been proposed for adjusting the dispute, there should be no order as to costs.—LAWES v. GIBSON (1865), L. R. 1 Eq. 135; 35 L. J. Ch. 148; 13 L. T. 316; 29 J. P. 792; 11 Jur. N. S. 873.

1608. Vendor able to discover defect before sale.]—PHILLIPSON v. GIBSON, No. 674, ante.

1609. Purchaser's delay in making objection.]—Where a decree is made for specific performance of a contract for sale, & an inquiry is directed in general terms whether the vendor can make a good title, it must be understood to mean a good title having regard to the terms of the contract; but if the vendor wishes to prevent objections which have been waived before the suit from being renewed under the inquiry, that point should be considered at the hearing & notices in the decree. Land was described in a contract for sale as freehold, but it was shown by the abstract that it was formerly copyhold, & had been enfranchised under the Enfranchisement Acts. A decree was afterwards made at the suit of the vendor for specific performance & a general inquiry directed as to title, in the course of which the purchaser for the first time objected that the minerals were reserved to the lord of the manor under the Enfranchisement Acts:—Held: the objection was fatal to the title; but as the purchaser had taken the objection so late he was not allowed his costs.—UPPEYTON v. NICKOLSON (1871), 6 Ch. App. 436; 40 L. J. Ch. 401; 25 L. T. 4; 35 J. P. 532; 19 W. R. 733, L. J.J.

i. Unsuccessful defence of fraud.]—The vendee set up that he had been led into drink by the fraudulent contrivances of the vendor, & while intoxicated had been induced to sign the agreement, in which the price stipulated was most exorbitant. It was clearly shown that the purchaser had executed the contract while intoxicated, & that the price was exorbitant, but the ct. exonerated the vendor from any fraud, & therefore refused deft. his costs on dismissing the bill for specific performance.—SCHOFIELD v. TUMMONDS (1858), 6 Gr. 568.—CAN.

g. —.]—TENUTE v. WALSH (1893), 21 O. R. 309.—CAN.

h. Delay in completion of title.]—A purchaser from defts. at a public auction, filed a bill for specific performance, injunction, & compensation, alleging misconduct of deft.'s agents at the sale & otherwise, & consequent damage to him, which allegations were partly disproved by the evidence. However, as the delay in completing the title was owing in a great measure to defts., the ct. made a decree for specific performance & injunction; but without costs or compensation.—*MOSSOP v. Part I.—In General.

1. Meaning of statute—Act.]—The word statute may mean what we call an Act of Parliament, or a code, as the Statute of Westminster I, or all the Acts passed during one session of Parliament which was the original meaning of the word (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.) R. v. BAKEWELL (1857), 7 E. & B. 848; 26 L. J. M. C. 150; 29 L. T. O. S. 209; 3 Jur. N. S. 1003; 5 W. R. 655; 21 J. P. Jo. 357; 119 E. R. 1161.

2. ——— Code.]—R. v. BAKEWELL, No 1, ante.

3. ——— All Acts of a session.]—R. v. BAKEWELL, No 1, ante.

4. Distinguished from Parliamentary declaration.]—The Earl was beheaded by Henry of Lancaster when he invaded England, & before he had received or even claimed the Crown. There was no evidence whether there had been any trial, or form of trial, before the beheading. When Henry was declared King a proceeding took place in Parliament in which the Commons were represented to have prayed that all that was done in “the pursuit, arrest, & judgment” of the Earl might be declared good for the common profit of the realm. The King, with the assent of the Lords Temporal, declared that it was so. This proceeding was entered on the Placita Coronæ in Parliament, but not on the Rolls of Parliament.

Semble: this was not an Act of Parliament; but, it was a solemn adjudication pronounced by the King in open Parliament at the prayer of the Commons, & with the advice of the Lords, & must be taken as a Parliamentary declaration that, whatever had been the nature of the grant to the Earl, it was wholly at an end.—WILTES PEERAGE CLAIM (1869), L. R. 4 H. L. 126.

Annotations:—Mentd. Re Buckhurst Peerage (1876), 2 App. Cas. 1; Rhondda's Claim, [1922] 2 A. C. 339.

5. Objects of statute law.]—Statute law, which corrects, abridges and explains the common law (COKE, C.J.).—ROWLES v. MASON (1612), 2 Brownl. 192; 123 E. R. 892.

6. ———.]—Every act is made, either for the purpose of making a change in the law, or for the purpose of better declaring the law (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—ELY (DEAN) v. BLISS (1842), 5 Beav. 574; 11 L. J. Ch. 351; 6 Jur. 496; 19 E. R. 700; on appeal (1844), 3 L. T. O. S. 98, L. C.

7. Validity of statutes—Necessity for concurrence of three estates of the realm.—Proceedings by King & Lords.]—ANON. (1488), Jenk. 177; 145 E. R. 117.

8. ——— ——— ———.]—The words, by authority of Parliament, in an Act or charter are sufficient to make it an Act of Parliament.

An Act of Parliament penned by assent of the King and of the Lords Spiritual & Temporal & of the Commons, is a good Act. But an Act penned that the King with the assent of the Lords, or that the King with the assent of the Commons, is no Act of Parliament.

If they be entered in the Parliament roll & always allowed for Acts of Parliament, it shall be intended that it was by authority of Parliament (per CUR.).—THE PRINCE'S CASE (1606), 8 Co. Rep. 13b; 77 E. R. 496.

10. ——— ——— Proceedings by King—Proceedings in Convocation.]—No new laws can be made to bind the whole people, but by the King, with the advice & consent of both Houses of Parliament, & by their united authority.

Every man may be said to be party to, & the consent of every subject is included in, an Act of Parliament; but in Canons made in Convocation, & confirmed by the Crown only, all these are wanting, except the royal assent.

Subsequent Acts of Parliament in the affirmation giving new penalties, do not repeal former ordained by preceding Acts without negative words.

A later Act of Parliament hath never been construed to repeal a prior Act, without words of repeal, unless there be a contrariety & repugnancy between them, or at least some notice taken of the former law in the subsequent one, so as to indicate an intention in the law makers to repeal it (LORD

Part II.—Classification and Framework.

SECT. 1.—CLASSIFICATION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—PUBLIC, LOCAL, PRIVATE.

A. In General.

16. Origin of classification—Resolution of Lords & Commons—Requiring publication in separate volumes.]—(1) On May 1, 1797, the House of Lords resolved that the Queen's printer should class the general statutes, & special & public, & local & private, in separate volumes, & on May 8, 1801, there was a resolution of the House of Commons, agreed to by the House of Lords, that the general statutes, public, local & personal, in each session, should be classed in separate volumes: that was the commencement of that division of the statutes (PARKE, B.).

(2) It [7 & 8 Vict. c. 84] is clearly of a local & personal nature, local in being confined to local limits, & personal as affecting a particular description of persons only, as distinguished from that of all the Queen's subjects (PARKE, B.).—RICHARDS v. EASTO (1846), 3 Dow. & L. 515; 15 M. & W. 244; 15 L. J. Ex. 163; 8 L. T. O. S. 253; 10 Jur. 695; 153 E. R. 840.

17. Dependent on substance & character.]—The test of what are "local & personal" Acts is the substance & character of the Acts themselves, & not the mere form of description.—R. v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL (1893), 69 L. T. 440; 37 Sol. Jo. 619, D. C.; on appeal, [1893] 2 Q. B. 454, C. A.

Annotation:—Refd. R. v. Electricity Comrs., Ex p. London Electricity Joint Committee Co. (1920), Ltd., [1924] 1 K. B. 171.

18. Not dependent on technical considerations—Clause declaring Act to be public.]—DAWSON v. PAVER, No. 1689, post.

19. Statutes in part public.]—An Act of Parliament concerning the revenue of the King is a public law; but it may be private in respect to some clauses in it relating to a private person (HOLT, C.J.).—ANON. (1698), 12 Mod. Rep. 249; 88 E. R. 1298.

Annotation:—Consd. R. v. L. C. C., [1893] 2 Q. B. 454.

21. ———.]—R. v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, No. 22, post.

B. Public General Acts.

22. Characteristics—Application to whole community.]—Now, a general Act, prima facie, is that which applies to the whole community. In the natural meaning of the term it means an Act of Parliament which is unlimited both in its area & as regards the individual, in its effects; & as opposed to that you get statutes which may well be public because of the importance of the subjects with which they deal & their general interest to the community, but which are limited in respect of area, a limitation which makes them local, or limited in respect of individuals or persons a limitation which makes them personal (BOWEN, L.J.).

All Acts which deal with the administration of justice differ in toto from the class of local & personal Acts. They are not limited in the true sense either as regards place or persons (BOWEN, L.J.).

It does not require much authority to show that when the Legislature speaks of amending any local or personal Act its language is to be applied to portions of Acts which are local & personal just as much as to an Act which is entirely of that nature. The question is not in such a case whether the entire statute is local & personal, but whether the portion of the statute which is proposed to be amended is so (BOWEN, L.J.).

PART II. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.—B.

22 1. Characteristics—Application to whole community.]—MARKLAND v. BARTLET (1824), Tay, 146.—CAN.

Although some parts of an Act of Parliament may be public & general, yet other parts of the same Act of Parliament may be local & personal (KAY, L.J.).—R. v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, [1893] 2 Q. B. 454; 63 L. J. Q. B. 4; 69 L. T. 580; 58 J. P. 21; 42 W. R. 1; 9 T. L. R. 601; 37 Sol. Jo. 669; 4 R. 531, C. A.

23. — Rights of public involved.—Metropolitan Police Acts are not “Acts of a local & personal nature” within Limitations of Actions & Costs Act, 1842 (c. 97), s. 5, which extends the time of bringing actions under such Acts to two years.

They are classed with the “public & general Acts” & not with the “public local & personal Acts” according to the division directed by the Houses of Parliament as mentioned in Richards v. Easto, No. 16, ante; & they are not, in our judgment, of a local & personal nature within Limitations of Actions & Costs Act, 1842 (c. 97), considering the public importance of the rights involved in them & the generality of their application in all districts within Metropolitan Police Acts (DENMAN, C.J.).—BARNETT v. COX (1846), 9 Q. B. 617; 2 New Mag. Cas. 16; 2 New Sess. Cas. 486; 16 L. J. M. C. 27; 8 L. T. O. S. 160; 11 J. P. 118; 115 E. R. 1410; sub nom. BARRETT v. COX, 11 Jur. 118.

SUB-SECT. 1.—HEADING OR TITLE.

A. In General.

See, generally, Short Titles Act, 1896 (c. 14).

41. Acts not originally intitled.]—Originally there were no titles to the Acts, but only a petition & the King's answer (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—A.-G. v. WEYMOUTH (LORD) (1743), Amb. 20; 27 E. R. 11, L. C.

Annotations:—Refd. Salkeld v. Johnson (1848), 2 Exch. 256. Mentd. Arnold v. Chapman (1748), 1 Ves. Sen. 108; Mogg v. Hodges (1750), 2 Ves. Sen. 52; A.-G. v. Tyndall (1761), 2 Eden, 207; Mvers v. Perigal (1852), 17 Jur. 115; Jeffries v. Alexander (1860), 8 H. L. Cas. 591, Arden v. Arden (1885), 29 Ch. D. 702.

42. —.]—The title of the Act is but a new usage & begun about 11 Hen. 7 (TREBY, C.J.).—CHANCE v. ADAMS (1696), 1 Ld. Raym. 77; 91 E. R. 948.

Annotations:—Refd. Doe d. Burtwhistle v. Vardill (1810), 6 Bing. N. C. 385; Nixon v. Nanney (1841), 1 Q. B. 747; Coomber v. Berks JJ. (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 17. Mentd. Dyer v. Best (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 152.

Short title.]—See Part X., Sect. 2, post.

Use of title in construing statute.]—See Part III., Sect. 2, sub-sect. 8, A., post.

B. Whether Part of Statute.

43. Former law.]—The style or title of an Act is not parcel of the Act.—POWLER'S CASE (1610), 11 Co. Rep. 29 a; 77 E. R. 1181.

Annotations:—Refd. Salkeld v. Johnson (1848), 2 Exch. 256. Mentd. Foster's Case (1615), 11 Co. Rep. 58b; Holmes's Case (1631), Cro. Car. 376; Bealy v. Sampson (1689), 2 Vent. 93; *R. v. 44. —.]—(1) The title of an Act of Parliament is not a part of the law or enacting part, no more than the title of a book is part thereof, for the title is not the law, but the name or description given to it by the makers (HOLT, C.J.).

(2) The preamble of a statute is no part of it, but contains generally the motives or inducements thereof (HOLT, C.J.).—MILLS v. WILKINS (1703), Holt, K. B. 662; 6 Mod. Rep. 62; 2 Salk. 609; 3 Salk. 331; 90 E. R. 1266.

45. —.]—A.-G. v. WEYMOUTH (LORD), No. 41, ante.

46. —.]—The title is no part of the law; it does not pass with the same solemnity as the law itself (MANSFIELD, C.J.).—R. v. WILLIAMS (1757), as reported in 2 Keny. 68; 1 Wm. Bl. 93; 96 E. R. 51.

Annotations:—Refd. R. v. Wallis (1793), 5 Term Rep. 375; Salkeld v. Johnson (1848), 2 Exch. 256. Mentd. R. v. M'Kay (1826), 5 B. & C. 640; Darley v. R. (1846), 12 Cl. & Fin. 520; *R. v. 47. —.]—No more argument can justly be built upon the title prefixed in some editions of the statutes, than upon the marginal notes against its different sections (TINDAL, C.J.).—BIRTWHISTLE v. VARDILL (1840), 7 Cl. & Fin. 895; 7 E. R. 1308; sub nom. Doe d. BIRTWHISTLE v. VARDILL, West. 500; 1 Scott, N. R. 828; sub nom. Doe d. BURTWHISTLE v. VARDILL, 6 Bing. N. C. 385, H. L.

Stamford*, [1892] 3 Ch. 88.

48. —.]—SALKELD v. JOHNSON (OR JOHNSTON), No. 119, post.

49. —.]—The title of an Act of Parliament is no part of the law, but it may tend to show the object of the legislature (WIGHTMAN, J.).—JOHNSON v. UPHAM (1859), 2 E. & E. 250; 28 L. J. Q. B. 252; 33 L. T. O. S. 327; 5 Jur. N. S. 681; 121 E. R. 95.

50. —.]—(1) An Act of Parliament, though not expressly repealed by a subsequent Act, is by being brought into contradiction with it, virtually repealed either in whole or in part (COCKBURN, C.J.)

(2) Recitals in a private Act of Parliament could never be held to bind persons who were not parties to the Act (COCKBURN, C.J.).

(3) . . . The title of the Act, which I apprehend is no part of the Act & ought not in strictness to be referred to (BYLES, J.).

(4) An estate Act is to be construed according to the intention of the Legislature clearly expressed therein, & its validity cannot be questioned on the suggested ground that all parties who ought to have been were not before Parliament during its discussion or that Parliament assented to it under a false impression imposed upon them by interested parties in the absence of other parties equally interested.

(5) Where the performance of an Act is made a condition precedent to the exercise of a power, & the performance afterwards becomes impossible by act of law, the result is, that the exercise of the power becomes impossible, not that it can be exercised without the performance of the act.—*SHREWSBURY (EARL) v. SUB-SECT. 4.—HEADING OF PARTS.

61. Nature of heading—Distinguished from marginal notes.]—These various headings are not to be treated as if they were marginal notes, or were introduced into the Act merely for the purpose of classifying the enactments. They constitute an important part of the Act itself. They may be read, I think, not only as explaining the sects. which immediately follow them, as a preamble to a statute may be looked to, to explain its enactments, but as affording, as it appears to me, a better key to the constructions of the sects. which follow than might be afforded by a mere preamble (CHANNELL, B.).—EASTERN COUNTIES & LONDON & BLACKWALL RY. COS. v. MARRIAGE (1860), 9 H. L. Cas. 32; 31 L. J. Ex. 73; 11 E. R. 639, H. L.; reversg. S. O. sub nom. MARRIAGE v. EASTERN COUNTIES RY. CO. & LONDON & BLACKWALL RY. CO. (1857), 2 H. & N. 625, Ex. Ch.

Tyne Improvement Comrs., [1894] A. C. 508. Mentd. Tetley v. Wanless (1866), L. R. 1 Exch. 21.

62. ———.]—I may observe that these headings in this Act are not to be looked upon as marginal notes inserted, perhaps, not by Parliament, but by the printer, because they are referred to in the body of the Act itself (LORD CAIRNS, C.).—LANG v. KERR, ANDERSON & CO. (1878), 3 App. Cas. 529, H. L.

63. ———.]—These headings are not, in my opinion, mere marginal notes, but the sects. in the group to which they belong must be read in connection with them & interpreted by the light of them (LORD HERSHELL.).—INGLIS v. ROBERTSON, [1898] A. C. 616; 67 L. J. P. C. 108; 79 L. T. 224; 14 T. L. R. 517, H. L.

64. ——— Part of Act of Parliament.]—I cannot come to the conclusion that the heading of a series of sects. introduced into an Act of Parliament is not to be considered as part of the Act. I think that that word “appeal” at the head of the sect. may properly be considered as part & used for the purpose of construing any doubtful matter in the sects. under that very heading (BRETT, L.J.).—R. v. PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 5.

f. Sections—Nature of.]—The word “section” does not necessarily mean one of the divisions of an Act numbered as such, but may refer, if the context requires it, to any distinct enactment, of which there may be several included under one number.—

66. Provisoes—Nature.]—(1) Now, in order to ascertain the sense in which they [particular words] are used in this Act of Parliament, we may fairly look to other Acts of Parliament relating to the same subject-matter; & if we find these very words used in a restrained sense in those Acts, we ought to construe them in the same sense in this Act, for it is a fair rule of construction, that the same words in a statute in pari materia respecting the same subject, should receive the same meaning (BAYLEY, J.).

(2) Now a proviso is something engrafted on a preceding enactment (BAYLEY, J.).—R. v. TAUNTON ST. JAMES (INHABITANTS) (1829), 9 B. & C. 831; 4 Man. & Ry. K. B. 695; 2 Man. & Ry. M. C. 406; 8 L. J. O. S. M. C. 26; 109 E. R. 309.

72. ——— Note on Queen's Printer's copy.]—

The marginal note to a sect. of a statute in the copy printed by the Queen's Printer, forms no part of the statute itself, & is not binding as an explanation or construction of the sections.

Formerly, at one stage of the bill in Parliament, it was ordered to be ingrossed upon one or more rolls of parchment. That practice seems to have continued down to the session of 1849. Since that time the only record of the proceedings of Parliament . . . is to be found in the copy printed by the Queen's Printer. . . . This change . . . cannot affect the rule which treats the title of the Act, the marginal notes, & the punctuation, not as forming part of the Act, but merely as temporanea expositia (WILLES, J.).—CLAYDON v. GREEN, GREEN v. CLAYDON (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 511; 37 L. J. C. P. 226; 18 L. T. 607; 16 W. R. 1126.

B. Forms Appended in Schedules.

88. *How far variation permissible.]—An order made by justices of peace under 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 19, for stopping up an old footway & setting out a new one, must follow the form prescribed in the schedule annexed to the Act, & set forth the length & breadth of the new footway; otherwise it is no answer to a justification of a right of way pleaded to an action of trespass quare clausum fregit brought by the owner of the soil over which the old way led. The statute requires, that the form set forth in the schedule "shall be used on all occasions, with such additions & variations only as may be necessary to adapt it to the particular exigency of the case." Under these words a material variance from the form prescribed is fatal, & may be taken advantage of in a collateral proceeding.—DAVISON v. GILL (1800), 1 East, 64; 102 E. R. 25.*

D. Plans Annexed by Way of Schedules.

95. Act empowering compulsory acquisition of land.]—A public co. taking land under compulsory powers, is bound to give to the landowner precise information as to the quantity of land to be taken, & the way in which it is to be used; & where any doubt arises as to the extent of the power conferred by the Legislature, the ct. will construe it in the way most beneficial to the landowner.

In legislating for public undertakings & conferring compulsory powers to take land, Parliament has at all times manifested the utmost anxiety to impose upon the co. or the undertakers the obligation of giving to the landowner the most precise & definite information with regard to the quantity of land to be taken, & the manner in which the land is intended to be affected, & the enactments contained in the Acts of Parliament conferring the powers to carry an undertaking into effect will be generally found to embody, by reference, the plans & the notice given by the plans to the landowners of the intention of the co. 98 i. To interpret statutes—Not to alter or amend.]—When it is found that a statute is within the competency of the legislature, & the language thereof is sufficiently clear to enable the ct. to determine what the legislature meant, the ct. must give effect to it, whether or not it alters principles theretofore adopted or is out of harmony with those principles which economists believe to be sound.—BRATTS LAKE

105. ———.]—(1) A statute which refers to the matter of a common law liability & declares to whom it shall attach, will not thereby create a new & extended application of that liability, unless it contains words expressly declaring such a purpose.

(2) If, however, a man contracts that he will be liable for the damage occasioned by a particular state of circumstances, or if an Act of Parliament declares that a man shall be liable for the damage occasioned by a particular state of circumstances, I know of no reason why a man should not be liable for the damage occasioned by that state of circumstances, whether the state of circumstances is brought about by the act of man or by the act of God (LORD CAIRNS, C.).

(3) I shall therefore state, as precisely as I can, what I understand from the decided cases to be the principles on which the cts. of law act in construing instruments in writing; & a statute is an instrument in writing. In all cases the object is to see what is the intention expressed by the words used, but, from the imperfection of language, it is impossible to know what that intention is without inquiring farther, & seeing what the circumstances were with reference to which the words were used, & what was the object, appearing from those circumstances, which the person using them had in view (LORD BLACKBURN).

(4) It is to be borne in mind that the office of the judges is not to legislate, but to declare the expressed intention of the legislature, even if that intention appears to the ct. injudicious; & I believe that it is not disputed that what LORD WENSLEYDALE used to call the golden rule is right, viz., that we are to take the whole statute together, & construe it altogether, giving the words their ordinary signification, unless when so applied they produce an inconsistency, or an absurdity or inconvenience so great as to convince the ct. that the intention could not have been to use them in their ordinary signification, & to justify the ct. in putting on them some other signification, which, though less proper, is one which the ct. thinks the words will bear (LORD BLACKBURN).

(5) If in a local & personal Act we found words that seemed to express an intention to enact something quite unconnected with the purpose of the promoters, & which the committee would not, if it did its duty, have allowed to be introduced into such an Act, I think the judges would be justified in putting almost any construction on the words that would prevent its having that effect. But I do not think it impossible that the Legislature can have intended in such an Act to create a new liability to damages unknown to Common Law (LORD BLACKBURN).—*WEAR RIVER COMRS. v. SUB-SECT. 2.—CONSIDERATION OF CIRCUMSTANCES RELATING TO PASSING OF ACT.

A. In General.

119. Not within purview of court.]—(1) We propose to construe the Act of Parliament, according to the legal rules for the interpretation of statutes, principally by the words of the statute itself, which we are to read in their ordinary sense, & only modify or alter so far as it may be necessary to avoid some manifest absurdity or incongruity but no further. It is proper also to consider the state of the law which it proposes or purports to alter the mischiefs which existed, & which it was intended to remedy, & the nature of the remedy provided, & to look at the statutes in pari materia as a means of explaining this statute. . . . We shall not refer to the Report of the Real Property Comrs., published shortly before the passing of this Act . . . not conceiving that we can legitimately do so (POLLOCK, C. B.).

(2) The title of the Act . . . is certainly no part of the law &, in strictness, ought not to be taken into consideration at all (POLLOCK, C. B.).

(3) The preamble is undoubtedly a part of the Act & may be used to explain it, & is, as LORD COKE says, “a key to open the meaning of the makers of the Act, & the mischiefs it was intended to remedy”; but, on the other hand, although it may explain, it cannot control the enacting part, which may, & often does, go beyond the preamble (POLLOCK, C. B.).—SALKELD v. JOHNSON (OR JOHNSTON) (1848), 2 Exch. 256; Cripps' Church Cas. 148; 3 New Mag. Cas. 48; 18 L. J. Ex. 89; 11 L. T. O. S. 180; 12 J. P. 325; 154 E. 130. ———.]—(1) In a criminal statute you must be quite sure that the offence charged is within the letter of the law (POLLOCK, C.B.)

(2) In construing the statute it is our duty to ascertain the true legal meaning of the words used by the Legislature, & to collect the intention from the language of the statute itself, either the preamble or the enactments, & not to make out the intention from some other sources of information & then construe the words of the statute so as to meet the assumed intention. . . . We cannot, & ought not, even if the matter before us seemed to be within the mischief which it is supposed the statute was meant to remedy, to deal with it as a crime unless it be plainly & without doubt included in the language used by the legislature (POLLOCK, C.B.).

(3) In order to know what a statute does mean, it is one important step to know what it does not mean, then that which it is suggested or supposed to be what it does mean must be consistent & in harmony with what it is clear that it does not mean. What it forbids must be consistent with what it permits (POLLOCK, C.B.).

(4) Neither this ct. nor any other ct. can construe any statute & least of all a criminal statute, by what counsel are pleased to tell us were alterations made in committee by a member of Parliament who was "no friend of the bill," even though the journals of the House should give some sanction to the proposition (POLLOCK, C.B.).

(5) When two intents are mentioned, & they are put in the alternative thus, with intent to do such a thing or with intent to do another, the obvious & the grammatical mode of reading the clause would be, to make the two intentions the alternatives (POLLOCK, C.B.).—A.-G. v. SUB-SECT. 3.—AS TO MISINTERPRETATION OF STATUTES.

138. Duty of court to correct erroneous interpretations.—If the construction put upon a statute is manifestly erroneous, we are bound to give it the true construction, though I admit that, where the matter is doubtful, the ct. would from what may be called the courtesy due to another ct. of co-ordinate jurisdiction, pay attention to its decisions (POLLOCK, C.B.).—*CUMBERLAND v. 139. Misinterpretation by government department or local authority—In exercise of statutory powers—Validity of Statutory Rules & Regulations.—(1) The Board of Trade made certain rules known as the Register of Patent Agents Rules, 1889, which were laid before Parliament & no objection was taken to them within the forty days specified by the principal Act. They provided (inter alia) for the mode by which a patent agent practising before the Act of 1888 should be entered in the register; & also for the payment of an entrance fee, & an annual fee by all patent agents continuing on the register, & for erasure from the register of the name of any person whose annual fee was not paid:—Held: the rule having been laid before both Houses of Parliament for forty days without being annulled were of the same effect as if they were contained in the statute, & as long as they remained in force it was not competent to question their authority.

140. ———.]—By virtue of Education Act, 1902 (c. 42), s. 7, the local education authority is, in respect of a non-provided school, under the obligation of maintaining it as it was when the Act came into force, that is, as a complete school for children of all school ages, & giving instruction in all branches, classes, or standards for the time being taught in public elementary school, subject to the power of the local education authority to vary from time to time the syllabus or details of instruction. The power of control, & the power to give directions as to secular instruction in such a school possessed by the local education authority, do not include a power to direct a discontinuance of the giving of secular instruction altogether to individual scholars or to scholars of a particular age, or to all scholars who have attained a certain degree of efficiency, but have not completed their school career. If, therefore, such a direction is given so as to alter the fundamental character of the school & frustrate the object for which it was funded, it is ultra vires, & the Board of Education has no jurisdiction to decide that it is intra vires. A dispute between the local education authority & the managers of a non-provided school in respect of which such a direction which is thus ultra vires has been given does not arise under Education Act, 1902 (c. 42), s. 7, alone, & is not excluded from the jurisdiction of the ct. by sub-sect. 3 of sect. 7.

I come to the conclusion that no question here has arisen which excludes the jurisdiction of the ct. (CHANNELL, J.).—WILFORD v. WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL, [1908] 1 K. B. 685; 77 L. J. competent to the ct. in an action, notwithstanding that decision, to do what is right between the parties; but in all matters of fact not involving a wrong construction of the statute the decision of the Board of Education is final.—R. v. If there be no difficulty in arriving at a rational meaning in conformity to these principles, there is nothing more to be done; for nothing is more contrary to sound reason or safe principle, than to attempt, by the exercise of ingenuity, to attach to words a far-fetched meaning, contrary to common sense & common perception. . . .

The next step is, upon consideration of the whole statute, to determine its character, & especially whether it be remedial or not. . . .

It is expedient, where there have been no decisions as to the statute in question, to examine with care decisions which have taken place as to preceding statutes in pari materia; but great caution is necessary in the use of such last materials, for the minutest diversity of words may make a distinction (DR. 176. —.]—(1) The general rule is, that words in an Act of Parliament & indeed in every other instrument, must be construed in their ordinary sense, unless there is something to show plainly that they cannot have been used, & so in fact, were not used in that sense (MAULE, J.).

(2) The heading of an Act of Parliament does not at all affect its construction (LORD ST. LEONARDS).

(3) When I say that the legislature must prima facie be taken to legislate only for its own subjects, I must be taken to include under the word "subjects" all persons who are within the Queen's dominions, & who thus owe to her a temporary allegiance (JERVIS, C.J.).

It is clear that the legislature has no power over any persons except its own subjects, that is, persons natural-born subjects, or resident, or whilst they are within the limits of the Kingdom. The legislature can impose no duties except on them; & when legislating for the benefit of persons, must prima facie, be considered to mean the benefit of those who owe obedience to our laws, & whose interests the legislature is under a correlative obligation to protect (PARKE, B.).

Generally, we must assume that the legislature confines its enactments to its own subjects, over whom it has authority & to whom it owes a duty in return for their obedience. Nothing is more clear than that it may also extend its provisions to foreigners in certain cases, & may without express words make it appear that such is the intendment of those provisions. But the presumption is rather against the extension & the proof of it is rather upon those who would maintain such to be meaning of the enactments (LORD BROUGHAM).—JEFFERYS v. BOOSEY (1851), 4 H. 188. —.]—I admit that the common distinction between penal & remedial Acts, viz., that the one is to be construed strictly, the other liberally, ought not to be erased from the mind of a Judge, yet, whatever be the Act, be it penal, & certainly if remedial, we ought always to look for its true construction. In that respect, there ought to be no distinction between a penal & a remedial statute. If the remedial statute does not extend to the particular matter under consideration, we have no power to legislate so as to extend it. Undoubtedly, we are thus far bound to a strict construction in a penal statute, that if there be a fair & reasonable doubt, we must act as in revenue cases, where the rule is, that the subject is not to be taxed without clear words for that purpose (POLLOCK, C.B.).

I apprehend that in the construction of every Act of Parliament, we must endeavour, as far as we can to ascertain its true meaning, & in a penal action not to apply the Act unless the case is clearly within its terms (MARTIN, B.).—*NICHOLSON v. 235. —.]—The duty of a ct. of law is simply to take the statute it has to construe as it stands, & to construe its words according to their natural significance. While reference may be made to the state of the law, & the material facts & events with which it is apparent that Parliament was dealing, it is not admissible to speculate on the probable opinions & motives of those who framed the legislation, excepting in so far as these appear from the language of the statute. That language must, indeed, be read as a whole. If the clearly expressed scheme of the Act requires it, particular expressions may have to be read in a sense which would not be the natural one if they could be taken by themselves. But subject to this the words used must be given their natural meaning, unless to do so would lead to a result which is so absurd that it cannot be supposed, in the absence of expressions which are wholly unambiguous, to have been contemplated (LORD HALDANE, C.).—*INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. though it be unequitable & inconvenient, the judges must determine as the law is, without regarding the unequity or inconvenience.

Those defects, if they happen in the law can only be remedied by Parliament; therefore we find many statutes repealed, & laws abrogated by Parliament, as inconvenient, which before such repeal or abrogation, were in the cts. of law to be strictly observed.

But where the law is doubtful & not clear, the judges ought to interpret the law to be as is most consonant to equity, & least inconvenient.—DIXON v. HARRISON (1669), Vaugh. 36; 124 E. R. 958.

But it is no reason, when the words of a law do enough extend to an inconvenience seldom happening, that they should not extend to it as well as if it happened more frequently, because it happens but seldom.—BOLE v. HORTON (1673), Vaugh. 360; 124 E. R. 1113.

(2) [The provisions] are plainly taken from 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, & the prior Acts in which that statute was founded, & those Acts had before the passing of this Act been decided not to apply to foreign rights. The legislature cannot be supposed to have been ignorant of that decision at the time this Act was passed & it cannot, I think, be imputed to it that with that knowledge, it intended to alter the law on this important question without some more definite expression of that intention (TURNER, L.J.).

(3) This is a British Act of Parliament, & it is not, I think, to be presumed that the British Parliament could intend to legislate as to the rights & liabilities of foreigners. 466. —.]—(1) In construing a statute I believe the worst person to construe it is the person who is responsible for its drafting. He is very much disposed to confuse what he intended to do with the effect of the language which in fact has been employed. At the time he drafted the statute, at all events, he may have been under the impression that he had given full effect to what was intended; but he may be mistaken in construing it afterwards just because what was in his mind was what was intended, though, perhaps, it was not done (LORD HALSBURY, C.).

SUB-SECT. 6.—CONSTRUCTION WITH REFERENCE TO CONTEXT AND SUBJECT-MATTER.

479. General rule.]—There are two rules by which the expressions of the legislature are to be interpreted. First, if any part of an Act of Parliament is penned obscurely, & other passages in the same Act will elucidate that obscurity, recourse ought to be had to such context for that purpose. Secondly, if there are several Acts upon the same subject, they are to be taken together as forming one system, & as interpreting & enforcing each other (GOULD, J.).—R. v. HOLLAND PALMER (1784), 1 Leach, 352; 168 E. R. 279.

PART III. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 6.

479 i. (General rule.)—A ct. must in every case have regard to the whole position, & determine upon a construction of the whole Act whether Parliament has in the particular provision adopted that other meaning judicially affixed instead of what must be assumed to be the primary meaning of the words it uses which a ct. unfettered might otherwise act upon.—MELBOURNE CORPN. v. BARRY (1922), 31 C. L. R.

174.—AUS.

479 ii. —.—.]—A strict application of the rules of grammar is not to be insisted upon where so doing would be inconsistent with the obvious meaning of the context; even the ordinary meaning of words used is to yield to the context.—McGOWAN v. ADVENTURERS OF ENGLAND TRADING INTO HUDSON'S BAY (GOVERNOR & COMPANY) (1901), 21 C. L. T. Occ. N. 64; 5 Terr. L. R. 147.—CAN.

479 iii. —.—.]—A statute is to be construed not according to the mere ordinary general meaning of the words, but according to the ordinary meaning of the words as applied to the subject-matter with regard to which they are used, unless there is something which renders it necessary to read them in a sense which is not their ordinary sense in the English language as so applied.—HARDY v. R. (1905), 26 N. L. R. 35.—S. AF.

489. ———.]—A.-G. v. SILLIEM, No. 130, ante.

490. ———.]—It is, I apprehend, in accordance with the general rule of construction in every case, that you are not only to look at the words, but you are to look at the context, the collocation, & the object of such words relating to such a matter, & interpret the meaning according to what would appear to be the meaning intended to be conveyed by the use of the words under such circumstances (BLACKBURN, J.).—REIN v. LANE (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 144; 8 B. & S. 83; 36 L. J. Q. B. 81; 15 W. R. 345; 2 Mar. L. C. 448. Annotation:—Mentd. Horse v. Graham (1869), L. R. 5 C. P. 9.

491. ———.]—It is better to decide this question upon the Act of Parliament on the matter, & apply to sect. 1 the ordinary rules of construction, at the same time bearing in mind the tenor of the statute. In Acts of Parliament it is impossible to state every case to which it is to apply. Here we have words used including every case coming within the jurisdiction. Though we have had no definition suggested to us of the words "any order for the payment of money or otherwise," we are justified, looking at the other parts of the Act, in saying that they are general words (CLEASBY, B.).—MORANT v. TAYLOR (1876), as reported in 24 W. R. 461, C. A.

492. ———.]—I quite agree that in construing an Act of Parliament we are to see what is the intention which the legislature has expressed by the words; but then the words again are to be understood by looking at the subject-matter they are speaking of & the object of the legislature, & the words used with reference to that may convey an intention quite different from what the self-same set of words used in reference to another set of circumstances & another object would & might have produced (LORD BLACKBURN).—EDINBURGH STREET TRAMWAYS CO. v. TORBAIN (1877), as reported in 3 App. Cas. 58, H. L.

496. ———.]—I of course recognise the usual rule observed in the construction of Acts of Parliament, that general, following specific words should be limited to things ejusdem generis with those before enumerated; but this rule of construction must be controlled by another equally general one, that Acts of Parliament ought, like wills or other documents, to be construed so as to carry out the object sought to be accomplished by them, so far as it can be collected from the language employed (HAWKINS, J.).—HAWKE v. DUNN, [1897] 1 Q. B. 579; 66 L. J. Q. B. 364; 76 L. T. 355; 61 J. P. 292; 45 W. R. 359; 13 T. L. R. 281; 41 Sol. Jo. 351; 18 Cox, C. C. 543, D. C.

497. ———.]—In answer to the question whether upon the facts stated the decision of the magistrates was in point of law correct, our answer is that it was. When the scope & object of the Act are borne in mind any other conclusion would to a large extent render the Act ineffective for its avowed purposes (LORD RUSSELL, C.J.).—*COPPEN v. 498. ———.]—It is a dangerous assumption to suppose that the legislature foresees every possible result that may ensue from the unguarded use of a single word, or that the language used in statutes is so precisely accurate that you can pick out from various Acts this & that expression & skilfully piecing them together, lay a safe foundation for some remote inference (LORD LOREBURN, C.).—NAIRN v. ST. ANDREWS UNIVERSITY, [1909] A. C. 147; 78 L. J. P. C. 54; 100 L. T. 96; 25 T. L. R. 160, H. L.

500. —.]—The whole sect. must be looked at & construed according to the ordinary meaning of the English language. There is nothing in the statute which would justify the ct. in restricting the meaning of the word because of what appears in the previous sects. We must consider what was the intention of Parliament, which could have inserted words restricting the meaning, had it intended the meaning to be so restricted (ISAACS, C.J.).—R. v. LOWDEN, [1914] 1 K. B. 144; 109 L. T. 832; 78 J. P. 111; 30 T. L. R. 70; 58 Sol. Jo. 157; 9 Cr. App. Rep. 195; 23 Cox, C. C. 643, C. C. A.

501. —.]—(1) It must never be forgotten that, in construing an Act of Parliament, one must bear in mind what is the subject-matter of the sect. & see what is its scope & object (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).

(2) The sound principle, in dealing with a statutory enactment, is to construe plain words in their natural sense. It is for us so to construe them; it is the province of the legislature to remove any inconvenient, or, as some people might judge, unjust, results, which may be traced to the construction of the plain words of the enactment construed as according to their natural meaning they ought to be construed (KENNEDY, L.J.).—*SMEED, DEAN & CO. v. 504. Later & earlier expressions.—The legislature exercised, in making this Act of Parliament, just the same absolute authority with respect to the benefits it conferred & the restrictions it put on those benefits, as any capricious testator might have used, & is very apt to use, in the course of making his will. Our law will not allow of constructive offences; no man incurs a penalty unless the Act which subjects him to it is clearly within the spirit & letter of the statute imposing such penalty. The meaning of the words of an Act of Parliament is to be ascertained from the subject to which it refers, so that the same words receive a very different construction in different statutes. The intent of the legislature is not to be collected from any particular expression, but from a general view of the whole of an Act of Parliament. Your lordships will perceive that these are not merely technical rules established by lawyers for the determination of questions arising on statutes, but that they are maxims of common sense, the observance of which is necessary to conduct us to a right understanding of every kind of written instrument (BEST, C.J.).—ANON. (1825), 3 Bing. 193; 130 E. 563. ———.]—(1) I do not think it is competent to any ct. to proceed upon the assumption that the legislature has made a mistake (LORD HALSBURY, C.).

(2) You must, he [LORD HARDWICKE] says, as in other sciences, reason by analogy—that is, as I understand it, you must take the meaning of legal expressions from the law of the country to which they properly belong, & in any case arising in the sister country you must apply the statute in an analogous or corresponding sense, so as to make the operation & effect of the statute the same in both countries (LORD MACNAGHTEN).

(3) When you find a special meaning assigned to a particular word in an Act of Parliament you must abide by that meaning in construing the Act, you cannot add to it or take away from it, nor can you substitute anything else for it (LORD MACNAGHTEN).

(4) When you find legislation following a continuous practice & repeating the very words on which that practice was founded, it may perhaps fairly be inferred that the Legislature in re-enacting the statute intended those words to be understood in their received meaning (LORD MACNAGHTEN).—INCOME TAX SPECIAL PURPOSES COMRS. v. 595. —.]—Two propositions are quite clear—one that a preamble may afford useful light as to what a statute intends to reach, & another that if an enactment is itself clear & unambiguous, no preamble can qualify or cut down the enactment (LORD HALSBURY, C.).

“Undoubtedly”—I quote from CHITTY, L.J.’s judgment words with which I cordially agree—“it is a settled rule that the preamble cannot be made use of to control the enactments themselves where they are expressed in clear & unambiguous terms.” But the preamble is a key to the statute, & affords a clue to the scope of the statute when the words construed by themselves without the aid of the preamble are fairly capable of more than one meaning. There is, however, another rule or warning which cannot be too often repeated, that you must not create or imagine an ambiguity in order to bring in the aid of the preamble or recital. To do so would in many cases frustrate the enactment & defeat the general intention of the legislature. It may well be in this & in other cases that the legislature, taking the recited facts as the occasion of the enactment, has deliberately used larger words to prevent the same kind of mischief in other forms (LORD DAVEY).

Doubtless the contents of a preamble of an Act of Parliament cannot for any purpose control the actual clear provision of the statute; but if the wording of the statute gives rise to doubts as to its proper construction, the preamble can be & ought to be referred to in order to arrive at the proper construction to be put upon the enacting portion of the statute (LORD JAMES OF HEREFORD).—*POWELL v. 610. —.]—(1) In construing Acts of Parliament, the ct. must take into consideration not only the language of the preamble, or of any particular clause, but of the whole Act ; & if in some of the enacting clauses expressions are found of more extensive import than in others, or than in the preamble, the ct. will give effect to those more extensive expressions, if, upon a view of the whole Act, it appears to have been the intention of the legislature that they should have effect.

In construing such local Acts of Parliament, we are to look not at the preamble, or at the words of any one particular clause, alone, but at the language of the whole ; & if in the preamble, or in any one clause, we find expressions less large & extensive than we find in other parts, & upon a view of the whole we can see that the larger & more extensive expressions used in other parts best show what the intention of the legislature was ; then it is our duty to give effect to the larger expressions, notwithstanding the more limited phrases which may be found in other places. We must look at the whole Act, & form our judgment upon it as a whole (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).

(2) I consider it an established & highly useful rule, in the construction of all Acts of Parliament of a local & personal nature, to require that the parties soliciting an Act of Parliament should state in it plainly, & distinctly & unequivocally, what they mean, in order that the public on the one hand, & the legislature on the other, may not be taken by surprise, & may not be left in doubt as to the object & effect of the enactment (BAYLEY, J.).—*DOE d. F. Schedules.

651. Combined construction of Act & schedule.]

—It seems to me there are two principles or rules of interpretation which ought to be applied to the combination of Act & schedule. If the Act says that the schedule is to be used for a certain purpose & the heading of the part of the schedule in question shows that it is prima facie at any rate devoted to that purpose, then you must read the Act & the schedule as though the schedule were operating for that purpose, & if you can satisfy the language of the sect. without extending it beyond that purpose you ought to do it. But if in spite of that you find in the language of the schedule words & terms that go clearly outside that purpose, then you must give effect to them & you must not consider them as limited by the heading of that part of the schedule or by the purpose mentioned in the Act for which the schedule is prima facie to be used. You cannot refuse to give effect to clear words simply because prima facie they seem to be limited by the heading of the schedule & the definition of the purpose of the schedule contained in the Act (LORD STERNDAL, M.R.).—*INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. 653. — Cumulative clauses.—One argument was this, it is a rule in construing Acts of Parliament so to construe every clause that the others shall not be in operation, is that to say that these clauses shall be cumulative if you expound the second so as to embrace this case. That may be so. But if the sense of a particular clause be clear & manifest I should conceive it to be by much the safer course to hold that the legislature did mean two clauses to be cumulative than to say that one is not to be construed as the legislature has expressed it because if you so construe it the other will be cumulative (ALEXANDER, C.B.).—*A.-G. v. 657. Clause rejected as surplusage.—Those sects. were probably, or possibly, not put in when the Act was formed but have come into the Acts in this way: Those who have been in either House of Parliament know full well what occurs when a Bill is in Committee. Someone wishes a particular point to be made quite clear, & he asks that a certain sect. or certain words shall be inserted. Then it is said, "We do not need it, because the general words cover it." The answer is "If the general words cover it, why should we not have the sect. to make it clear?" The Minister in charge of the Bill, following expediency, sooner than continue the discussion says, "You shall have the clause," & then that clause is produced afterwards, before those who have to deal with the matter judicially, as a proof that the first clause is to be done away with, or that its principle is to be done away with. I admit that it is a very unfortunate position that the judges are placed in; but before the express words of a statute can be altered so as to have a different meaning that alteration ought to be clearly expressed (LORD JAMES).—*GARBUTT v. 658. Consistent construction adopted if possible.—In construing Acts of Parliament it is a safe rule to follow the very words of the Act, unless so strict an interpretation be irreconcilable with other clauses, or be contrary to the general intent of the Act, or be inconsistent with some established principle of law, which it may be supposed it was not intended to interfere with (LITTLEDALE, J.).—*GILES v. 659. — .]—It is in my opinion so important for the ct., in construing modern statutes, to act upon the principle of giving full effect to their language & of declining to mould that language in order to meet either an alleged convenience or an alleged equity, upon doubtful evidence of intention, that nothing will induce me to withdraw a case from the operation of a sect., which is within its words, but clear & unambiguous evidence that so to do is to fulfil the general intent of the statute; & also that to adhere to the literal interpretation is to decide inconsistently with other & overruling provisions of the same statute. When the evidence amounts to this, the ct. may properly act upon it, for the object of all rules of construction being to ascertain the meaning of the language used, & it being unreasonable to impute to the legislature inconsistent intents upon the same general subject, what it has clearly said in one part must be the best evidence of what it has intended to say in the other; & if the clear language be in accordance with the plain policy & purview of the whole statute, there is the strongest reason for believing that the interpretation of a particular part, inconsistently with that, is a wrong interpretation. The ct. must apply in such a case the same rules which it would use in construing the limitations of a deed; it must look to the whole context, & endeavour to give effect to all the provisions enlarging or restraining, if need be, for that purpose the literal interpretation of any particular part. . . . We are dealing with a statute which has reference, not so much to the common law, as to a large number of previous statutes; that its general intent is in accordance with them, except where it marks out in express language their partial repeal or modification. I find it therefore more difficult to adopt that construction which supposes an intent to repeal them, as to alter important but unspecified provisions, by implication (COLERIDGE, J.).—*R. v. 690. Will not limit express enactment.]—(1) An Act of Parliament is to be construed according to the ordinary & grammatical sense of its language, if there be no inconsistency apparent in its provisions; & a proviso, which, on the face of the Act, is not inconsistent with the other enactments of it, is not to be limited in its effect by reason of local circumstances, not apparent on the face of the Act, causing such inconsistency. But such proviso will not limit an express authority given by the Act.

There is very often the further provision that these earlier statutes are incorporated only so far as they are not inconsistent with the statute into which they are incorporated; so that you have first to ascertain the meaning of a statute by reference to other statutes, & then to ascertain whether the earlier Acts qualify only or absolutely contradict the later ones, a task sometimes of great difficulty, always of great labour, a difficulty & labour generally speaking wholly unnecessary (MATTHEW, J.).—*KNILL v. Defts. were the owners of hydraulic mains which had been laid under the same streets under statutory powers. These mains burst in four different places, in each case damaging pltfs.' cables. The bursting of the mains was not due to any negligence on the part of defts. Two of the mains which so burst had been laid under a private Act which did not contain the usual clause providing that nothing in the Act should exempt the co. from liability for nuisance. The other two had been laid under a later Act which did contain such a clause. The later Act also provided that the two Acts should be "read & construed together as one Act":—Held: the effect of the two Acts being read together as one Act was to take away the privilege which, down to the passing of the later Act, defts. had enjoyed, in respect of the two first mentioned mains, of not being liable for damage done by their bursting in the absence of negligence, & consequently in the case of all four of the mains defts. were liable as for a nuisance—CHARING CROSS ELECTRICITY SUPPLY CO. v. HYDRAULIC POWER CO., [1914] 3 K. 774. Effect of previous construction — Over long period.—It cannot be denied that in some cases the plain meaning of an Act of Parliament has been changed by a course of judicial decisions, each going a little & a little further, so that at length the cts. have adopted a construction widely different from that which would, but for such interpretations, have been put upon the plain intent of the words. In all such cases you are to take into consideration, not merely the words of the Act of Parliament, but the decisions on them, which may be said to have been all but imported into the words of the Act, so that the Act is to be construed with reference to such decisions. But I am not aware of any case, in which a single decision, even of a ct. of competent jurisdiction, having before it properly & judicially the matter on which it was pronouncing a judicial decision, has been held to operate so upon the plain meaning of a statute (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—WATERFORD'S (EARL) CLAIM (1832), 6 Cl. & Fin. 133; 7 E. 846. Subject-matter described by particular words—Brought within purview of statute by particular not general words—Effect of repeal of particular words.]—In order to ascertain the effect of a repealing statute the repealed words must be looked at. Where in any statute special words are followed by general words, any subject-matter which is aptly described by the special words comes within the purview of the statute by force of the special words, & not of the general words. If, therefore, the special words are repealed, the subject-matter ceases to be within the purview of the statute, though aptly described by the general words in the absence of the special words.—A.-G. v. C. Expressio unius exclusio alterius.

864. General rule.—Where a general Act of Parliament confers immunities which expressly exempt certain persons from the effect & operation of its provisions, it excludes all exemptions to which the subject might have been before entitled at common law ; expressio unius est exclusio alterius. ST. PAUL'S (WARDEN, ETC.) v. LINCOLN (BP.) as ST. PAUL'S (DEAN), (1817), 4 Price, 65 ; Wils. Ex. 1 ; 146 E. R. 395, Ex. Ch.

866. Interference with privilege of Parliament.

—(1) It is not because ex majore cautela several Acts of Parliament have thought it necessary specially to reserve that privilege that it is to be held to be abolished & annihilated in every other Act of Parliament in which it is not expressly reserved (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).

(2) The privilege which had been established by Common Law & recognised on many occasions by Act of Parliament should be held to be a continuous privilege not abrogated or struck at unless by express words in the statute (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).

(3) That Act [4 Geo. 3, c. 33] has long since been swept away ; but though it has been repealed, its effect as a declaration of the law must still be considered operative & therefore the legislature in the subsequent Acts of Parliament has not deemed it necessary to follow its very words (LORD WESTBURY).—NEWCASTLE (DUKE) v. MORRIS (1870), L. R. 4 II. L. 661 ; 40 L. J. Bcy. 4 ; 23 L. T. 569 ; 35 J. P. 548 ; 19 W. R. 26, H. L.

867. Exclusion by inadvertence.—(1) Whenever we find that an outrage on the comity of nations will be produced by our giving full effect to general words in a statute, we must put upon those words such a limitation as will exclude that outrage (LORD ESHER, M.R.).

(2) The maxim expressio unius exclusio alterius

has been pressed upon us. I agree with what is said in the ct. below by WILKS, J., about this maxim. It is often a valuable servant, but a dangerous master to follow in the construction of statutes or documents. The exclusio is often the result of inadvertence or accident, & the maxim ought not to be applied, when its application, having regard to the subject-matter to which it is to be applied, leads to inconsistency or injustice. I think a rigid observance of the maxim in this case would make other provisions of the statute inconsistent & absurd, & result in injustice. I cannot therefore permit it to govern my decision (LOPES, L.J.).—COLQUHOUN v. BROOKS (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 52 ; 57 L. J. Q. B. 439 ; 59 L. T. 661 ; 52 J. P. 645 ; 36 W. R. 657 ; 4 T. L. R. 494, C. We cannot fish out what possibly may have been the intention of the legislature; we cannot aid the legislature's defective phrasing of the Act; we cannot add, & mend, &, by construction, make up deficiencies which are left there. If the legislature did intend that which it has not expressed clearly; much more, if the legislature intended something very different; if the legislature intended something pretty nearly the opposite of what is said, it is not for judges to invent something which they do not meet with in the words of the text, aiding their construction of the text always, of course, by the context; . . . it is not for them so to supply a meaning, for, in reality, it would be supplying it; the true way in these cases is, to take the words as the legislature have given them, & to take the meaning which the words given naturally imply, unless where the construction of those words is, either by the preamble or by the context of the words in question, controlled or altered; &, therefore, if any other meaning was intended than that which the words purport plainly to import, then let another Act supply that meaning, & supply the defect in the previous Act (per CUR.).—CRAWFORD v. SPOONER (1846), 6 Moo. P. C. C. 1; 4 Moo. Ind. App. 179; 13 E. R. 582, P. C.

904. Singular includes plural.]—With regard to the meaning of “patentee,” I can find no clear decision as to what is the true meaning of the definition of “patentee” in Patents & Designs Act, 1907 (c. 29), s. 93, namely, “the person for the time being entitled to the benefit of a patent.” The words must, of course, be read as meaning person or persons (COMPTROLLER-GENERAL).—Re GOLTSTEIN'S APPLICATION (1910), 27 R. SUB-SECT. 2.—INTERPRETATION CLAUSES.

906. Object of clauses.—The object of these Acts being framed with these interpretation clauses is, by the means & through the agency of the interpretation clause, to avoid the necessity of frequent repetition in describing all the subject-matter to which the Act was intended to apply. It uses one expression & then by the interpretation clause, declares that that expression shall have certain meanings other than the ordinary meaning of the word used; & the way to apply that interpretation clause is, when you find the word used in other enactments, to follow the direction of the interpretation clause &, according to the subject-matter, to read it as if it contained the other words which, by the interpretation clause, it is meant to include (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—A.-G. v. WORCESTER CORPN. (1846), as reported in 15 L. J. Ch. 398; 8 L. T. O. S. 85, L. C.

907. Mode of application.—A.-G. v. WORCESTER CORPN., No. 906, ante.

908. Utility.—It has been very much doubted, & I concur in that doubt, whether these interpretation clauses, which are of modern origin, have not introduced more mischief than they have avoided, for they have attempted to put a general construction on words which do not admit of such a construction in the different senses in which they are introduced in the various clauses of an Act of Parliament (LORD ST. LEONARDS, C.).—ELY (DEAN) v. BLISS (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 459; 20 L. T. O. S. 35; 42 E. R. 950, L. C.

PART III. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.

906 i. Object of clauses.—It is recognised in England to be a rule with regard to the effect of interpretation clauses of a comprehensive nature that they are not to be taken as strictly defining what the meaning of a word must be under all circumstances, but merely as declaring what things may be comprehended within the term where the circumstances require that they should.—R. v. DESOUZA (1911), 1 L. R. 35 Bom. 412.—IND.

907 i. Mode of application.—“A definition clause does not necessarily, in any statute, apply in all possible contexts in which the word may be found therein. If defined expressions are used in a context which the definition will not fit, then the words may be interpreted according to their ordinary meaning.”—STRATHERN v. PADDEN, [1926] S. C. SECT. 9.—ANCIENT AND MODERN STATUTES.

979. Distinction between construction of ancient & modern Acts—Ancient Acts construed liberally.]—With regard to the construction of statutes according to the intention of the legislature; we must remember that there is an essential difference between the expounding of modern & ancient Acts of Parliament. In early times the legislature used, & I believe it was a wise course to take, to pass laws in general & in few terms; they were left to the cts. of law to be construed so as to reach all the cases within the mischief to be remedied. But in modern times great care has been taken to where it finds legislation intended to legalise the dedication of property to laudable public purposes, to construe the Act so as to enlarge rather than limit its operation.—BUTLAND v. GILLESPIE (1888), 16 O. R. 486.—CAN.

n. War Relief Act.]—War Relief Act should receive such fair, large & liberal construction & interpretation as will best ensure the attainment of the object of the Act.—Re SMITH, [1917] 1 W. W. R. 332; 23 B. C. R. 547.—CAN.

o. Statutes of Limitation.]—The Cts. of British India in applying Acts of Limitation are not bound by the rule established by a balance of authority in England, that statutes of mention the particular cases in the contemplation of the legislature, & therefore the cts. are not permitted to take the same liberty in construing them as they did in expounding the ancient statutes (BULLER, J.).—BRADLEY v. CLARK (1793), 5 Term Rep. 197; 101 E. R. 111.

980. ———.]—As to the observation about the liberal construction, which the Statute of Gloucester has always received, a well-known distinction prevails between the old Acts of Parliament & modern ones. The old Acts are very short, & employ very general terms, to which, therefore, it has been considered necessary to give a very extensive signification, so as to make them embrace all particulars which will fall upon them; but in modern times, the legislature has adopted the use of a great number of particular terms, to which common sense requires us to apply a very different rule of construction (COLERIDGE, J.).—R. v. GARDNER (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 112; 1 Nev. & P. K. B. 308; Will. Woll. & Dav. 7; 1 J. P. 124; 112 E. R. 43.

983. ———.] Were the language . . . obscure instead of being clear we should not be justified in differing from the construction put upon it by contemporaneous & long continued usage, there would be no safety for property or liberty if it could be successfully contended that all lawyers & statesmen have been mistaken for centuries as to the true meaning of an Act of Parliament (per CUR.).—GORHAM v. EXETER (Bp.) (1850), 15 Q. B. 52; Brod. & F. 107; 7 Notes of Cases Supp. LXI.; 19 L. J. Q. B. 279; 15 L. T. O. S. 87; 14 Jur. 480; 117 E. R. 377; sub nom. R. v. FUST, 14 J. P. 258.

985. ———.]—(1) In construing old statutes it has been usual to pay great regard to this description must be construed strictly. On the contrary, such Acts, where their language is ambiguous or indistinct, should receive a liberal interpretation, & be treated as "statutes of repose" & not as of a penal character or as imposing burdens.—*MANGU LAL v. the construction put upon them by the judges who lived at or soon after the time when they were made, because they were best able to judge of the intention of the makers at the time (OPINION OF THE JUDGES).

(2) If we find a uniform interpretation of a statute upon a question materially affecting property, & perpetually recurring, & which has been adhered to without interruption, it would be impossible for us to introduce the precedent of disregarding that interpretation. Disagreeing with it would thereby be shaking rights & titles which have been founded through so many years upon the conviction that that interpretation is the legal & proper one, & is one which will not be departed from (LORD WESTBURY). —MORGAN v. 986. ———.]—In my opinion such usage as has in this case been termed contemporanea expositio is of no value whatever in construing a British statute of the year 1858. When there are ambiguous statements in an Act passed one or two centuries ago it may be legitimate to refer to the construction put upon their expression throughout a long course of years by the unanimous consent of all parties interested as exercising what must presumably have been the intention of the legislature at that remote period. But I feel bound to construe a recent statute according to its own terms (LORD WATSON).—CLYDE NAVIGATION TRUSTEES v. LAIRD (1883), 8 App. Cas. 658, H. L.

995. Date of passing—Date of receiving Royal Assent.]—A partner not a trader was indebted to the partnership & also to some of the partners separately. By deeds executed by debtor after Bankruptcy Act, 1861 (c. 134), had received the Royal Assent, but supposed to have been executed before it came into operation, he covenanted to pay to trustees for the other partners a sum fixed upon as principal, & to pay interest thereon, & he gave a mtge. as security. A debtor's summons was issued for the money covenanted to be paid:—Held: the time defined by the words "passing of Bankruptcy Act, 1861 (c. 134)," in the same sect. is the time when Bankruptcy Act, 1861 (c. 134), 1063. Special Act binding Crown—Incorporation of general Act—Whether Crown bound by incorporated Act.—(1) It was argued that, even if Lands Clauses Act is incorporated with the special Act, Lands Clauses Act does not bind the Crown. I think the answer to that is simple. The special Act clearly binds the Crown, & directly Lands Clauses Act became incorporated with it, it became an integral part of the special Act & bound the Crown just as the special Act itself did, in the same way as if the provision in Lands Clauses Act had been in terms re-enacted in the special Act (LOPES, L.J.).

(2) If a subsequent Act brings into itself by reference some of the clauses of a former Act, the legal effect of that, as has often been held, is to write those sects. into the new Act as if they had been actually written in it with the pen, or printed in it (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—*Re WOOD'S ESTATE, Ex p. 1067. ——The navigation laws are not binding upon the King so as to prevent the conveyance of public stores from one colony to another.

It has been made a question in argument, whether the King is bound by the Navigation Act. This is a very large question, upon a very momentous subject, on which it might not become me to hazard a confident opinion, & the less so, because the principles on which it is laid down in the books, that the King is or is not bound by statutes, are far from being so precise as to furnish a safe conduct to any such opinion. That he is bound, though not named, by acts pro bono publico, by acts for prevention of fraud, are descriptions of the royal obligations so wide & so unlimited, that it might be difficult to say what public statutes do or do not bind the King, if these are taken without any technical limitations applied to them. For it would be difficult to say what public statutes are not pro bono publico, & for the prevention of fraud, taking fraud in its legal sense, of injury to the rights of others. The utmost that I can venture to admit is, that, if the King traded, as some sovereigns do, he might fall within the operation of these statutes (per CUR.).—THE SWIFT (1813), 1 Dods. 320; 165 E. 1073 i. Necessary implication.]—The rule that the Crown is not bound by a statute except by express words of necessary implication applies only to those representatives of the Crown who have executive authority in the place where the Statute applies, & as to matters to which that executive authority extends. The Constitution binds the Crown as represented by the various States, & takes no account of the States & State Govts. in relation to Commonwealth legislation on matters within the exclusive control of the Commonwealth Govt. & therefore, in the construction of the Commonwealth Statutes, dealing with such matters, the rule applies to the Sovereign as head of that Govt., but not to the Sovereign as head of the State Govt.—R. v. SUTTON (1908), 5 C. L. R. 789.—AUS.

Whether binding on Crown—Provision for writ of error—Application to criminal cases.]—In the case therefore of an Act of Parliament passed expressly for the further advancement of justice, & in its particular enactment using terms so comprehensive as to include all cases brought up by writ of error, we think there is neither authority nor principle for implying the exception of criminal cases, upon the ground that the King, as the public prosecutor, is not expressly mentioned in the Act (TINDAL, C.J.).—*R. v. B., Common Pleas, or Exchequer, shall hereafter be returnable before the Judges & Barons, or Judges only of the other two Cts., in the Exchequer Chamber:—Held: the Crown was bound by that enactment, & therefore a Writ of Error lies upon a judgment for the Crown in a Petition of Right to the Exch. Ch.

The Ct. observed [in R. v. Wright, No. 1079, ante] that the Act being “passed expressly for the further advancement of justice,” as appears by the preamble, “& in its particular enactment using terms so comprehensive as to include all cases brought up by writ of error,” there was “neither authority nor principle for implying the exception of criminal cases upon the ground that the King, as the public prosecutor, is not expressly mentioned in the Act.” Nor is there, in our judgment, any authority or principle for implying an exception in the present case. If any special prerogative of the Crown were thereby taken away, as, for instance, if there had been a special tribunal for the decision of writs of error brought by the Crown, or where the Crown was a party, or the Crown had an option, which the subject had not, to have a writ of error against a judgment in its favour in any ct. that it should elect, doubtless such a prerogative would not be taken away. But this is not such a prerogative; & in cases of ments with penal clauses adjoined, as, for example, certain provisions of Motor Car Act, & so on—yet, when you come to a set of provisions in a Statute having for its object the benefit of the public generally, there is not an antecedent unlikelihood that the Crown will consent to be bound, & this would be so in the case of reputations meant to apply to all the land in a city, & where the Crown's property is not property held jure coronæ, but has been acquired from a subject superior for the use of one of the public departments.—*EDINBURGH MAGISTRATES v. SECT. 5.—RETROSPECTIVE EFFECT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1083. Meanings of "retrospective."—The word "retrospective" is used in several different senses. . . . An Act may be called retrospective because it affects existing contracts as from the date of its coming into operation. . . . It may be more properly described as retrospective because it applies to actual transactions which have been completed or to rights & remedies which have already accrued, or it may apply again to such matters as procedure & evidence; & in each of these matters retrospective legislation has a different effect (MAUGHAN J.).—GARDNER & Co. v. CONE, [1928] Ch. 955; 97 L. J. Ch. 491.

1084. Restrospective effect to be no greater than language renders necessary.—(1) The particular rule of construction which has been referred to, but which is valuable only when the words of an Act of Parliament are not plain, is embodied in the well-known trite maxim omnis nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet non prateritis, that is, that except in special cases the new law ought to be construed so as to interfere as little as possible with vested rights. It seems to me that even in construing an Act which is to a certain extent retrospective, & in construing a sect. which is to a certain extent retrospective, we ought nevertheless to bear in mind that maxim as applicable whenever we reach the line at which the words of the sect. cease to be plain. That is a necessary & logical corollary of the general proposition that you ought not to give a larger retrospective power to a sect., even in an Act which is to some extent intended to be retrospective, than you can plainly see the legislature meant (BOWEN, L.J.).

(2) If words are ambiguous & one construction leads to enormous inconvenience, & another construction does not, the one which leads to least inconvenience is to be preferred (COTTON, L.J.).—REID v. REID (1886), 31 Ch. D. 402; 55 L. J. Ch. 294; 54 L. T. 100; 34 W. R. 332; 2 T. L. R. 254, C. A.

WOOLWICH UNION*, [1917] 2 K. P. 374; 86 L. J. K. B. 1187; 117 L. T. 250; 81 J. P. 281; 15 L. G. R. 561, D. C.

(a) In General.

1097. Provision against retrospective effect.]—To give an ex post facto operation to this enactment would be very mischievous . . . , & unless when otherwise provided all Acts should come into operation from the day of the passing (per CUR.).

To give an ex post facto operation to this enactment would be very mischievous, because, though it was not possible to say that such a thing was hostile to the spirit of English law, inasmuch as till within a few years back an Act of Parliament passed at the end of a session was held to relate back to the beginning, so that it might in that way be possible that a man should have been committed to prison for a crime created after the thing was done for which he was charged, yet this was very harsh, & a late Act had provided that, unless when otherwise provided, all Acts should come into operation from the day of the passing (PLATT, B.).—R. v. Stark*, No. 1091, ante, as follows "that words [in a statute] not requiring a retrospective operation, so as to affect an existing status prejudicially, ought not to be so construed." JESSEL, M.R., in Re Joseph Suche & Co., Ltd., No. 1236, post, said "I so decide because it is a general rule that when the legislature alters the rights of parties by taking away or conferring any right of action, its enactments, unless in express terms they apply to pending actions, do not affect them." The ct. has also to bear in mind the terms of Interpretation Act, 1889 (c. 63), s. 38, by which the legislature has laid down the same principle (POLLOCK, M.R.).

The rule is stated in Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes (6th ed.), p. 382, as follows: "It is a fundamental rule of English law that no statute shall be construed so as to have a retrospective operation, unless such a construction appears very clearly in the terms of the Act, or arises by necessary & distinct implication"; a statement of the law approved by the ct. in West v. Gwynne, No. 1122, ante. When the language of the Act is looked at, every word of the statute must be given full effect to, if it be regarded as a code of future rights (SARGANT, L.J.).—*Re SNOWDOWN COLLIERY CO., LTD., SOUTH EASTERN COALFIELD EXTENSION CO., LTD. v. 1135. Grammatical construction.]—(1) It seems to me there is an old & well-known rule which is always applied on construing statutes affecting rights where the words of a statute are doubtful. That rule . . . is that, unless the words of a statute affecting rights are clear to the contrary, either from their grammatical construction or the necessary context, the statute is to be construed prospectively & not so as to affect rights acquired before the statute was passed (BRETT, M.R.).

(2) It is a well-known rule of construction that if the legislature alters existing rights clear words must be employed for the purpose. 1143. Provisions in settlement.]—I agree . . . that this is a statute which ought to be expounded in furtherance & not in derogation of the important objects of public policy for which it was passed. But, on the other hand, it ought not to be strained or extended by any indirect artificial construction, so as to give to particular estates & interests under wills, or other settlements, an operation which would alter their essential conditions & nature, & convert them into something substantially different (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—Re HAZLE'S SETTLED ESTATES (1885), 29 Ch. D. 78; 54 L. J. Ch. 628; 52 L. T. 947; 33 W. R. 759, C. A.

On Feb. 19, 1898, on the further consideration of the action, an order was made referring it to the taxing master to tax pltf.'s costs of the action:—Held: the rights of the parties were ascertained by the first order, which must be construed by the then existing law, & pltf. was not entitled, by reason of the passing of Mortgagees Legal Costs Act, 1895 (c. 25), to charge profit costs.—*DAY v. SECT. 6.—EFFECT ON EXISTING RIGHTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1169. Statute interfering construed strictly.]—

An enacting clause in a statute, which interferes with existing rights, must be construed strictly; but the largest & most liberal construction will be given to an exception which protects those rights.—FINCH v. BIRMINGHAM CANAL NAVIGATION CO. (1826), 5 B. & C. 820; 8 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 680; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 17; 108 E. R. 305.

1170. —.]—It is a general rule, in the interpretation of Acts of Parliament, that an enactment, the effect of which is to cut down, abridge, or restrain any written instrument, shall have a limited construction (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—MORRIS v. MELLIN (1827), 6 B. & C. 446; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 503; 108 E. R. 516.

*Annotations:—*Reid. Bennett v. Daniel (1830), 10 B. & C. 500; Bryan v. Child (1850), 5 Exch. 368.

1171. —.]—This is an enactment creating a privilege against common right, and therefore care should be taken not to enlarge the construction of it (KNIGHT BRUCE, C.J.).—Re WISE, Ex p. WHIPHAM (1844), 3 Mont. D. & De G. 564; 13 L. J. Bcy. 8; 2 L. T. O. S. 426; 8 Jur. 201.

1172. —.]—It is an essential principle of construction of all statutes interfering with common law rights & the rights of the public that they should be strictly construed so as to prevent any undue extension of the statutory immunity (SCRUTTON, J.).—PLACE v. RAWTENSTALL CORPN. (1916), 86 L. J. K. B. 90; 80 J. P. 433; 60 Sol. Jo. 680; 14 L. G. R. 901, C. A.

1172a. —.]—No rule of law is better settled than the rule that statutes which encroach on the ordinary rights of the subject, whether as to person or property, are subject to a strict construction. The cts. are presumed to incline to such an interpretation of such statutes as will preserve the subject's rights unless express words or clear implication require the opposite result (MCCARDIE, J.).—BRIGHTMAN & CO., LTD. v. TATE (1919), as reported in 35 T. L. R. 209.

*Annotations:—*Mentd. Shutler v. Rolfe (1920), 36 T. L. R. 828; Whitham & Butterworth v. Lindley (1920), 37 T. L. R. 75; Re Mahmoud & Isphani, [1921] 2 K. B. 716.

1173. Effect of affirmative statute.]—The statutes . . . being affirmative do not take away the prior exemption (LORD MANSFIELD).—R. v. PUGH (1779), 1 Doug. K. B. 187; 99 E. R. 123.

*Annotations:—*Consd. Garnett v. Bradley (1878), 3 App. Cas. 944. Reid. R. v. Clarke (1787), 1 Term Rep. 679.

1174. New Act imposing new obligation—Effect on privileges under former Act.]—Where an Act confers certain privileges on officers who may be sued for things done in pursuance of that Act, & a subsequent Act imposes new obligations on the old officers, the privileges of the former statute do not attach on them in respect of things done under the latter.—BAZING v. SKELTON (1792), 5 Term Rep. 16; 101 E. R. 9.

1175. Words inserted ex majore cautela.]—NEWCASTLE (DUKE) v. MORRIS, No. 866, ante.

1176. Effect of general words.]—As a rule, existing customs or rights are not to be taken away by mere general words in an Act of Parliament. But without words especially abrogating them, they may be abrogated by plain directions to do something which is wholly inconsistent with them; & this may be the case though the Act is a private Act of Parliament, & though the particular custom may have been confirmed, years before, by a verdict in a ct. of law.

If upon the face of the Act of Parliament you find that giving the ordinary sense & meaning to the words, you are involved in some inconsistency in any of the other clauses, it may then be necessary to search about & see whether the palpable & obvious construction which the words point at, may not be varied in order that that inconsistency may be avoided (LORD PENZANCE).—GREEN v. R. (1876), 1 App. Cas. 513; 35 L. T. 495; 41 J. P. 196, H. L.

1177. —.]—Where a privilege has been granted by an Act of Parliament, it cannot be taken away without a direct repeal of that Act, or inference from another so strong of intention to take it away as to authorise a ct. to say that the two Acts cannot stand together.—WALSALL OVERSEERS v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1879), 4 App. Cas. 467; 48 L. J. M. C. 166; 41 L. T. 106; 43 J. P. 748; 28 W. R. 52, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. R. v. WALSALL OVERSEERS (1878), 4 Q. B. D. 141, C. 1178. Effect of directions to do something inconsistent with rights.]—GREEN v. R., No. 1176, ante.

1179. Right made contingent on order—In reference to which party cannot be heard.]—Parliament is no doubt omnipotent, but it would be a very unusual mode of legislation to make the right of a person contingent on an order in reference to which he cannot be heard (FRY, L.J.).—BROCKWELL v. BULLOCK (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 567; 58 L. J. Q. B. 289; 53 J. P. 405; 37 W. R. 455, C. A.

PART IV. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 1.

1169 i. Statute interfering construed strictly.]—Where the words in an Act of Parliament which affects the rights of the subject are precise & unambiguous, the Act must be strictly construed & the words given their primary & ordinary meaning, even though such construction creates an absurdity.—*Ex p. 1169 ix. —.]—It is a principle of construction that you must have plain words to take away private rights. They are not to be taken away or even hampered by implication.—HANF v. YARMOUTH LIGHT & POWER CO., LTD.,

1169 x. —.]—The rule that an Act is not to be construed retrospectively so as to defeat an existing right, is only a rule of construction, & must yield to the intention of the Legislature.—Re RATANSI KALIANJI'S PETITION (1877), 1 L. R. 2 Bom. 148.—IND.

1169 xi. —.]—It is a general rule in construing statutes that in matters of substantive right they are not to be so read as to take away vested rights, but that in matters of procedure they are general in their operation.—BHOBO SUNDARI DEBI v. RAKHAL CHUNDER BOSE (1886), 1 L. R. 12 Calc. 583.—IND.

1169 xii. —.]—The general rights of the Queen's subjects are not hastily to be assumed to be interfered with & taken away by Act of Parliament. Such statutes are to be strictly construed when their language is doubtful.

Sect. 6.—Effect on existing rights: Sub-sects. 1 & 2, A. & B. (a).]

1180. Meaning of right accrued or acquired.]—

The mere right existing at the date of a repealing statute, to take advantage of provisions of the statute repealed is not a "right accrued" within the meaning of the usual saving clause.—ABBOTT v. MINISTER FOR LANDS, [1895] A. C. 425; 64 L. J. P. C. 167; 72 L. T. 402; 11 R. 466, P. C. *Annotations:—*Consd. Hamilton Gell v. White, [1922] 2 K. B. 422; *Lambton & Hetton Collieries v. 1182. Confirmation by statute of customary or presumptive right—Merger.]—Where an Act of Parliament, according to its true construction, has embraced & confirmed a right which previously existed by custom or prescription, such right becomes thenceforth a statutory right, & the lower right by custom & prescription is merged in & extinguished by the higher title of the Act of Parliament.—NEW WINDSOR CORPN. v. 1208. —.—.]—It is a well-recognised principle in the construction of statutes that they operate only on cases & facts which come into existence after the statutes were passed, unless a retrospective effect is clearly intended.

This principle of construction is especially applicable when the enactment to which a retrospective effect is sought to be given would prejudicially affect vested rights or the legal character of past transactions. It need not be penal in the sense of punishment.

Every statute, it has been said, which takes away or impairs vested rights acquired under existing laws, or creates a new obligation, or imposes a new duty, or attaches a new disability in respect of transactions already past, must be presumed to be intended not to have a retrospective effect (LOPES, L.J.).—*Re PULBOROUGH PARISH SCHOOL BOARD ELECTION, BOURKE v. 1265. ——— Materiality of form of incorporation.]—Whether a special Act only incorporates "such parts of a general Act as are applicable to, & not inconsistent with the special Act," or "the whole Act, except so far as its provisions are expressly varied by the special Act" makes no difference in the application of the general to the special Act.—*WELD v. 1266. ——— Modification of incorporated Act—Intention of legislature must be clear.]—This much, however, we may say, that it is not enough that the words of the special enactments are not aptly chosen so as to be in harmony with the enactments in terms incorporated with the Act; nor is it even enough that the language of the special enactments is so incongruous with the incorporated enactments as to show that the person who prepared them had forgotten, or perhaps had never known, what those incorporated enactments were. It must go as far as this, that the special enactments show that the legislature intended to exclude an enactment which, by an accident, not unlikely to occur in this mode of legislation, they have inadvertently incorporated contrary to what they intended (BLACKBURN, J.).—*R. v. 1270. Introduction of new terms in later statute—Abrogation of system existing under earlier statute.]—Had it been intended to continue the old system, the use of the old language & the continuance of the old mode would naturally have been expected. 1271. Later statute constituting exemption from earlier statute.]—We think that . . . the operation of the statute of Victoria [1 Vict. c. 55] is to constitute an exemption from the statute [29 Eliz. c. 4] in those cases, in the same way as if it had been expressly enacted that such cases should be exempt from the operation of the statute of Elizabeth [29 Eliz. c. 4] (PARKE B.).—*PILKINGTON v. The modification [in 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104] . . . must, no doubt, have affected that Act [9 & 10 Vict. c. 93] so long as it subsisted; but when it was destroyed, its effect must have ceased, otherwise the consequence would be that, where any provision of an Act of Parliament has been modified by a subsequent Act, the modification could not be altered without at the same time repealing or altering the original Act—a proposition which cannot, I think, be maintained (TWINER, L.J.).—*GLAHAM v. 1280. —.]—Now the distinction between matters that are directory & matters that are imperative is well known to us all in the common language of the cts. at Westminster. I am not sure that it is the most fortunate language that could have been adopted to express the idea that it is intended to convey; but still that is the recognised language, & I propose to adhere to it. The real question in all these cases is this: a thing has been ordered by the legislature to be done. What is the consequence if it is not done? In the case of statutes that are said to be imperative, the cts. have decided that if it is not done the whole thing fails, & the proceedings that follow upon it are all void. On the other hand, when the cts. hold a provision to be mandatory or directory, they say that, although such provision may not have been complied with, the subsequent proceedings do not fail (LORD PENZANCE).—HOWARD v. 1282. Whether statute mandatory or directory—To be determined from general scheme.—(1) Although we find in the introductory words of the sect. a general statement applicable to all the sects. to the effect that the proceedings "are to be done" within the times prescribed it appears to us by no means to follow that in each sub-sect. the words must necessarily be construed in the same manner (CHARLES, J.).

(2) We must inquire whether, in each particular case, the words are directory or imperative, & in order to determine the question, must have regard to the general scheme & other sects. of the statute (CHARLES, J.).—R. v. & fundamental that the non-compliance renders the thing done void, the statute is said to be imperative or peremptory or mandatory; if the matter is so subsidiary & collateral that the disobedience may safely be ignored, the statute is said to be directory; but this designation is confusing & misleading. o. — Duty of the court.—In the absence of any clear expression of its intention by the legislature the ct. in deciding whether any particular provisions are imperative or directory, must have due regard to the general scope of the statute, as well as to considerations of convenience & justice.—BURROWS v. 1295. Affirmative words used — Imperative nature clearly indicated.]—I do not know how language could have made the intent more clear & I can see no sufficient reason for holding the clause directory. PART IV. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

t. General rule.]—In construing a statute words are directory unless there is something in the statute which plainly or in effect enacts that a particular thing shall be done in a particular way & in no other manner.—TORPY v. HART (1915), 11 Tas. L. R. 6.—AUS.

PART IV. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 3.—B.

a. General rule.]—A statutory provision may be regarded as intended to be directory when injustice or inconvenience to others who have no control over those exercising the duty would result if such requirements were essential & imperative.—DRILL v. DE BRUYN, [1918] O. P. D. 23.—S. AF.

1306 i. Absence of negative words.]—Unless the Legislature uses negative words, or words showing an intention to treat the observance of a rule of procedure as essential, the rule will ordinarily be treated as a direction only.—NIDHI LAL v. MAZHAR HUSAIN (1884), I. L. R. 7 All. 230.—IND.

1310. 1311. Necessity for express words.]—QUARTER v. McLAREN, No. 1863, post.

1312. Absence of provision for remedy.]—It is asked what is to be done if the overseers delay so long as to deprive a party of this power to appeal. This would be a defect in the statute, for which it would be for the legislature to provide a remedy, but the existence of such a defect cannot make the statute other than directory (LUSH, J.).—R. v. INGALL (1876), 2 Q. B. D. 199; 46 L. J. M. C. 113; 35 L. T. 552; 41 J. P. 181; 25 W. R. 57; sub nom. INGALL & PHILLIPS v. ALL SAINTS, POPLAR, Ryde, Rat. App. (1871–85) 176.

1313. Statutes creating public duties.]—CALDOW v. PIXELL, No. 1296, ante.

1314. — Injustice caused by annulling acts in neglect of duty.]—When the provisions of a statute relate to the performance of a public duty & the case is such that to hold null & void acts done in neglect of this duty would work serious general inconvenience or injustice to persons who have no control over those entrusted with the duty & at the same time would not promote the main object of the legislature it has been in practice to hold such provisions to the directory only, the neglect of them though punishable not affecting the validity of the acts done (per CUR.).—MONTEAL STREET RY. CO. v. NORMANDIN, [1917] A. C.

1315. Discretion given.]—There are several considerations which, in my opinion, strongly support the view that the penalty provision must have been intended by the legislature to be, & ought to be construed as being, directory only. . . . Some discretion as to the penalty is left to the urban authority. The amount of the pecuniary penalty & the form it should take are entirely in the discretion of the authority. Is it, then, unreasonable to suppose that in other respects the urban authority is to have a discretion (ROMER, L.J.).—SOOTHILL UPPER URBAN COUNCIL v. WAKEFIELD RURAL COUNCIL, [1905] 2 Ch. 516; 74 L. J. Ch. 703; 93 L. T. 711; 69 J. P. 447; 21 T. L. R. 766; 3 L. G. R. 1208, C. A.

SECT. 9.—DECLARATORY STATUTES.

1316. Declaratory of existing law.]—Declaratory statutes do not prove the law was otherwise before, but rather the reverse (BLACKSTONE, J.).—NICOL v. VERELST (1779), 2 Win. Bl. 1277; 96 E. R. 751.

1317. What sufficient to make statute retrospective—Declaratory form.]—YOUNG v. ADAMS, No. 1117, ante.

1318. — — —.]—The use of the words "It is declared" in a statute does not necessarily import that the statute is merely declaratory of existing law, & therefore retrospective.

The use of the expression "it is declared" to introduce new rules of law is not incorrect, & is far from uncommon (per CUR.).—HARDING v. QUEENSLAND STAMPS COMRS., [1898] A. C. 769; 67 L. J. P. C. 141; 79 L. T. 42; 14 T. L. R. 488.

1319. — Later statute correcting error in former statute.]—An Act of Parliament made to correct an error by omission in a former statute of the same session, has relation back to the time when the first Act was passed.—A.-G. v. POUGETT (1816), 2 Price, 381; 146 E. R. 130.

1320. — Explanatory of former statute.]—This Act is to "explain" the former. Sect. 1 provides for settlements by renting for the future. SECT. 10.—ENABLING STATUTES.

1324. When statutes enabling—Acts authorising companies to make railways.]—Acts of Parliament authorising cos. to make railways are now regarded as but enabling statutes, which give powers, but do not render compulsory or obligatory the exercise of those powers.—SCOTTISH NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. v. STEWART (1859) 3 Macq. 382; 33 L. T. O. S. 307; 5 Jur. N. S. 607; 7 W. R. 458, H. L.

1325. — Absence of compulsory words—Effect of acts done in pursuance of statute.]—

(1) One must look at the Act to see whether there are words of compulsion; but if enabling words only are there to be found, then they are not words of compulsion according to the ordinary construction of the English language (LORD ESHER, M.R.).

(2) . . . Take those acts; without the Act of Parliament do they contain an obligation, because you have done those acts, to go on & do something else? . . . If you say that the doing of those acts turned the permissive words in the Act of Parliament into compulsory words, you must find that enactment in the statute; & if you do not find it there, then the doing of the act afterwards cannot make it compulsory that they should go on & do something else (LORD ESHER, M.R.).

(3) The truth is, that when a statute confers powers upon a public body there may be duties which arise out of the powers when they are exercised, but the mere fact that such powers are conferred involves no implication, when the statute is silent upon the point, that the powers must be exercised. Permissive words are not compulsory (BOWEN, L.J.).—R. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1893), 62 L. J. Q. B. 572; 69 L. T. 572; 9 T. L. R. 573; 37 Sol. Jo. 669; 9 R. 1, C. A.; affg. S. C. sub nom. R. v. SECT. 11.—PERMISSIVE STATUTES.

1326. General rule—Permissive words not obligatory.]—Permissive words in an Act of Parliament are not obligatory.—EDINBURGH, PERTH & DUNDEE RY. CO. v. PHILIP (1857), 2 Macq. 514; 28 L. T. O. S. 315; 3 Jur. N. S. 249; 5 W. R. 377, H. L.

1336. ——— No particular form of words necessary.]—A statute intitled “An Act to indemnify certain persons upon the terms in this Act mentioned, & for relief of officers, etc.” is continued by a subsequent statute made for that purpose, although, in reciting its title, it is said, “upon the terms therein mentioned, & for the relief of officers, etc.,” for the legislature in continuing a statute are not bound to use any particular form of words.—R. v. LONGMEAD (1795), 2 Leach, 694; 168 E. R. 448.

1337. ——— Effect of continuance.]—Though the time in a temporary law is expired yet if it be continued Acts may be laid to be done by virtue of the first law.—R. v. MORGAN (1736), 2 Stra. 1066; 93 E. R. 1036.

1338. ——— On sections not requiring continuance.]—The Act of William IV, [1 & 2 Will. 4, c. LXXVI] was continued by subsequent Acts down to 1889, when the London coal duties were abolished, & the Act was no longer continued. Upon an information under s. 52 of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. lxxvi., for delivering coal to a purchaser from a cart without having thereon a perfect weighing machine:—Held: the Act, 1 & 2 Vict. c. ci., continuing the Act of William IV, for the further term of seven years, & the subsequent continuing Acts, must be read as referring to those sects. only of the Act which would have expired, if they had not been continued, & not to the whole Act, & therefore s. 52. which did not require to be continued, was still in force, & the information was rightly laid under it.—HOUGHTON v. FEAR BROTHERS, LTD. & WILLISHER. [1913] 2 K. B. 343; 82 L. J. K. B. 650; 109 L. T. 177; 77 J. P. 376; 29 T. L. R. 410; 11 L. G. R. 731; 23 Cox, C. C. 494, D. C.

1339. ——— By general Act.]—A local Act for amending the roads & highways in the Isle of Wight, empowered certain comrs. to take certain tolls at the several turnpikes or toll gates which might be erected on the roads by virtue of the Act. The Act authorised the comrs. to borrow money for the purposes of the Act, & to mortgage the tolls for any term during the continuance of the Act, as a security for the repayment of such money. The time limited by the Act for its continuance had expired, unless it was continued by the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 10, for continuing the Acts for making turnpike-roads in Great Britain:—Held: the local Act though not exclusively a turnpike-road Act was within the spirit of, & continued by 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 10.—BARNES v. WHITE (1845), 1 C. B. 192; 1 New Sess. Cas. 504; 14 L. J. M. C. 65; 4 L. T. O. S. 333; 9 Jur. 182; 135 E. R. 511.

1340. Effect of repeal by temporary statute—Whether prior law revives—On expiration of repealing statute.]—Where a statute professes to repeal absolutely a prior law & substitutes other provisions on the same subject, which are limited to continue only till a certain time the prior law does not revive after the repealing statute is spent unless the intention of the legislature to that effect be expressed.—WARREN v. WINDLE (1803), 3 East, 205; 102 E. R. 576.

Annotation :—Apld. Taylor v. New Windsor Corpn., [1898] 1 Q. B. 186.

1341. ——— ———.]—It is a question of construction on every Act professing to repeal or interfere with the provision of a former law whether it operate as a total or a partial & temporary repeal (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—R. v. ROGERS (1809), 10 East, 569; 103 E. R. 891.

Annotation :—Mentd. R. v. Allen, R. v. Argent, Crussall & Green, R. v. Chamberlain & Hopwood (1826), 1 Mood. C. C. 154.

1342. Effect of repeal of temporary statute—Rights taken away by statute—Whether revived on repeal.]—A turnpike Act, passed in 1819 & which was to continue in operation for twenty-one years, recited that a public bridleway across a farm would, if not stopped up, be the means of enabling persons to evade the tolls granted by the Act, & enacted that the bridleway should be vested in the owner of the farm in exchange for land of his taken for the purposes of the Act, & that, after the turnpike road had been opened for traffic, the bridleway should be stopped up, & it should be unlawful for the public to use it. Subsequent statutes continued the operation of the Act till 1856 when it was repealed:—Held: the repeal did not revive the public right to use the bridleway.—GWYNNE v. DREWITT, [1894] 2 Ch. 616; 63 L. J. Ch. 870; 71 L. T. 190; 60 J. P. 104; 43 W. R. 551; 8 R. 814.

1343. ——— ———.]—A municipal corpn. having a prescriptive right to take certain customary tolls for the passage of carriages, cattle, etc. over a bridge belonging to them, obtained in 1734 a local Act which, after reciting their right to take the customary tolls, enacted that the customary tolls should be & remain vested in them, & empowered them to take the said tolls, with a variation as to the exemption of freemen of the borough. In 1819 the corpn. obtained another local Act which repealed the former Act & empowered them to take down the old bridge & build a new one & to take tolls which varied from the old tolls in amount & subject-matter. This Act was temporary & had expired:—Held: the prescriptive right to take tolls had been merged in & extinguished by the statutory right given in 1734, & neither had nor could have been revived by the later Act, & the right to take tolls expired with the later Act.—NEW WINDSOR CORPN. v. down any rules whereby that discretion may be fettered.—LAMONT v. BEIFFE (1842), 6 J. P. 815.

1350. — Unless nature of Act requires imperative construction.]—In all cases where jurisdiction is given to the ct. by Act of Parliament by the words "it shall be lawful," those words, unless they are controlled by other parts of the Act, give the ct. a discretion in the exercise of that jurisdiction.—Re BRIDGMAN (1860), 1 Drew. & Sm. 164; 29 L. 1351. — Onus on person asserting imperative construction.]—(1) The words in a statute "it shall be lawful" of themselves merely make that legal & possible which there would, otherwise, be no right or authority to do. Their natural meaning is permissive & enabling only. But there may be circumstances which may couple the power with a duty to exercise it. It lies upon those who call for the exercise of the power to show that there is an obligation to exercise it.

1381. Implied duties—Duty to use reasonable care.] — It would seem to me to be contrary to natural justice to say that Parliament intended to impose upon a public body a liability for a thing which no reasonable care & skill could obviate. The duty may notwithstanding be absolute; but, if so, it ought to be imposed in the clearest possible terms. The intention of the Legislature is to be gathered from the language used & the subject-matter. 1394. Power for public benefit—Liberal construction.]—An Act empowering a co. to contract for purposes of public advantage ought not to receive a narrow construction.—DOVER GAS CO. v. DOVER CORPN (1855), 7 De G. M. & G. 545; 25 L. T. O. S. 277; 19 J. P. 515; 1 Jur. N. S. 812; 44 E. R. 212, L. JJ.

1395. — — — How intention of legislature measured.]—In the construction of powers conferred by Act of Parliament upon public bodies, acting for the public benefit alone, the intention of the legislature is not to be measured by the more guarded powers given to public cos. established for trading purposes.—NORTH LONDON RY. CO. v. METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS, WINTER v. SAME (1859), John. 405; 28 L. J. Ch. 909; 33 L. T. O. S. 382; 23 J. P. 515; 5 Jur. N. S. 1121; 7 W. R. 640; 70 E. R. 479.

1396. Power to alter provisions of Act—Strict interpretation.]—When an Act of Parliament confers a power upon a separate body to make alterations in that which the legislature has prescribed, we should look at the Act with a certain degree of care, almost with strictness, in order to ascertain the true sense of the language used; & that we must take care not so to construe it as to enable that body to make alterations which were never intended to be within their province (POLLOCK, C.B.).—CITY OF DUBLIN STEAM PACKET CO. v. THOMPSON (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 355; Har. & Ruth. 369; 35 L. J. C. P. 198; 15 L. T. 112; 12 Jur. N. S. 726; 14 W. R. 376; 2 Mar. L. C. 412, Ex. Ch.

1398. 9139. — — —.]—There is abundant authority to show that where a statute gives an authority to do an act which the public interest demands, especially where judicial functions are created, words which would seem to give merely an option should be so construed as to confer a duty; but in the cases illustrating this principle, the rule has been acted upon only where the general object & intention of the Act are best supported by so holding (POLLOCK, B.).—*FORBES v. (2) If it be doubtful in which sense the word "may" is used, we should be justified, by the rule of construction to which we have referred, in considering whether absurdity or repugnance would not follow from holding that a discretion was given, & might accordingly modify the word so as to avoid that consequence (JERVIS, C.J.).—*MACDOUGALL v. SUB-SECT. 4.—DISCRETIONARY POWERS.

1402. Exercise of discretion—Whether court will interfere—Bonâ fide exercise—Power to take land.] If a railway co. are acting malâ fide, & trying under their Act of Parliament to get possession of land which they mean to apply to different purposes, a ct. of equity may be justified in interfering by an injunction to prevent them; but if they act bonâ fide, they must be considered the proper judges of the portion of land which is required, for their legitimate purposes, & whether they will or will not take the lands. This is the construction to be put on all legislative powers, whether the language be that the co. may take so much of the lands as are necessary or so much as is required or is expedient, or, as in this case, simply, that they may take the lands for the purposes of their undertaking.—*STOCKTON & DARLINGTON RY. 1403. — By the court—Unfettered discretion.]—When a tribunal is invested by Act of Parliament or by Rules with a discretion, without any indication in the Act or Rules of the grounds upon which the discretion is to be exercised, it is a mistake to lay down any rules with a view of indicating the particular grooves in which the discretion should run, for if the Act or Rules did not fetter the discretion of the judges why should the ct. do so? 1404. — Whether judicial or ministerial act.]—If defts. intended to act under the statute, & erroneously acted under a wrong sect., they would not be liable in the absence of malice if the act was not merely ministerial (LORD ESHER, M.R.).

When a public duty is imposed on persons which they undertake to perform, & the performance of that duty depends upon the exercise of discretion, the carrying out of that duty cannot be said to be a merely ministerial act, but must be considered for the purposes of protection as a judicial act (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—*PARTRIDGE v. (2) Although the ct. has power to restrain parties from using a building which has been erected in a form that is in violation of the terms of a contract, or of an Act of Parliament, yet a small excess in the height of a building beyond that to which it might lawfully have been raised, where no irreparable injury arises from such excess in height would not be a case in which the ct. would interfere by interlocutory injunction to restrain the use of the building after it had been erected.—*DOVER HARBOUR (WARDEN, ETC.) v. To escape liability it would have to show some statutory authority, express or by necessary implication, to do the particular thing complained of in the way in which it was being done, & that it was impossible to exercise the powers conferred without causing damage.

(2) The ct. will grant an injunction to restrain the infringement of a legal right by a co. acting under statutory powers when pltf.'s rights will not be adequately protected or vindicated by damages.

1423. Must be reasonable.]—If the Act of Parliament has authorised the particular thing to be done, then you cannot sue a man or a co. for doing what is a lawful act. In my opinion this principle applies, whether the powers are given to public authorities acting for the public benefit or to railway cos. or others acting for their own profit. To this principle there is, however, one qualification which is well settled, & indeed is admitted by defts.—namely, that in carrying out works authorised by statute you must not act negligently. A co. acting under statutory powers is treated as a private individual acting within his own rights. If a private individual acting within his own rights acts negligently, he is liable; although the act is perfectly lawful, if he does it negligently he is liable, & so it is with a co. having these powers. But there is yet a further proposition which defts. in this case deny, but which appears to me to be well settled. Not only must a co. not be guilty of negligence, but it must also act reasonably (FARWELL, J.).—ROBERTS v. CHARING CROSS, EUSTON & HAMPSTEAD RY. CO. (1903), 87 L. T. 732; 19 T. L. R. 160.

1447. Application of doctrine of contributory negligence.—Although there may be cases, even in actions for neglect of duty, in which the question, whether pltf. contributed to the loss or injury by his own negligence, may not properly arise on the general issue, yet it may arise even in actions for breach of a statutable regulation, where any duty has been cast upon pltf. either by the statute, or through his own position or conduct, the neglect of which has so far contributed to the injury that it has not been caused entirely by the wrongful act or neglect of defts.—ELLIS v. 1526. ——— Court not to make or find ambiguity unnecessarily.]—It was much pressed in the ct. below, & again before their lordships, that the statute being a penal, or, as it was phrased, a highly penal one, it was to be construed strictly. It appears to their lordships necessary to say a few words as to this topic, which is so often pressed in argument. No doubt all penal statutes are to be construed strictly, that is to say, the ct. must see that the thing charged as an offence is within the plain meaning of the words used, & must not strain the words on any notion that there has been a slip, that there has been a casus omissus, that the thing is so clearly within the mischief that it must have been intended to be included & would have been included if thought of. On the other hand, the person charged has a right to say that the thing charged, although within the words, is not within the spirit of the enactment. But where the thing is brought within the words & within the spirit, there a penal enactment is to be construed, like any other instrument, according to the fair common-sense meaning of the language used, & the ct. is not to find or make any doubt or ambiguity in the language of a penal statute, where such doubt or ambiguity would clearly not be found or made in the same language in any other instrument (per CUR.).—*DYKE v. PART V. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.

1529 i. Whether evidence of mens rea necessary.]—The question whether or not the common law doctrine of mens rea is excluded by a particular statute is to be determined by considering the scope & object of the statute & the

is so conceived. Bye-laws are constantly made regulating the width of thoroughfares, the height of buildings, the thickness of walls, & a variety of other matters necessary for the general welfare, health, or convenience, & such bye-laws are enforced by the sanction of penalties, & the breach of them constitutes an offence & is a criminal matter. In such cases it would, generally speaking, be no answer to proceedings for infringement of the bye-law that the person committing it had bonâ fide made an accidental miscalculation or an erroneous measurement. The Acts are properly construed as imposing the penalty when the act is done, no matter how innocently, & in such a case the substance of the enactment is that a man shall take care that the statutory direction is obeyed, & that if he fails to do so he does it at his peril.

Whether an enactment is to be construed in this sense or with the qualification ordinarily imported into the construction of criminal statutes, that there must be a guilty mind, must, I think, depend upon the subject-matter of the enactment, & the various circumstances that may make the one construction or the other reasonable or unreasonable (WILLS, J.).—*R. v. 1530. Exclusion of other than prescribed remedy.]

—Where the legislature has passed a new statute giving a new remedy, that remedy is the only one which can be pursued (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—R. v. ESSEX COUNTY COURT JUDGE (1887), 18 Q. B. 1531. —. —.] — (1) Before referring to the statutes it is desirable that I should state the principle which should govern a case of this description, & it is nowhere given better, I think, than in Hawkins' Pleas of the Crown, Bk. 2, c. 25, s. 4. The passage is as follows: It seems to be a good general ground that wherever a statute prohibits a matter of public grievance to the liberties & security of a subject, or commands a matter of public convenience, as the repairing of the common streets of a town, an offender against such statute is punishable, not only at the suit of the party aggrieved, but also by way of indictment for this contempt of the statute, unless such method of proceeding do manifestly appear to be excluded by it. Yet, if the party offending have been fined to the King in the action brought by the party, as it is said that he may in every action for doing a thing prohibited by statute, it seems questionable whether he may be afterwards indicted, because that would be to make him liable to a second fine for the same offence. . . . Also where a statute makes a new offence which was no way prohibited by the common law, & appoints a peculiar manner of proceeding against the offender as by commitment, or action of debt, or information, etc., without mentioning an indictment, it seems to be settled to this day that it would not maintain an indictment, because the mentioning the other methods of proceeding seems impliedly to exclude that of indictment. Yet it has been adjudged that, if such a statute give a recovery by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, or otherwise, it authorises a proceeding by way of indictment. Also where a statute adds a further penalty to an offence prohibited by the common law, there can be no doubt but that the offender may still be indicted, if the prosecutor think fit, at the common law; & if the indictment for such offence conclude contra formam statuti, & cannot be made good as an indictment upon the statute, it seems to be now settled that it may be maintained as an indictment at common law.

This is a full statement of the principle which must guide me as regards the decision of this case. The inquiry to which I have to address myself is—first, whether the offence charged is a statutory offence simply; secondly, whether, if it be so, the statute creating the offence has prescribed a particular remedy in such terms as to exclude either expressly or by implication the remedy by indictment (CHARLES, J.).

(2) I have now examined all the authorities that have been cited, & I repeat that they appear to me, when properly understood, to support the conclusion at which I have arrived, that upon the true construction of this statute creating, or recreating, a duty, & describing a particular penalty for a wilful neglect of that duty, the remedy by indictment is excluded (CHARLES, J.).—R. v. HALL, [1891] 1 Q. B. 747; 60 L. J. M. C. 124; 64 L. T. 394; 17 Cox, C. C. 278.

1533. —.]—The term “remedial” is applicable to those Acts only where a remedy is given to the party injured; the term “penal” is applied where the remedy given is to be construed strictly & not beyond the terms. This is a penal statute & is to be construed literally & strictly. Whether it was the intention of the legislature that the statute should have a retrospective . . . operation, it is unnecessary to consider, because, upon the face of the Act there is nothing to warrant us in giving it a retrospective construction (HOLROYD, J.).—*HUNTINGTOWER (LORD) v. 1539. Two penalties provided by Act—Not cumulative.]—Croydon Improvement Act inflicts a penalty of £200 on any gas or other co. for suffering any impure matter to flow into any stream, etc., to be sued for by any common informer. Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 15), s. 21, imposes the like penalty of £200 for the same offence; such penalty, sect. 22, to be recovered by the person into whose water such substance shall be conveyed, or whose water shall be fouled from any such act:—Held: in the case of a Croydon gas co., with whose private Act Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 15), was incorporated the two penalties were not cumulative but that the latter was given by way of substitution for the former.

In construing a penal statute of any kind, we are bound to take care that the party is brought strictly within it & to give no effect to it beyond what it is clear that the Legislature intended. . . . In the imposition of a tax or a duty, & still more of a penalty, if there be any fair & reasonable doubt, we are so to construe the statute as to give the party sought to be charged the benefit of the doubt (POLLOCK, C.B.).—*PARRY v. 1550. General rule.]—The form which the legislature enacts for penalties where it is intended that there shall be a penalty for each & every violation of an Act of Parliament, is to be found in the cases of which the Excise Acts present a very familiar example, where, for instance, a penalty is directed to be imposed & forfeited for each & every room that is not entered, & each & every tub & so on. 2. Construction with reference to fiscal policy at time of passing Act.]—In construing a revenue Act regard should be had to the general fiscal policy of the country at the time the Act was passed. When that is a matter of history, reference must be had to the sources of such history, which are not only to be found in the 1609. ———.]—The principle has often been laid down that taxing Acts are to be construed strictly. Where the Legislature has given the Crown revenue, that revenue must be exacted, however burdensome; but where the Legislature has not clearly given the Crown the revenue, the Act cannot be strained or supplemented by any implications to effect that object (HAMILTON, J.).—A.-G. v. 1612. ———. In favour of foreigner.]—(1) We are entitled & indeed bound when construing the terms of any provision found in a statute to consider any other parts of the Act which throw light upon the intention of the legislature & which may serve to show that the particular provision ought not to be construed as it would be if considered alone & apart from the rest of the Act (LORD HERSCHELL).

(2) At the same time, I am far more denying that if it can be shown that a particular interpretation of a taxing statute would operate unreasonably in the case of a foreigner sojourning in this country it would afford a reason for adopting some other interpretation if it were possible consistently with the ordinary canons of construction (LORD HERSCHELL).—COLQUHOUN v. But I fail to see why it should be less necessary or reasonable, unless the words of the statutes exclude it, to regard the fitness of the thing supplied for the purpose of the statutory obligation as an element of that obligation itself, than it is to do so when the obligation results properly from contract (LORD SELBORNE).—*MILNES v. 1636. ———.]—(1) Where the provisions of a private Act are not limited to the interests of the parties mutually obliged, but impose an obligation in favour of third parties who are sufficiently designated, the obligation so imposed operates as a direct enactment of the legislature in favour of such parties.

(2) In cases where the provisions of a local & personal Act directly impose mutual obligations upon two persons or cos., such provisions may . . . be fairly considered as having this analogy to contract, that they must, as between those parties, be construed in precisely the same way as if they had been matter, not of enactment, but of private agreement (LORD WATSON).

Ever since it has become the practice for promoters of undertakings of a public nature to apply to Parliament for exceptional powers & privileges, the Acts of Parliament by which those powers & privileges are granted have been regarded as parliamentary contracts, as bargains between the promoters on the one hand & Parliament on the other (LORD MACNAGHTEN).—DAVIS & SONS v. 1637. ———.]—It will be observed that although it is rights of the traders & others carrying on business which are affected, it is the corpn. & co. who make the agreement; & this may be very important when one comes to consider whether, upon a breach of this agreement confirmed by statute affecting the rights of traders & others, an action based on the breach may be brought by the injured person, as is the case when an individual is injured by the breach of a statute passed for his benefit, provided such a remedy comes within the purview of the Legislature in the particular statute, which it is especially likely to do in a case in which the Act is not an Act of public & general policy, but is rather in the nature of a private legislative bargain between certain persons likely to be affected by the work authorised by a special Act & a body of undertakers as to the manner in which they will keep up certain public works (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).—CROSSFIELD (JOSEPH) & SONS, LTD. v. SECT. 3.—CONSTRUCTION.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1640. Liberal construction — Act for public benefit.]—The Act of Parliament relating to the New River Water co. ought to have a liberal construction, so as the town in general may be served with water.—NEW RIVER CO. v. GRAVES (1701), 2 Vern. 431; 23 E. R. 877.

1644. According to balance of convenience.]—Thus & all other railways made under Acts of Parliament are made, not only, perhaps I may say not principally, for the private benefit of the shareholders, but for the public benefit as furnishing lines of traffic which, from the time when the railway is made, the public have a right to use. You must, therefore, consider that in any provisions such as those now to be construed in such Acts the public interest & the private interest are impartially & justly regarded upon the one side & upon the other; & if upon words or expressions at all ambiguous it would seem that the balance of hardship or inconvenience would be strongly against the public on the one construction, or strongly against a private person on another construction, it is I think consistent with all sound principles to pay regard to that balance of inconvenience in determining such a doubtful question of construction (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—DIXON v. CALEDONIAN & GLASGOW & SOUTH WESTERN RY. COS. (1880), 5 App. Cas. 820; 43 L. T. 513; 45 J. P. 108; 29 W. R. 249, H. L.

1666. Acts for public improvements by corporation.—(1) Where persons have special powers conferred on them by Parliament for effecting a particular purpose they cannot be allowed to exercise those powers for any purpose of a collateral kind. Therefore, a co. authorised, making due compensation, to take compulsorily the lands of any person for a definite object may be restrained by injunction from any attempt to take them for another object.

(2) Where the legislature has conceded power to a body of adventurers for a certain purpose, as for example the formation of a railway, such a body must show some ground for the concession, & the legislature has no concern with its means for obtaining the funds to carry its declared objects into effect, & in order to effect them it must not exceed the limits of its powers. But the case is different where an existing public body, such as the corpn. of a city, is entrusted by the legislature with the duty of making public improvements in its city, & the powers thus entrusted to it for such a purpose will not be subject, as in the other case, to a strict & restrictive construction.

(3) Where the promoters of a bill giving discretionary powers over property conditionally agree that if the bill passes they will dispose of the property to be acquired in a particular way, this anticipation of the possession of their powers does not deprive them of discretion to exercise those powers when obtained.—GALLOWAY v. 1667. Construction in favour of public—Where meaning doubtful.—STOURBRIDGE CANAL CO. v. WHEELLEY, No. 1621, ante.

PART VII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.

1667 i. Construction in favour of public—Where meaning doubtful.—The language of private Acts is considered as the language of the promoters, & where doubts arise as to the construction of that language, the benefit of the doubt is to be given to those who might be prejudiced by the exercise of the powers given by the Act.—Re NEW BRUNSWICK & CANADA RY. CO., Ex p. A.-G. OF NEW BRUNSWICK (1878), 17 N. B. R. (1 P. & B.) 667.—CAN.

1667 ii. —. —.]—Where any doubt arises under any private Act of Parliament the benefit of the doubt should be given against the forfeiture of existing rights or compulsory alienation of property whether belonging to the Crown or to private individuals.—EAST LONDON MUNICIPALITY v. COLONIAL GOVERNMENT (1885), 3 S. C. 313.—S. AF.

1668. ———.]—Clauses in Acts empowering cos. to levy a charge upon the public, as in Railway Acts for example, must, where the meaning is doubtful, be construed favourably for the public.—*STOCKTON & DARLINGTON RY. 1673. ———.]—In a proceeding against B. & C. to have it declared, that they had been trespassers on the lands of A. it was pleaded to the effect that B. & C. had a right of way over these lands as inhabitants of a neighbouring town & as two of the public. To this it was replied, that upon the true construction of an Act of Parliament, local & personal, the right of way, if any such had existed which was denied, had been thereby extinguished :—Held : such an Act of Parliament is not to be construed strictly as against the public, who were, in fact, no parties to the passing of the Act; & the provisions of such Act & the works which had been constructed thereunder, were not inconsistent with the existence of a public footpath over these lands.—CAMPBELL v. LANG (1853), 1 Eq. Rep. 98; 1 Macq. 451; 21 L. T. O. S. 119; 1 W. R. 538, H. L.

1674. ———.]—The cts. in construing private statutes, acted on a presumption that persons should not without compensation be prejudiced in matters which they could lawfully do unless that intention was clearly expressed . . . clear & unequivocal words were necessary to derogate from common right to deprive persons of the power to do what they were doing for profit at the passing of the Act without anyone having the power of preventing them (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—*BOURNEMOUTH-SWANAGE MOTOR ROAD & FERRY CO. v. 1675. Construction in favour of party adversely affected.]—Where the words of a railway co.'s Act are capable of two interpretations, but the general intent of the Legislature is complete indemnification to the party whose land is taken by the co., the ct. will incline to that construction of the words which will make them consistent with the general intent.—Ex p. ETON COLLEGE (1850), 20 L. J. Ch. 1; 16 L. T. O. S. 121; 15 Jur. 45, L. C.

1676. ———.]—I feel that the Act [Land Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18)] is to be construed in this sense liberally; that persons are not to be deprived without adequate compensation of that which they are in actual occupation of or of that which is necessary for the enjoyment of their property as a residence (WOOD, V.-C.).—*STEELE v. 1677. ———.]—In construing a private Act of Parliament the ct. will consider on whose application it was obtained, & will not hold that it authorises the persons who obtained it to interfere with the rights of others without making compensation unless it contains provisions to that effect in clear & distinct terms.—*A.-G. v. 1678. ———.]—I agree that we ought to construe this Act [private Act] of Parliament strictly, even supposing the true construction of the Act does an injustice to the parties. But one may well approach the construction of an Act of this kind in the belief that it was not intended to confiscate pl'ts.' right, for this would be a simple case of confiscation, & we ought not to suppose that this was intended, or was even sought for by the co. SUB-SECT. 2.—EFFECT ON PRIVATE AGREEMENTS.

1712. Whether applicable to agreements subsequent to Act.—A local Act of Parliament empowered trustees to build a church & to make rates on all houses in the parish, one half on the landlords the other half on the tenants. It was also enacted that the tenants should first pay the whole rate & deduct moiety out of the rent, & that every landlord should allow of such deduction “notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary.” After the passing of this Act, certain premises in the parish were leased, the tenant covenanting to pay all rates & taxes. The landlord having refused to deduct half the church rate from the rent, on the ground that the Act extended only to agreements in existence at the time of its passing, pltf. served him with a plaint from the county ct. The ct. refused a writ of prohibition, “the title to any corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments” within County Courts Act, 1846 (c. 95), s. 58, not being in question; & semble, the local Act did not apply to agreements entered into subsequently to the time of its passing.—Re KNIGHT, GWYNNE v. 1715. — To limit exercise of discretionary powers.—GALLOWAY v. LONDON CORPN., No. 1666, ante.

1716. Agreement confirmed by Act—Powers under agreement exceeding statutory powers—Necessity for statutory reference to additional powers.—Under a settlement dated July 7, 1888, P. P. C. was in 1900 tenant for life in possession of a settled estate in the Isle of Thanet & was then a bachelor, & G. P. C. was then tenant for life in remainder. By an agreement dated Apr. 20, 1900, & made between P. P. C. & G. P. C. of the one part & the W. & B. Water Co. of the other part the co. was authorised to make an adit or tunnel under the settled estate, to be completed by Dec. 31, 1914, or such later date as the grantors should appoint, & it was agreed that upon completion the grantors should by deed grant to the co. the right in perpetuity to maintain & use the adit & that the co. should pay to the grantors in perpetuity a rent of 1s. a yard per annum & should supply a certain quantity of water free to farms on the estate. The grantors were defined as P. P. C. & G. P. C. & their successors in title under the settlement. By the W. & B. Water Act 1900, the co. was (inter alia) authorised to make the said adit, & by sect. 42 the said agreement was confirmed & made binding on the parties thereto & was set out in a schedule to the Act, but the settlement was not otherwise referred to nor any special powers conferred upon the grantors. The adit was not completed by the agreed date, which had been extended to June 30, 1915. It was now proposed that the completion should be postponed till Dec. 31, 1930, & that the co. should in consideration of the extension of time pay an increased rental & supply an increased amount of free water to the estate. P. P. C. was now married & had three daughters:—Held: though when an agreement confirmed by a private Act confers powers on a grantor outside any statutory powers special reference to such powers ought to be made in the Act, the confirmation of the agreement sufficiently expressed the intention of Parliament to confer such powers, & P. P. C. & G. P. C. jointly could further extend the time for completion of the works & grant a perpetual easement in consideration of a perpetual rentcharge which could be increased beyond the amount specified in the agreement.—WESTGATE & BIRCHINGTON WATER CO. v. POWELL-COTTON (1915), 85 L. J. Ch. 459; 113 L. T. 689.

1717. — Effect of confirmation.—The provisions of a confirmatory statute are to be regarded as an explanation & identification of the agreement confirmed by it, rather than as the creation of actual & independent rights.—TORONTO CORPN. v. TORONTO RY. CO., [1916] 2 A. C. 542; 85 L. J. P. C. 205; 115 L. T. 461, P. C.

1718. Effect on ordinary legal incidents of agreement.—It was said that the law is different when a compulsory sale is made under an Act of Parliament, in which case it was argued that the purchaser takes nothing but what the Act of Parliament gives in terms. It is extremely difficult to understand what difference there can be for this purpose, between the effect of a conveyance when the contract is entered into under the authority of an Act of Parliament & when it is made by private bargain. In either case the conveyance must pass the property described in the deed with its legal incidents. There may, indeed, be, either in the conveyance or in the Act of Parliament, provisions which exclude from the conveyance of the land its ordinary legal incidents, but unless something to this effect can be shown, the ordinary legal incidents will attach to the land (LORD KINGS-DOWN).—ELLIOT v. But there is this difference between a rule & an enactment, that whereas, apart from such provision as we are considering, you may canvass a rule & determine whether or not it was within the power of those who made it, you cannot canvass in that way the provisions of an Act of Parliament (LORD HERSHELL, C.).—PATENT AGENTS INSTITUTE v. SUB-SECT. 2.—NO PARTICULAR REMEDY PRESCRIBED.

1768. General rule—Action lies at common law.]—There are three classes of cases in which a liability may be established founded upon a statute. One is, where there was a liability existing at common law, & that liability is affirmed by a statute which gives a special & peculiar form of remedy different from a remedy which existed at common law: there, unless the statute contains words which expressly or by necessary implication exclude the common law remedy, the party suing has his election to pursue either that or the statu-have an action by the common law.—WARD v. FREEMAN (1852), 2 I. C. L. R. 460, 499.—IR.

o. Enforcement by best means avail-tory remedy. The second class of cases is, where the statute gives the right to sue merely, but provides no particular form of remedy: there, the party can only proceed by action at common law. But there is a third class, viz. where a liability not existing at common law is created by a statute which at the same time gives a special & particular remedy for enforcing it. The remedy provided by the statute must be followed, & it is not competent to the party to pursue the course applicable to cases of the second class. The form given by the statute must be adopted & adhered to (WILLES, J.).—WOLVERHAMPTON NEW WATERWORKS CO. v. HAWKESFORD (1859), 6 C. B. N. S. 336; 28 L. J. C. P. 242; 33 L. T. O. S. 366; 5 Jur. N. 1770. ———. ———.] It appears to me to be none the less a debt because no particular mode of enforcing the payment is given by the statute. When there is a statutory obligation to pay money, & no other remedy is expressly given, there would be a remedy by action (LORD COLERIDGE, C.J.).—BOOTH v. TRAIL (1883), 12 Q. B. D. 8; 53 L. J. Q. B. 24; 49 L. T. 471; sub nom. Re HAYSON, BOOTH v. TRAIL, 32 W. R. 122, D. C.

1771. ———. ———.] The only peculiarity of the case is that the remedy created by the statute is not co-extensive in point of time with the duty, for the Act permits the destruction of the remedy before the duty has been performed. . . . The principles applicable to such a duty . . . are well settled & rest on the well-founded assumption that the legislature does not intend its enactment to be brutum fulmen: if, therefore, a statute creates such a duty but no remedy, an action at common law will lie for breach of such duty (FARWELL, J.).—PULSFORD v. DEVENISH, [1903] 2 Ch. 625; 73 L. J. Ch. 35; 52 W. R. 73; 19 T. L. R. 688; 11 Mans. 393.

I never heard of such a thing as that persons who are indictable as being guilty of a misdemeanour in breaking a statutory obligation should put forward by way of defence that it was more for the public benefit that they should disobey than that they should obey the statute (A. 1782. When granted—Construction doubtful.]—Where a co. is acting clearly beyond the powers of an Act of Parliament, the ct. will not hesitate to restrain them by injunction, & to keep them within the bounds prescribed by their Act of Parliament. In a case of doubtful construction, the ct. may interfere, taking care that the parties have their legal rights decided in a ct. of law. Then the ct. either tells them to ascertain their legal rights, & abstains from interfering, or it interferes by injunction in the meantime, according to the circumstances of the case, & the degree of doubt that may exist on the question of law, & also the comparative injury which may be inflicted on one side or the other, if the injunction be granted or refused. . . . 1798. What must be pleaded—Where particular exemptions from liability.—It is a well-established principle, that, in all cases where proceedings are taken against a party for the recovery of a penalty under a statute, if there be any exception in the clause which gives the penalty, exempting certain cases from its operation, the declaration or information must show that the particular case is not within the exception. But where it comes by way of proviso in a subsequent part of the Act, it is not necessary to notice it in the declaration or information, but it is a matter which deft. must allege as a ground of defence. The same rule applies with increased force & efficacy to the case where penalties are given by one statute, & particular cases are, by a subsequent statute, exempted from its operation (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).—THIBAUT v. GIBSON (1843), 12 M. & W. 88; 1 Dow. & L. 253; 13 L. J. Ex. 2; 7 Jur. 1043; 152 E. R. 1122.

1801. — Must be established with reasonable certainty.—In an action upon a penal statute, unless the legislature expressly directs that certain proof shall be sufficient, it is not sufficient to give evidence which is consistent with the guilt of the person charged, but you must go further & prove that deft. has in mind the penalty with reasonable certainty (POLLOCK, C.B.).—*DYER v. 1802. Defence to action—Previous judgment in favour of third party—Effect of collusion.—Defts. pleaded in bar to an action to recover a penalty for breach of 21 Geo. 3, c. 49, a judgment in favour of a third party for the same penalty. That judgment was obtained in an action which was commenced in the name of R., with his consent, while pltf.'s action was pending, & was carried through to judgment by the intervention of a solr. employed by defts. & without the interference of R. it was commenced for the protection of defts. from any action brought or to be brought in respect of the penalty claimed in it; & also for the purpose of taking the Home Secretary's opinion whether he would remit the penalty:—Held: the judgment recovered was no bar to an action for the same offence by a different pltf.—*GIRDLESTONE v. 1805. Whether leave granted to amend pleading—Effect of delay.]—The ct. will grant leave to amend in penal actions, even after the time limited for bringing a new action; provided pltf. has not been guilty of any unnecessary delay in prosecuting his suit, & the amendment prayed for does not introduce any new substantive cause of action.—MADDOCK v. HAMMET (1796), 7 Term Rep. 55; 101 E. R. 851.

1806. ———.]—The ct. will not permit any amendments to be made in a penal action, where pltf. has been guilty of delay in carrying on the suit.—RANKIN v. MARSH (1798), 8 Term Rep. 30; 101 E. R. 1249.

1807. ———.]—The statute has limited the time within which a penal action shall be commenced; clearly intending also, that such an action shall be prosecuted without delay. I think a party who, after he has commenced such an action, has been guilty of any delay, is not entitled to any indulgence. Here the action was commenced in Sept. 1828, & pltf. did not declare till Trinity term, 1829, & then did not proceed to trial at the next assizes. The time which has elapsed is so great that I think this rule ought to be discharged (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—WOOD v. GRIMWOOD (1830), 10 B. & C. 689; 5 Man. & Ry. K. B. 584; 109 E. R. 606.

1812. Mistake or misdirection.]—This ct. will grant a new trial in a penal action on account of a mistake or misdirection of the judge. If any matter be disclosed to an attorney in the cause, he cannot be permitted to give it in evidence, either in that or any other action. It is the privilege of the client & not of the attorney; but such privilege is confined to counsel, solrs. & attorneys, when acting in their respective characters.—*WILSON v. 1813. ———.]—A misapprehension of the law by the jury, whether occasioned by their own mistake, or the misdirection of the judge, is good ground for granting a new trial in a penal action, where the verdict has passed for the deft., if the ct. are satisfied that the verdict proceeded entirely on such misapprehension.—GREGORY v. TUFFS (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 310; 2 Dowl. 711; 4 Tyr. 820; 3 L. J. Ex. 295; 149 E. R. 1098.

1858. — — — — — What may be taken into consideration—Particular remedy provided by statute.]—Where an absolute duty is imposed upon a person by statute it is not necessary, in order to make him liable for breach of that duty, to show negligence. Whether there be negligence or not, he is responsible quacunqve via for non-performance of the duty. As authority for that the case of Gray v. Pullen (1864), 5 B. & S. 970, may be referred to, where it was held in the Exch. Ch. by the whole ct. that the breach of a statutory duty such as that now in question of itself gives a right of action to a person thereby injured, unless the case can be brought within some known exception to that rule. An exception to the rule is where, a new duty or right being created by statute, a new remedy is given by the statute to a person injured by a violation of it, & upon the purview of the whole Act it appears that the remedy so given is intended to be a substitute for the right of action which would otherwise exist (RIGBY, L.J.).

one belonging to a class of persons for whose benefit & protection the statute imposes the duty is injured by failure to perform it, prima facie, &, if there be nothing to the contrary, an action by the person so injured will lie against the person who has so failed to perform the duty. I have equally no doubt that, where in a statute of this kind a remedy is provided in cases of non-performance of the statutory duty, that is a matter to be taken into consideration for the purpose of determining whether an action will lie for injury caused by non-performance of that duty, or whether the Legislature intended that there should be no other remedy than the statutory remedy; but it is by no means conclusive or the only matter to be taken into consideration for that purpose. If it be found that the remedy so provided by the statute is to enure for the benefit of the person injured by the breach of the statutory duty, that is an additional matter which ought to be taken into consideration in dealing with the question whether the Legislature intended the statutory remedy to be the only remedy. But again, the fact that the Legislature has provided that that remedy shall enure, or under some circumstances shall enure, for the benefit of the person injured, is not conclusive of the question, &, although it may be a cogent & weighty consideration, other matters also have to be considered (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).—GROVES v. WIMBORNE (LORD), [1898] 2 Q. B. 402; 67 L. J. Q. B. 862; 79 L. T. 284; 47 W. R. 87, C. A.

SECT. 6.—TRANSACTIONS FORBIDDEN BY STATUTE.

1859. Voidness by statute—Whether distinguishable from voidness at common law.]—I think there is no difference between things made void by Act of Parliament & things void by the common law. . . . There has been a distinction mentioned between a bond being void by statute, & at common law, & it is said that in the first case, if it be bad, or void in any part, it is void in toto; but that at common law it may be void in part, & good in part, but this proves nothing in the present case; the judges formerly thought an Act of Parliament might be eluded if they did not make the whole void, if part was void; it is said the statute is like a tyrant, where he comes he makes all void, but the common law is like a nursing father, makes only void that part where the fault is, & preserves the rest (WILMOT, C.J.).—COLLINS v. BLANTERN (1767), 2 Wils. 341; 95 E. R. 847.

The general rule is that when you have an Act of Parliament enacting particular provisions & in a subsequent Act there are provisions which are inconsistent with the provisions of the first Act both enactments cannot stand together. The enactment in the second Act stands & repeals the enactment in the first Act. Of course from the necessity of the case, it is an implied & not an express repeal (CAVE, J.).—*SUMMERS v. B. Intention to Repeal.

1887. Necessity for.]—Whether a subsequent statute affirmative is a repeal of a former statute made concerning the same matter is a large field to walk in, & no way pertinent to this case, for all those statutes depend upon the penning; & the intent of the makers must be collected out of the words, how far they meant to repeal or confirm; & therefore leaving that consideration, I shall rather betake myself to that which is more pertinent to our purposes; which is, that statutes introductive of a new law penned in the affirmative, do always repeal former statutes concerning the same matter as implying a negative; & if this be a new estate in this office created by this Act of Parliament, as plainly it is, it being different from that which was the former estate by the statute of Henry VIII., I take it this statute introducing a new law, being in the affirmative, does plainly imply a negative (EYRES, J.).—*HARCOURT v. It is to be observed that it is not merely that the two Acts are to be read as one; but the earlier Act, the Act of 1868, is to be read as if it incorporated the later Act of 1888. It would be doing violence to the rules of construction to hold that the provisions of an Act which specially provides for the trial of Admty. causes by a judge, or by a judge assisted by assessors, are to be overruled, & in many cases, rendered nugatory, by a general enactment, contained in the same Act, providing for the trial of "actions" by a judge & jury (BRUCE, J.).—THE TYNWALD, [1895] P. 142; 64 L. 1970. —.]—One objection raised to the operation of the Act upon this case is, that it is a general Act, & that, as a rule, general Acts do not amount to a repeal of special Acts. That is a proposition which is, I think, of general application, though it is, of course, subject to a variety of considerations. You have to ascertain whether, upon a fair consideration of the two statutes taken together, it might not be inferred, & properly inferred, that the intention was that the later Act should repeal or modify the former one. The prima facie view is, that the general Act does not repeal the special Act unless there is something in the general Act which would lead to the fair inference that such would be the proper view to be taken of it (BAGGALLAY, L.J.).—*ESDAILE v. 2035. —.]—There were one or two other cases cited which have an important application to the present case, that is to say, cases where you find in an Act a repealing clause followed by a saving clause. There you have to see how far the two enactments can co-exist. It seems to me that the principle laid down in those cases is applicable to the present case. That principle is this: Where you have a repeal & you have also a saving clause, you have to consider whether the substituted enactment contains anything incompatible with the previously existing enactment. The question is, aye or no, is there incompatibility between the two. In those cases the judges, in holding that there was a saving clause large enough to annul the repeal said that you must see whether the true effect was to substitute something incompatible with the enactment in the Act repealed; & that, if you found something in the repealing Act incompatible with the general enactments in the repealed Act, then you must treat the jurisdiction under the repealed Act as pro tanto wiped out (COLLINS, M.R.).—Re R., [1906] 1 Ch. 730; 75 L. Part XI.—Codifying and Consolidating Statutes.

2094. Codifying statutes—Object.]—I think the proper course is in the first instance to examine the language of the statute & to ask what is its natural meaning, uninfluenced by any considerations derived from the previous state of the law, & not to start with inquiring how the law previously stood, & then, assuming that it was probably intended to leave it unaltered, to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view.

If a statute, intended to embody in a code a particular branch of the law, is to be treated in this fashion, it appears to me that its utility will be almost entirely destroyed, & the very object with which it was enacted will be frustrated. The purpose of such a statute surely was that on any point specifically dealt with by it, the law should be ascertained by interpreting the language used instead of, as before, by roaming over a vast number of authorities in order to discover what the law was, extracting it by a minute critical examination of the prior decisions, dependent upon a knowledge of the exact effect even of an obsolete proceeding such as a demurrer to evidence. I am of course far from asserting that resort may never be had to the previous state of the law for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the provisions of the code. If, for example, a provision be of doubtful import, such resort would be perfectly legitimate. Or, again, if in a code of the law of negotiable instruments words be found which have previously acquired a technical meaning, or been used in a sense other than their ordinary one, in relation to such instruments, the same interpretation might well be put upon them in the code. I give these as examples merely; they, of course, do not exhaust the category. What, however, I am venturing to insist upon is, that the first step taken should be to interpret the language of the statute, & that an appeal to earlier decisions can only be justified on some special ground (LORD HERSHELL).

It seems to me that, construing the statute by adding to it words which are neither found therein nor for which authority could be found in the language of the statute itself, is to sin against one of the most familiar rules of construction, & I am wholly unable to adopt the view that, where a statute is expressly said to codify the law, you are at liberty to go outside the code so created, because before the existence of that code, another law prevailed (LORD HALSBURY).—*BANK OF ENGLAND v. 2096 i. — Construction—No reference to be made to previous law—Except on special grounds.]—Crimes Act, 1908, is a code, & should be constructed 2098. ————.]—The Act which we have to construe is a consolidating & amending Act; the general objects of such Acts is to present the whole body of the statutory law on the subject in a complete form, repealing the former statutes. The principle of interpretation of a codifying Act is laid down by LORD HERSCHELL in the Bank of England v. Vagliano, No. 2094, ante, a statute codifying the law is to be interpreted as it stands, & recourse is not to be had to the former law, except upon some special ground, such, for instance, as an ambiguous provision.—THAMES CONSERVATORS v. 2100. ————.]—(1) Nor can the history of the Quebec Code be altogether banished from the recollection of those who administer its provisions, & it is true that under certain conditions it is legitimate to refer to the prior cases which it was intended to codify. A construction of articles which have long been before the cts., differing from that hitherto accepted, will always, even in a tribunal not bound by prior decisions, be adopted with caution.

Still, the first step, the indispensable starting-point, is to take the Code itself & to examine its words, & to ask whether their meaning is plain. Only if the enactment is not plain can light be usefully sought from exterior sources. Of course it must not be forgotten what the enactment is, namely, a Code of systematised principles, & rules, not a body of administrative directions or an institutional exposition. Of course also the Code, or at least the cognate articles, should be read as a whole, forming a connected scheme; they are not a series of detached enactments. Of course, again, there is a point at which mere linguistic clearness only masks the obscurity of actual provisions or leads to such irrational or unjust results that, however clear the actual expression may be, the conclusion is still clearer that no such meaning could have been intended by the legislature. Whether particular words are plain or not is rarely susceptible of such argument. They must be read & passed upon. The conclusion must largely depend on the impression formed by the mind that has to decide (per CUR.).

(2) The usual rule . . . namely that effect must be given if possible to all the words used, for the legislature is deemed not to waste its words or to say anything in vain (per CUR.).—QUEBEC RAILWAY LIGHT, HEAT & POWER CO. v. VANDRY, [1920] A. C. 662; 89 L. J. P. C. 99; 123 L. T. 1; 36 T. L. R. 296, P. C.

2101. ————.]—(1) It seems to me that when you have to construe a technical expression introduced into the legal vocabulary by a series of statutes forming one code, you naturally turn to the code for light & help, & the key to the true meaning of the expression will, I think, be found in the latest development of legislation rather than in its earliest effort (LORD MACNAGHTEN).

(2) The principle that in statutes words are to be taken in their legal sense has . . . a special cogency when the words in question represent only legal conceptions. 2107 ii. ———.]—In interpreting a Consolidating Statute, all those considerations which have to be omitted in regard to a code are to guide the ct. in its construction of a Consolidating Act. The previous state of the law must be ascertained & the various sects. of the repealed Acts must be compared carefully with those sects. in the Consolidating Act which purport to re-enact them. The form only of the repealed Acts is altered, but in substance does not at any time cease to be in force, the repeal of the former Act & the re-enactment of its substance occurring simultaneously. It may be that in altering the form, an alteration of the law may be inadvertently effected by omission or by reason of the wording of the substituted sects., but so far as the title of this Act throws light on the intention of the legislature it is one to consolidate only & not to consolidate & amend.—R. v. 2138. ———.]—Here the time for doing the Act in question has been fixed by Act of Parliament. The provision of the Act of Parliament, that it shall be done within the time so fixed, is express. No exception is made by the legislature for the case which has occurred. A general order of the Ct. of Ch. cannot vary the express provisions of an Act of Parliament, & I apprehend that when the time for doing an act or taking a proceeding is expressly fixed by Act of Parliament, no general order of this ct. can enable the act or proceeding to be done or taken after the expiration of the time so fixed by Act of Parliament (PAGE WOOD, V.-C.).—FLOWER v. 2141. ———.]—It has been argued that the Rules of Ct. cannot limit the operation of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 24 (3); but the rules have received a parliamentary sanction. It may be granted that the rules ought not to be construed so as to contravene the provisions of the statute; but it is to be recollected that Sect. 21, sub-sect. 3, is permissive & not obligatory (BRAMWELL, L.J.).—SCHNEIDER v. BATT (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 701; 50 L. J. Q. B. 525; 45 L. T. 371; 30 W. R. 420, C. A. Annotation:—Reid. Baxter v. France (No. 2), [1895] 1 Q. B. 591.

2145. ———.]—The rules which are made & which are known to us in the Annual Practice are made under the statutory authority of Judicature Acts & have the force of statutory enactments & to say that the procedure under Mercantile Law Amendments Act, 1856 (c. 96), s. 5, is released from & not restricted by Common Law Procedure Act, 1852 (c. 76), does not get rid of the authority so attached to the rules of the ct. made under a later statutory authority, namely Judicature Acts, & we find that this rule 23 under R. S. C., Ord. 42, stands based upon statutory authority of recent date & later than Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c. 96) (POLLOCK, M.R.).—KAYLEY v. HOTHERSALL, [1925] 1 K. B. 607; 94 L. J. K. Deft. then took out a summons for directions under R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 52, on which, C. declining to disclose any defence, a judge at chambers entered judgment in favour of deft. against C., ordering an inquiry as to her separate estate & declaring it chargeable with the payment of the sum paid into ct. by deft.:—Held: R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 2, was not ultra vires with respect to Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 24 (3), as taking away from the third party any rights in respect of her defence which she would have had if she had been duly sued in the ordinary way by deft. the rule simply providing a different procedure from the usual delivery of pleadings.—GLOUCESTERSHIRE BANKING CO. v. PHILLIPPS (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 533; 53 L. J. Q. B. 493; 50 L. T. 360; 32 W. R. 522, D. C.

2149. —.]—Jud. Acts & Rules are not the foundation of these garnishee proceedings, which had their origin in C. L. P. Act, 1854 (c. 125). The new rules cannot take away the rights given under that Act by implication, &, if they seemed to do so expressly, they would, I think, be ultra vires (MANISTY, J.).—GOODMAN v. 2150. ——— Whether operative to repeal provisions of earlier statutes—Giving special costs in particular cases.]—Pltfs. sued deft. under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 15, s. 2, to recover penalties for infringements of their dramatic copyright in a stage play; deft. paid into ct. £8, the amount of four penalties of 40s. each, & the amount so paid in was taken out by pltfs. in satisfaction. Upon taxation of costs, a master decided that pltfs. had recovered less than £10, in an action of tort within County Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 116, & were, therefore, not entitled to any costs:—Held: assuming there was no distinction between an indemnity under Limitations of Actions & Costs Act, 1842 (c. 97),

s. 2, & costs in the ordinary sense, the R. S. C. did not operate to repeal the provisions of special statutes giving special costs in particular cases, & pltfs. were, therefore, entitled to have their costs taxed.—REEVE v. GIBSON, [1891] 1 Q. 1. Broker — Whether payment or receipt of money incidental to character of broker.]—Declaration on a bill of exchange by drawer against acceptor. Plea, to the whole declaration, that deft. retained pltf. to act as his broker in the city of London, & as such broker to enter into contracts in the city of London for deft. in the purchase of stock & shares, & to pay in & about completing such contracts & purchases certain moneys that in pursuance of such retainer, pltf. did, as such broker, in the city of London, enter into certain contracts for the purchase of shares, & did, by virtue of such retainer as such broker, & as incidental thereto, pay for deft. in & about completing such contracts & purchases, certain moneys; that pltf. was not at the time of the retainer & employment, & making such contracts & purchasing such shares, or paying such moneys, a broker duly licenced within the city of London; & that the bill was accepted by deft. & received by pltf. on account of money due from deft. to pltf., for his having as such broker entered into the contracts, & paid such moneys, etc. :—Held: ill, on general demurrer, the payment of money not being incidental to the character of a broker, & the plea being an answer only to so much of pltf.'s demand as consisted of a remuneration for his services as broker.—*PIDGEOON v. 6. Rights of proprietors — Registration — As having equitable interest in land.]—Claimant was one of 1040 proprietors of the London Stock Exchange, which was freehold property. The property was held by trustees, in whom were vested large powers of management under a deed of settlement. The deed provided that each share should be transmissible as personal estate. The profits of the undertaking, which were derived almost entirely from fees paid for admission to the Exchange & charges made for the use of desks & other accommodation, & from dividends & interest on securities, were distributed by the trustees as they thought proper from time to time among the proprietors. Claimant contended that as a proprietor he was entitled to be placed upon the register as having an equitable interest in the land & rents & profits of the Stock Exchange :—Held: by the deed of settlement the proprietors had vested the freehold in the trustees free from any equitable interest of the proprietors in the land; they were only entitled to the profits of the undertaking; & the claim must be disallowed.—*WATSON v. 8. Telegraph supplying news to non-member—Prohibition by stock exchange of such supply—Discontinuance by company—Liability for breach of duty.]—Defts. were a co., incorporated under Companies Act, 1862 (c. 89), & licenced by the Postmaster-General under Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 112), s. 5, to establish telegraphs within the limits of their districts, which included the London Stock Exchange, for the purpose of simultaneously transmitting news to their subscribers. This news consisted, amongst other things, of current fluctuations of prices on the Stock Exchange, & was by the permission of the Stock Exchange collected there by deft.'s agents & distributed from deft.'s offices to the offices of their subscribers by means of tape recording instruments supplied by defts. Pltf. was not a member of the Stock Exchange & was in the habit of advertising for business. Defts. had entered into three separate contracts with pltf. for which they undertook to supply him with three of their instruments. By the rules of the Stock Exchange its members were not allowed to advertise, & the Stock Exchange having required defts. to cease supplying outside brokers who advertised with the special information collected in the building, defts. disconnected the three instruments from the supply of that class of news :—Held: the licence of defts. was neither a monopoly at common law nor part of the monopoly conferred on the Postmaster-General by Telegraph Act, 1869 (c. 112), & therefore there was no duty imposed by the licence for the non-performance of which pltf. could sue defts.—*COCHRANE v. 10. Refusal of Committee to re-elect member—Whether committee must give reasons for decision—Discretion exercised bonâ fide.]—A member of the Stock Exchange is elected for one year only & comes up annually for re-election under r. 21, which provides that the Committee shall on the first Monday in Mar. proceed to re-elect such members & admit such candidates as they shall deem eligible to be members of the Stock Exchange for one year commencing on Mar. 25 then instant. R. 35 provides that a member intending to object to the re-election of a member, the admission of a candidate, or the readmission of a defaulter shall communicate the grounds of his objection to the Committee by letter previously to the re-election or ballot:—Held: a committee who in the bonâ fide exercise of their discretion under r. 21, do not deem an applicant eligible for re-election are not bound to give any reasons for their decision & semble: even if an individual objection were lodged under r. 35 they would not be bound to acquaint applt. with the particulars of that objection so as to enable him to answer it.—CASSEL v. 12. ——— Grounds for refusal—Enemy birth.]—The proprietors of the Stock Exchange are a voluntary assocn. regulated by a deed of settlement, & the members are the persons from time to time admitted to attend, & in their own right to transact business at, the Stock Exchange in accordance with the deed. The deed of settlement vested the building in trustees & managers, to be used as a market for stocks & shares, & provided that a committee for general purposes should be annually elected by the members, & that the committee should admit such persons as they should “think proper” to frequent the Stock Exchange for transacting therein the business of a stockbroker or jobber for the term of one year, on payment of the entrance fee, if any, & annual subscription fixed by the trustees & managers; & it empowered the committee to make rules not inconsistent with the provisions of the deed respecting, (inter alia), the admission, expulsion & suspension of members. By rule 21 (1) of the Rules of the Stock Exchange made under this power, “the committee shall on the first Monday in Mar.

proceed to re-elect such members . . . as they shall deem eligible to be members of the Stock Exchange, for one year, commencing on Mar. 25, then instant.”

In Mar. 1917, pltf. a naturalised British subject of German birth, who had been a member of the Stock Exchange since 1895, applied for re-election. Certain members, who had formed an organisation called the Stock Exchange Anti-German Union, lodged an objection under rule 35 against re-election of pltf., on the ground of enemy birth. At the invitation of the Committee pltf. showed cause against the objection by letter & at an interview, & he stated numerous facts in proof of his loyalty with a view to displacing the objection. The committee, however, refused his application. Of 107 members of enemy birth 50 were re-elected & 57 were rejected. Pltf. brought an action to impugn the decision of the committee on the ground that it was arbitrary & capricious & based on irrelevant considerations. The committee by their defence alleged that they did not re-elect pltf. because they did not deem him eligible to be a member of the Stock Exchange for the year in question & for no other reason:—Held: assuming that the committee owed any duty to the members as regards re-election, (1) the proper inference from the facts was that the refusal of the committee had proceeded solely on the ground of enemy birth, as to which the pltf. had been heard; (2) they had bonâ fide exercised the discretion conferred upon them by the deed of settlement & the rules, & were not shown to have acted arbitrarily or capriciously; & the ct. had no jurisdiction to interfere with their decision.—WEINBERGER v. may be done. But the Committee has no jurisdiction to pass a resolution "that when the buying in of any security is suspended by order of the committee the clause in the rules relating to the release of intermediaries shall remain inoperative until such suspension is removed," inasmuch as such a resolution amounts to the entire alteration of the contract by placing upon the buyer of shares the obligation of waiting, possibly for ever, leaving to the vendors the right to tender their shares when they please.

18. ———.—(1) Where a client who is not a member of the Stock Exchange instructs a broker who is a member of the Stock Exchange to purchase shares for him, & the broker accordingly purchases them & receives them from the seller within the time allowed by the rules of the Stock Exchange & pays for them, although it is the broker's duty to tender the shares to the client within a reasonable time, it is no answer to his claim for an indemnity for the client to say that the shares were not delivered in time, although that might be a good ground for a counterclaim.

(2) Where, under such circumstances, the broker tenders to the client a portion only of the total number of shares comprised in the contract note, the client is bound to accept delivery of the portion so tendered or to indemnify the broker against the price he has paid for them, although there is no valid tender by the broker of the remainder of the shares.

(3) But where the seller does not tender the shares to the broker within the time allowed by the rules of the Stock Exchange, & the client gives notice to the broker that he will not accept delivery after such time has elapsed; if the broker does then accept them & pays the seller he will not be entitled to be indemnified by the client in respect of the sum he has paid for the shares. Nor will a resolution of the Stock Exchange that the broker is to pay the jobber for the shares when delivered be binding on the client or, semble, on the broker, inasmuch as the committee cannot by passing a resolution make valid a contract which has been broken.

(4) Whereas the printed rules & regulations of the Committee of the Stock Exchange are binding on a person who instructs a broker to deal with him on the market, he is not bound by a custom, as such, not forming part of those printed rules & regulations, in the absence of a special contract, without evidence, from the course of his dealings or other evidence, of his being acquainted with such a custom. No custom & certainly not one that is unreasonable, is binding upon a person merely because he instructs a broker on the Stock Exchange to enter into transactions with him. With regard to the written rules & regulations it is different. It is like a notice on any other contract. There are the existing rules for actual inspection, & if a person does not choose to look at them so much the worse for him if it turns out he loses by it (KENNEDY, J.).—*BENJAMIN v. SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

19. London broker & country broker—Authority of London broker to exercise discretion—Whether liable for naming country broker as transferee.]—Pltf., through his London broker, sold, on May 11, 1866, 11 Overend & Gurney shares for the account day, on May 15, to P. & co., brokers on the Stock Exchange, who had previously, on Apr. 27, been instructed by M., deft., a country broker, to purchase for him 1,000 O. & G. shares for the same account day, of which 1,000 shares the 11 shares in question formed part. O. & G. having stopped payment on May 10, M., deft., who had purchased the above 1,000 shares for S., a customer, finding that S. was insolvent, & could & would pay nothing, wrote as follows to his brokers, P. & co., "Our client cannot meet his engagements as regards the 1,000 Overends, & we, unfortunately, cannot meet them; therefore we authorise you to do whatever you think best"; & at a personal interview on the same day M. prohibited P. & co. from using or in any way recognising the name of S. in the transaction. On the same day, May 14, P. & co. accordingly gave to pltf.'s broker the name of deft. M. as the ultimate purchaser & transferee, which was accepted, & the transfer to him was duly prepared & executed. In an action by pltf. against deft. upon a contract of indemnity against future calls on the said 11 shares:—Held: deft.'s letter to P. & co. gave them a general & unlimited authority to exercise their discretion in the matter, & inasmuch as, if any name were given at all, it must be either their own name or that of M., they were warranted by the terms of their authority in passing the name of deft.—STREET v. MORGAN (1869), 21 L. T. 432.

who were London stockbrokers, acted as agents for defts., who were country stockbrokers, in the purchase of shares which were to be taken up or carried over by defts. Shortly thereafter, pltfs. strongly advised defts. to sell all the shares as they had confidential information that a heavy fall in price was likely to take place immediately. Defts. without consulting their clients agreed to the shares being sold. The shares did not fall in price but rose rapidly, & defts. alleged that they had to make good for their clients a sum of £890 by buying back shares. In an action by pltfs. for balance of an account in connection with the shares, defts. counterclaimed for damages for breach of duty by pltfs.:—Held: as defts. were under no obligation to sell the shares without consulting their clients, the loss resulting from the repurchase arose from their own act, & therefore that the counterclaim failed. Semble: there was no obligation on the part of pltfs. to investigate the accuracy of the information imparted to defts. as to the likelihood of a fall in the shares.—SCHWEDER (P. E.) & Co. v. WALTON & HEMINGWAY (1910), 27 T. L. R. 89.

21. Brokers & jobbers—Principals towards each other.]—(1) Deft. employed a broker to purchase for him certain shares on the Stock Exchange, & afterwards directed him to carry over the shares to the next account. The broker, in accordance with the regulations of the Stock Exchange, purchased the shares in his own name from pltfs., who were jobbers on the Stock Exchange, & afterwards carried over with them the same shares. Deft.'s name was not disclosed. Before the next settling day the broker was declared a defaulter on the Stock Exchange, & in accordance with the rules of that body his contract with pltfs. was closed at a fixed price by the official assignee of the Stock Exchange. Pltfs. having ascertained that the broker was acting for deft. in this transaction called upon him to take up the shares. He declined to accept any responsibility for them; & pltfs., on the settling day, tendered the shares to deft., & on his refusing to accept them, sold them for the best price then obtainable. In an action to recover from deft. the difference between the price at which the shares had been carried over & that at which they had been sold:—Held: deft. was liable as principal on the contract made for him by his broker with pltfs., & the privity of contract between pltfs. & deft. was not affected by the rules of the Stock Exchange as to the compulsory closing of the transactions of a defaulting broker.

(2) There is no established usage under which the client of a broker on the Stock Exchange who has become a defaulter, & whose transactions have been closed at prices fixed by the official assignee, can claim the right to close at the price so fixed a transaction entered into for him by the broker with another member of the Stock Exchange.

(3) The transaction between the principal & the brokers was on the Stock Exchange, & the agreement between them was that the dealings should be carried on according to the usages & rules of the Stock Exchange. In my opinion, the meaning of that is that a client agrees with his broker that the dealings between them are to be carried on under the rules of the Stock Exchange so far as they are applicable to outsiders, & not under the rules that are applicable only to the domestic forum of the Stock Exchange (A. L. SMITH, M.R.).

(4) They [brokers & jobbers] are principals towards each other (COLLINS, L.J.).

(5) Admitted that by the usage of the Stock Exchange a broker may properly execute the instructions of his client as to purchase or sale without creating privity of contract, that is to say, he might do this without rendering himself liable for breach of duty to his client, yet in my opinion that does not justify the inference that, if the broker does execute the instructions in such a form as would at common law create privity of contract between the client & the broker, we ought to hold, or it ought to be inferred, that that privity of contract must be held nevertheless not to exist for the purpose of contracts on the Stock Exchange. I do not think that is an inference which follows or one which we ought to draw (ROMER, L.J.).

(6) It is clear that where a client gives instructions to a broker on the Stock Exchange to carry over a contract, say a contract for purchase, as in this case, it is not the case of merely getting further time to continue the old contract; it is an instruction that the broker is to effect a new contract (ROMER, L.J.).

(7) Undoubtedly to my mind, when the practice on the Stock Exchange is considered & the manner in which the dealings in respect of shares are carried on there, it is clear that the broker had authority to buy the 640 shares from more than one jobber, & that if he did so, & it was proved that the shares he bought from the different jobbers for his client exactly amounted to 640, neither more nor less, certainly not more, then there can be no doubt that, the broker being authorised to execute the instructions of his client in that way, privity of contract would be established in respect of those shares as between the different jobbers & the client (ROMER, L.J.).

(8) If a usage has been clearly found & laid down as the custom in a particular trade or market, so that persons dealing in that trade or market contract on the basis of the custom, then the law supports that custom in subsequent cases (A. L. SMITH, M.R.).—LEVITT v. HAMBLET, [1901] 2 K. B. 53; 70 L. J. K. B. 520; 84 L. T. 638; 17 T. L. R. 307; 6 Com. Cas. 79, C. A.

22. Sale of negotiable instrument—Infirmity of title—Broker without notice of infirmity—Whether holder for value.]—A broker who without notice of his principal's infirmity of title enters into a contract for the sale of a negotiable instrument becomes on the subsequent receipt of such instrument a holder for value, & his delivery of it to the jobber is not a conversion thereof.

Qu.: whether the broker, even if he were not a holder for value, would be liable.—EDELSTEIN v. SCHULER & Co., [1902] 2 K. B. 144; 71 L. J. K. B. 572; 87 L. T. 204; 50 W. R. 493; 18 T. L. R. 597; 46 Sol. Jo. 500; 7 Com. Cas. 172.

24. Fiduciary relation — Agency — Client's right to follow money.]—C., a trustee, employed a broker, who had notice of the trust to sell out consols & invest the proceeds in railway stock. The broker sold the consols for cash, bought railway stock to the same amount for the settling day, & received the price of the consols in a cheque, which he paid into his account at his bankers. He stopped payment before the settling day, & went into liquidation. C. claimed so much of the broker's balance at his bankers as was attributable to the price of the consols. The registrar disallowed the claim, holding that the relation between broker & customer was similar to that between banker & customer, & that C. was only a general creditor:—Held: (1) as the price of the consols was known by the broker to be trust money, it could be followed, & the claim must therefore be allowed; (2) apart from the question of trust, the position of a broker is not that of a banker, but of an agent into whose hands money is put to be applied in a particular way, & money paid to him can therefore be followed by the customer.—*Re STRACHAN, Ex p. 26. - — Purchase by agent of principal's property.]—A broker or agent being employed by a customer to sell foreign stock on a day specified by him in a letter of instructions, purchased the stock in the name of his partners, a firm in Paris, at the market price of the day. Being also employed to purchase foreign stock & bonds for his customers, according to his, the agent's, recommendation, he transmitted accounts of the transactions to his employer, with broker's notes, etc., as if he had purchased the stock of third persons. In fact, no stock or bonds were purchased; no transfers were made; no broker's notes passed, but the sales were nominal of stock & bonds remaining in the hands of the agent & his partners, & not set apart nor appropriated to the customer. In order to effect these purchases, loans of money were made by the agent to the customer, upon agreement that the stock & bonds should remain as a deposit in the hands of the agent, to secure the repayment of money advanced.

The stock & bonds were afterwards sold at a loss under the advice of the agent.

In 1819 an account of these transactions were rendered, & settled between the customer & the agent, & great loss having been incurred upon the transactions, a large balance was paid by the customer to the agent.

Upon bill filed in 1824, all the transactions were set aside, & an account decreed against the agent.—ROTHSCHILD v. BROOKMAN (1831), 5 Bli. N. S. 165; 2 Dow. & Cl. 188; 5 E. R. 273, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. BROOKMAN v. ROTHSCCHILD (1829), 3 Sim. 153.

This sale & transfer power was signed in lieu of an ordinary transfer power in order that certain trust costs might be raised & paid before the fund was transferred to the new & continuing trustee.

The power of attorney was, with the solrs.' approval, handed to the solr.-trustee, who lodged it with the brokers. By his instructions they sold the whole fund, & without any authority from the retiring trustee, handed him the proceeds in cash & bearer bonds, which he forthwith misappropriated.

B., without disclosing the name of his principal, entered into a contract with H., another sharebroker, to purchase them for him. According to the usage of the Stock Exchange at M., there are two "settling days" in each month, on which all transactions between brokers, & between them & their principals, are to be settled, although in some instances settlement is not enforced by brokers on the prescribed days. H. did not perform his contract with B. by the next settling day; & B. having, after that day, refused to return A. his money:—Held: A. was entitled to recover it back from B. in an action for money had & received.—*FLETCHER v. B. Obedience to Instructions.

50. Question of fact.]—Declaration in assumpsit alleged that pltf. employed deft. to act as his agent & broker in & about the buying & selling divers shares in divers railway cos., & that deft. then promised to use due care & diligence in the business, & to obey the lawful & reasonable orders & directions of pltf. in regard to the buying & selling such shares, etc. It then alleged that deft. had in his possession & charge divers shares in certain railway cos., subject to the order & direction of pltf. as to the sale & disposition thereof & to the promise of deft. in that behalf; that pltf. had subsequently ordered deft. to sell the shares in one of those cos.; & charged, as a breach, the disobedience of that order. Deft. pleaded the general issue, & traversed the allegasubscriber's agreement, a party instructed a broker to buy for him "forty shares" of the railway stock. The broker bought from an allottee a letter of allotment of forty shares, which he tendered to his constituent:—Held: the broker had acted in terms of his instructions, & had procured that which at the time was sold in the market as "shares," or as giving a title to "shares" of this railway, & therefore he was entitled to recover the price from his constituent.—*WILKIE (OR WILKSIE) & BROWN v. tion of his having in his possession or charge as agent or broker of pltf., the shares mentioned in the declaration, subject to the order or direction of pltf., etc. It appeared in evidence, that, on September 30, 1845, deft. had been introduced to pltf. to act as his broker, who immediately gave him a written order to purchase shares in five different railway cos., & that deft. on the same day sent five advice notes of his having purchased them for Oct. 15, the next settling day at the Stock Exchange. On Oct. 6 pltf. ordered deft. to sell the shares in the co. mentioned in the declaration, who, however, took on himself the responsibility of deferring it until the market should rise. On Oct. 18 deft. delivered an account current, in which he debited pltf. with the shares in this co. as having been bought on Sept. 30 & sold on Oct. 13. No money had ever passed between the parties, & deft. had not the shares in his possession until some time after rendering the account current:—Held: (1) there was evidence from which the jury might infer the contract as stated in the declaration: (2) the second issue was not proved.—MARSDEN v. NEWMARCH (1846), 10 Jur. 759.

The genuineness of this scrip was afterwards denied by the directors, who alleged that it was issued by the secretary without authority. In an action to recover back from deft. the price paid to him by pltf. for this scrip, & for his commission, on the ground of its not being genuine:—Held: the proper question for the jury was, whether what deft. intended to buy was that which was sold in the market as Kentish Coast Railway scrip.—LAMERT v. HEATH (1816), 15 M. & W. 486; 4 Ry. & Can. Cas. 302 7 L. T. O. S. 186; 10 Jur. 481; 153 E. R. 911 sub nom. LAMBERT v. HEATH, 15 L. J. Ex. 297 subsequent proceedings, 8 L. T. O. S. 279.

The shares in this bank were £50 shares, on which £25 were paid; but pltf.’s manager admitted that, after the order was given to purchase, he had said that they were £25 shares, & deft. stated that it was upon the understanding that the shares were £25 that he had been induced to purchase ten shares instead of five. After the order was given the bank failed, & deft. repudiated the contract.

The jury found a verdict for pltf.s., the judge directing them that the question was whether the authority to buy the shares was coupled with a condition to buy £25 shares if they could be got, or to buy so many shares if they were £25 shares.

At that time no shares of the co. were in the market, the foreign govt. not having yet authorised its establishment; but letters of allotment for shares were then, according to the evidence of persons on the Stock Exchange, commonly bought & sold in the market as shares. Pltf. bought for deft. a letter of allotment for fifty shares:—Held: a jury might well find that this was a good execution of the order.—MITCHELL v. NEWHALL (1846), 15 M. & W. 308; 4 Ry. & Can. He had on many previous occasions employed pltf.s. to buy similar shares, & on none of those occasions did the contract or advice note forwarded to him specify the distinguishing numbers of the shares purchased. Pltf.s. purchased the shares from a jobber on the Stock Exchange in the usual way, & forwarded to deft. a contract note in the usual form, stating that the contract was made subject to the rules & regulations of the Stock Exchange. The contract was not made with reference to any distinguishing numbers of the shares, nor did the contract note specify any numbers. It is not the practice on the Stock Exchange to specify the numbers of the shares in dealing in bank shares. Deft. before the settling-day wrote to pltf.s. repudiating the contract, on the ground that the numbers of the shares were not specified pursuant to Leemans Act, 1857 (c. 29), s. 1. Notwithstanding such repudiation, pltf.s. completed the contract & paid for the shares. 67. — — — — —.]—(1) Deft. employed a firm of brokers on the Stock Exchange to purchase for him shares in a certain undertaking, & instructed them to "carry over" 210 of these shares to the next account. The brokers, having orders from other clients for shares in the same undertaking, purchased by a single contract in their own name 360 of these shares for the next account from pltfs. who were jobbers on the Stock Exchange, & they apportioned in their books 210 of these shares to deft. Before the next settling day the brokers were declared defaulters on the Stock Exchange, & in accordance with the rules of that body, their transaction, with pltfs. was closed by the official assignee, the price of the shares being fixed at the price then current, Pltfs., having ascertained that the brokers were acting for deft. as regarded the 210 shares, tendered those shares to him, & on his refusal to take them, sold them on the settling day & claimed from deft. the difference between the contract price & the selling price:—Held: since the brokers had lumped deft.'s order with the orders of other clients, & had contracted in a single transaction with pltfs. for the purchase of a larger number of shares than they were authorised to purchase for deft., no such contractual relation existed between pltfs. & deft. as would support the action.

(2) The object of the proceeding under this rule [rule 177] of the Stock Exchange, as I understand it, is what may properly be termed a domestic object. The purpose is to adjust the accounts of the members of the Stock Exchange inter se, dropping the defaulter, by reason of his default, out of the bargains in which he has been one of the contracting parties. The method employed is the creation of a fund in the hands of the official assignee. This fund is formed by the payment to him by members of the Stock Exchange of the difference in value of the stocks or shares in which they have dealt with the defaulter as determined by the prices fixed by the official assignee at the time of the default, when the change in price of any of such stocks or shares is against such members; & out of the fund members are entitled to claim payment for any such differences when in their favour. The defaulter does not by reason of his default acquire any right or claim to differences or damages in respect of differences in his favour between the contract price & the closing price, nor can he make any claim for himself to the moneys which are paid in respect of such differences to the official assignee by the members from whom such differences are due. What is effected is an artificial settlement of the defaulter's dealings with his fellow members, after which he & they are precluded inter se from claiming from each other the performance, or moneys in respect of the non-performance, of any contracts of purchase or sale which were existent & open at the time of the default. But the settlement is essentially a domestic settlement. According to the practice of the Stock Exchange the defaulting broker's client, if he is not himself in default to the broker, has the right either to have the transaction carried through between himself & the jobber with whom the broker has contracted in respect of shares in which he is interested, or to accept the assignee's closing, or to transfer the account in respect of his shares to another broker for the purpose of carrying out the bargain through him (KENNEDY, J.).—BECKHUSON & GIBBS v. HAM-

The broker, having instructions from other clients to carry over for them shares in the same undertaking, carried over by a single contract in his own name 925 of these shares with plffs., who were jobbers on the Stock Exchange, & apportioned 225 of the shares so carried over to deft., of the total number of shares 125 were carried over on the broker's own account. Before the next settling day the broker was declared a defaulter on the Stock Exchange & his transaction with plffs., was closed by the official assignee. Deft., when communicated with, declined to be further bound by the contract, contending that by reason of the broker's failure the transaction was closed for all purposes at the price current on the day of the failure. Plffs., thereupon sold the shares for the best price obtainable, & claimed to be entitled to recover from deft. the difference between the price at which the shares had been carried over & that at which they had been sold:—Held: apart from any usage of the Stock Exchange deft. was liable, it having been the intention of all parties that privity of contract should be created between plffs., & deft. & such privity having in the circumstances been created.*

There is an established & valid usage on the Stock Exchange under which a broker who is instructed by different clients to buy or carry over for them shares in the same undertaking can make one contract in his own name with a jobber for the total number of shares. It makes no difference that the broker includes in the same contract shares in which he is dealing in his own name. The jobber & each client of the broker become bound to each other to carry out that part of the contract which is applicable to the order of the particular client.—SCOTT & HORTON v. GODFREY, [1901] 2 K. B. 726; 70 L. J. K. B. 954; 85 L. T. 415; 50 W. R. 61; 17 T. L. R. 633; 45 Sol. Jo. 640; 6 Com. Cas. 226.

71. ———— Where a broker is authorised by several clients to buy different parcels of shares, & he buys the total number of shares in one contract, it is a question of intention to be gathered from the evidence in each case whether privity of contract is established between the vendor & a particular purchaser.

In 1899 defts. purchased through a broker on the Stock Exchange certain shares in a South African mining co. for special settlement. The share certificates of that co. were not ready for issue till Feb. 1907, & the special settlement was fixed for Mar. 25, 1907. Defts. contended that the contract was subject to an implied condition that the special settlement should take place within a reasonable time after the contract, & that as it did not take place within a reasonable time from the date of the contract they were not bound to take the shares:—Held: the contract was capable of being fulfilled as it stood, & it was not to be construed as subject to the suggested implied condition.

As between members of the Stock Exchange the practice is for a broker when authorised by several clients to buy different parcels of shares to lump them together, & to buy from the jobber the total number in one contract, & it has been held that when that is done the custom of the Stock Exchange operates to create separate contracts between each client & the jobber (BRAY, J.).—CONSOLIDATED GOLDFIELDS OF SOUTH AFRICA v. 74. Client placing limit on sale price—Whether broker may wait for better price.—A commission to sell & transfer stock "when the funds should be at 85 per cent., or above that price" is a particular commission under which an agent is bound to sell when the funds reach 85; & has not a general authority to act for his employer, so that he may defer selling till the funds should reach a higher price than 85.

A mercantile house that has accepted such a commission, & had not sold when the funds reached 85, held therefore in equity, to have made the stock their own from that time, & ordered to account to their employer for the price of it, with interest; he, in return, accounting to them for the dividends he had subsequently received in ignorance of the fact of the funds having reached that price.—BERTRAM, ARMSTRONG & Co. v. Defts. by their answer admitted that business had been done for pltf. & for other persons introduced by him; that part of it was real & that the other part was fictitious, & consisted of time bargains; that discovery would subject them to penalties under 7 Geo. 2, c. 8; they also claimed the benefit of Stat. 90. ———.]—A principal who employs a stockbroker to purchase bank shares for him is not bound by the custom of the Stock Exchange to disregard the provisions of Leeman's Act, 1867 (c. 29), s. 1, if he is in fact ignorant of the custom; for a custom must, in order to bind a person who is ignorant of it, be reasonable, & it must not change the character of the contract directed to be entered into.

Deft. directed pltf's., who were stockbrokers at Bristol, to buy for him on the London Stock Exchange certain bank shares. Pltf's. bought the shares through their London agents, & sent def't. the contract note, which, according to the usage & practice on the Stock Exchange, did not contain the numbers of the shares as required by Leeman's Act, 1867 (c. 29); & def't. refused for that reason to accept or pay for the shares. By the Rules of the Stock Exchange a member who does not fulfil his contracts is expelled, & no application to annul a contract is entertained unless fraud or misrepresentation is alleged. The London brokers accordingly paid for the shares, & the Bristol brokers repaid them, & sued def't. to recover the money thus paid. Def't. did not know of the custom to disregard the provisions of Leeman's Act, 1867 (c. 29), which makes a contract not made in accordance with it void:—Held: pltf's. were not entitled to recover the money paid, as def't. did not in fact know of the custom; knowledge of a custom which was not reasonable could not be imputed to him; & what he had authorised pltf's. to do was to make a valid contract, & not one which could not be enforced in law.—PERRY v. BARNETT (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 388; 54 L. J. Q. B. 466; 53 L. T. 585; 1 T. L. R. 580, C. A.

93. ———.] Purchase by country broker through country & London agents.]—Pltf., a country stock & share broker was employed by def't. as his broker to make purchases of shares for him subject to the rules, regulations, & customs of the stock exchanges through which the transactions took place. Pltf. gave orders for the purchase of the shares to brokers on the London & Glasgow Stock Exchanges, who thereupon bought the shares from a jobber, & sent a bought note to pltf. charging 7s. 6d. "net" for the shares the price at which they bought from the jobber not being disclosed. Pltf. then sent a bought note to def't. charging him 7s. 6d. for the shares, without adding the word "net" plus a commission of 1½d. per share & 1s. for the stamp. The amount added by the London & Glasgow brokers for their remuneration did not exceed the usual commission payable in respect of such a purchase. In an action brought by pltf. against def't. for an amount alleged to be due to him in respect of the above-mentioned transactions:—Held: the contracts effected by pltf. were made through the London & Glasgow brokers as agents & were not made with them as principals, they were accordingly in accordance with the authority given to pltf. by def't., & pltf. was therefore entitled to be indemnified by def't. in respect of them.

The real question here . . . is a question of fact, merely, whether pltf. proved that he made contracts or caused contracts to be made on def't.'s behalf on the exchanges or whether he proved contracts of sale to himself by the London brokers. In the former case he is entitled to succeed; in the latter case he fails because he did not act according to def't.'s instructions, he did not carry out the mandate given to him (BRAY, J.).—ASTON v. KELSEY, [1913] 3 K. B. 314; 82 L. J. K. B. 817; 108 L. T. 750; 29 T. L. R. 530; 18 Com. Cas. 257, C. A.

ultra vires, although the co. may be empowered to deal in shares of joint stock cos. generally. Where, therefore, the broker of a banking co., acting under the instructions of the directors, bought shares in the co., on behalf of the co. & was credited with the price paid by him for the shares in his banking account kept with the co., & the co. was afterwards wound up:—Held: the broker was not entitled to prove against the co. for so much of the balance due to him as represented the price of the shares. Semble: if the price of the shares had been actually paid to the broker by the directors, he would have been liable to refund it.—Re LONDON, HAMBURG & CONTINENTAL EXCHANGE BANK, ZULUETA'S CLAIM (1870), 5 Ch. 97. Contracts not recognised by Stock Exchange.—Although the subject-matter of a contract is not recognised by the Stock Exchange Committee, & could not be enforced by them against the members, yet if a man authorise his brokers to deal in that subject-matter as agents for himself as an undisclosed principal, & they in consequence acting upon that authority pay in accordance with the contract, he must indemnify them.

Bargains in prospective dividends are transactions which by the rules of the Stock Exchange, the committee will not recognise nor enforce. Another rule says that every bargain must be fulfilled by the members in accordance with the rules, regulations, & usages of the Stock Exchange. It was proved that there is a usage by which brokers are bound to pay to each other the differences arising upon dealings in prospective dividends.

A. instructed his brokers to sell his prospective dividends on certain railway stock, & they sent him a sold note, stating that it had been sold by his order, & subject to the rules & regulations of the Stock Exchange, payable on declaration of dividend, & they subsequently paid, in accordance with the usage, to the jobbers to whom they had sold it, the difference which became due to them when the dividend was declared at a higher figure than the sold price:—Held: A. could not refuse to indemnify his brokers, on the ground that their payment to the jobbers was voluntary & could not have been enforced, because the usages of the Stock Exchange were incorporated into the contract, & so the brokers were bound to pay.—MARTEN v. GIBBON (1875), 32 L. T. 229; affd., 33 L. T. 561; 24 W. R. 87, C. A.

98. Client dealing in differences—Evidence of account delivered & admissions by client.—On July 29 deft. directed pltf., who was a stockbroker, to buy him certain railway stock for the account of Aug. 14, but without any intention of taking a transfer thereof. The stock was bought by pltf.'s agent, & the bought notes sent to deft. On Aug. 13 he directed pltf. to sell all. The sale was effected through the same agent. On Aug. 14 pltf. delivered his account to deft., who said that he would not pay; that he knew pltf. had no legal claim on him; but that he considered it a debt of honour which he would pay at a future time. In an action by pltf. for the differences on the price & his commission:—Held: (1) pltf. was entitled to recover; the contract did not come within Gaming Act, 1845 (c. 109), s. 18, & was not void; (2) the account delivered & the admission of deft. were evidence to support the account stated.—ASHTON v. DAKIN (1859), 32 L. T. O. S. 300; 7 W. R. 384.

100. — Dealings by broker's clerk.

—Where a person speculates on the Stock Exchange, but the stockbroker through whom he speculates enters into bond fide contracts with a jobber in respect of which he is liable to the jobber, the stockbroker can sue the client for an indemnity, notwithstanding that the client merely intended to deal in differences, & this fact was known to the stockbroker.—FRANKLIN (H. W.) & Co. v. DAWSON (1913), 29 T. L. R. 479.

101. ——Deft., with a view to making money by speculating on the Stock Exchange, requested a friend, who was a clerk & half-commission man employed by pltf. firm of stockbrokers, to buy & sell shares on his behalf but not to lose more than £50. Pltf. firm, acting through their clerk, accordingly acted as brokers for deft. When the sum of £50 had been lost deft. authorised his friend to continue speculating on his behalf, & eventually pltf. closed deft.'s account when he owed them £317 19s. 6d. In an action to recover this sum:—Held: the arrangement between deft. & half-commission man was a purely gambling transaction, but except so far as pltf. were affected by the knowledge of the half-commission man as their clerk & agent, there was no evidence that pltf. believed the transactions to be other than genuine investments on the part of deft. & as the contracts formed between the jobbers & deft. through the agency of pltf. were not in any sense wagering contracts pltf. were entitled to recover.—*WEDDLE, BECK & Co. v. 102. — No contract for client's benefit.—

(1) In an action by an outside broker against a client to recover the balance of account for stocks & shares alleged to have been bought & sold for him, it appeared as to part of such stocks & shares that the broker appropriated certain stocks that he already held to the client's account, without the latter's knowledge:—Held: there had been no contracts made by the broker with a third party for the client's benefit, & therefore the broker could not recover differences or commission in respect of such shares.

(2) Further, as to other stocks & shares, it appeared that the broker after buying them for the client resold them without the latter's knowledge, & subsequently bought them back again, but charged the client with the differences, as though such stocks had been kept open on his account:—Held: no real continuing contracts had been in existence for the benefit of the client, & consequently no real differences had arisen which the broker was entitled to recover from the client.—*SKELTON v. he was unable to meet his engagements, & therefore was compelled to absent himself; & at a subsequent time he promised to pay the amount. The jury having found a verdict for pltf., the ct. refused to disturb it holding that the evidence warranted an inference that the payment was made at deft.'s request.—PAWLE v. GUNN (1838), 4 Bing. (b) Necessity for Delivery.

107. Necessity for delivery.]—Deft. opened a speculative account with a firm of stockbrokers & deposited with them as security for any debit balance which might from time to time be owing by him on that account the indicia of title to various bonds & shares, including certain rubber shares. In 1920 the firm sold the rubber shares without the knowledge or authority of deft., who was kept in ignorance of the sale till after the bkpcy. of the firm. On Feb. 16, 1922, a receiving order was made against the firm & they were adjudicated bkpt. In Feb. 1923, the trustee in bkpcy. of the firm rendered deft. a final account, which, after giving credit to deft. for the proceeds of the sale of the shares, showed a balance due from deft. In an action to recover that balance the trustee claimed that the rights of the parties ought to be adjusted under the mutual credits clause of Bkpcy. Act, 1914 (c. 59), as at the date of the receiving order:—Held: the brokers could not have maintained an action for their debt if they were not in a position to hand over the shares against payment, & the trustee in bkpcy. had no higher right.—ELLIS & Co.'s TRUSTEE v. DIXON-JOHNSON, [1925] A. C. 489; 94 L. J. Ch. 221; 133 L. T. 60; 41 T. L. R. 336; 69 Sol. Jo. 395, H. L.

108. No delivery till after action brought.]—In an action for shares sold, & money paid, the particulars of demand were for "50 shares in a railway co., at a certain sum per share, for commission & interest." The evidence was that deft. had ordered pltf., a sharebroker, to buy railway shares for him at a certain price, which pltf. had done. But the shares were not delivered till after action brought. Pltf. had paid the broker, of whom he purchased the shares, & sought to recover the money so paid in this action:—Held: he could not recover for money paid under the above particulars; nor for the price of the shares upon the above evidence.—HARDWICK v. LEA (1847), 8 L. T. O. S. 387.

(c) In respect of What Payments.

111. Payments to purchaser by broker—Client failing to complete contract—Sale of stock at future date.]—A broker who contracts with others for sale of stock at a future day by the authority of his principal, who afterwards refuses to make good the bargain, cannot by paying the difference to such third persons maintain an action on an implied assumpsit against his principal for the amount. If the principal were really possessed of the stock so bargained to be sold, such contract is not illegal within 7 Geo. 2, c. 8, against stock-jobbing, although the broker did not disclose the name of his principal at the time of the bargain made; & the purchaser may maintain an action for the difference against the principal.—CHILD v. MORLEY (1800), 8 Term Rep. 610; 101 E. R. 1574.

Mistake in instructions.]—(1) A person employing a broker to sell shares, directed him, by mistake, to sell two hundred & fifty shares, meaning fifty. The broker contracted with another broker on the Stock Exchange for the sale. The shareholder, on the next day, informed his broker of the mistake, & asked if the bargain could not be made void; the broker answered, "No"; & the shareholder then said he must leave the matter in his hands to do the best he could. By the rules of the Stock Exchange, brokers, on sales of this description, do not name any principal, & if the vendor is not prepared to complete his contract, the purchaser buys the requisite number of shares & the vendor is bound to make up the loss, if any, resulting from a difference in prices. The broker paid such difference, being unable to complete his contract & the purchaser having made good the shares at a loss:—Held: for the difference so advanced, the shareholder was liable to the broker in assumpsit for money paid.

(2) A person who employs a broker on the Stock Exchange impliedly gives him authority to act in accordance with the rules there established, though such principal may himself be ignorant of the rules.—SUTTON v. TATHAM (1839), 10 Ad. & El. 27; 2 Per. & Dav. 308; 8 L. J. Q. B. 210; 113 E. R. 11.

113. ——— Purchase by another broker.]—Deft., who resided some distance from Liverpool, authorised pltf., a broker there, to sell for him twenty railway scrip shares. Pltf. sold them to C., another broker of Liverpool. The scrip shares were not delivered on the day, & C. bought twenty other scrip shares at the market price, & claimed the difference between the contract & the market price. Pltf. paid him the difference, & brought an action for money paid to recover this sum. It was proved to be the usage amongst brokers at Liverpool, to be responsible to each other upon these contracts, & there was evidence that deft. was cognisant of this usage:—Held: deft. was liable.

The purchaser having failed to pay the call, the broker advanced the amount & brought an action of relief.—Held: the circumstance of there being an unpaid call at the date of the purchase of the shares did not invalidate the transaction under 8 Viet. c. 17, s. 17; & the purchaser was bound to reimburse the

The bank stopped payment on Sept. 3 & ultimately became bkpt. On Sept. 11, deft. repudiated the transaction, & gave pltfs. notice not to pay the price on his account. Pltfs. having been compelled according to the rules of the Stock Exchange to pay for the shares on the settlement day, sent deft. the certificates & transfers, & upon his declining to accept them, sued him for money paid:—Held: they were entitled to recover.—TAYLOR v. (d) Broker Acting Without Authority.

122. Right to indemnity.]—A. employed B., a broker, to sell five shares in a railway. B. contracted to sell them to C., another broker. At the time of the employment of B. by A., & of the contract between B. & C., the shares were in course of registration, & consequently no transfer took place. After considerable delay, & after the shares had arisen in value, C. wrote to B., threatening him that if the shares were not transferred, he, C., should buy a like number of shares in the market, at the increased price, & charge B. with the difference of price. B. gave notice of this threat to A., who distinctly forbade him from paying any money on his account. C. afterwards fulfilled his threat, & B. paid him the difference between the contract price & the then market price of the shares. By a rule of the Stock Exchange, to which B. & C. belonged, B. was liable to make C. this payment. No deed of transfer of the shares was ever tendered by C. to B. for execution, nor was the purchase-money ever tendered:—Held: B. could not recover from A., as money paid to A.'s use, the money which B. had paid to C. as the difference between the prices of the shares at the two different times.

In order to maintain this action for money paid to the use of deft. at his request, it was necessary that pltf. should prove either an actual request on the part of deft., or that the money was paid in discharge of some liability, which pltf. had taken on himself, by deft.'s authority. No evidence was given of any actual request; it is, therefore, necessary to inquire whether pltf. paid to discharge some legal liability, & whether he incurred that liability by deft.'s authority. . . . He clearly had no authority to do so after deft.'s letter expressly desiring him not to pay any money in his name as his agent. . . . If the contract was for unregistered shares pltf. was not authorised to make it; & if for registered shares, C. not having tendered the transfer, was not in a situation to proceed against pltf., & consequently payment by him was in his own wrong, & did not give him a right of action against deft. for money paid to his use (TINDALL, C.J.).—BOWLBY v. BELL (1846), 3 C. B. 284; 4 Ry. & Can. Cas. 692; 16 L. J. C. P. 18; 7 L. T. O. S. 300; 10 Jur. 669; 136 E. R. 114.

Pltf. having purchased the shares, deft. repudiated the purchase as not being in accordance with instructions:—Held: deft.'s order was not an authority to buy in a falling market, & as the market was falling, pltf. was not authorised to purchase the shares, & therefore could not recover the price paid for the same.—*TALLENTYRE v. 125. —.]—Deft. on various occasions instructed pltf., a country stockbroker, to effect for her purchases & sales of stocks & shares in the usual way through brokers on the London Stock Exchange. On receipt of her instructions, pltf. effected various purchases & sales of stocks & shares in a manner of which the following transaction is an example. Deft. having instructed pltf. to buy certain American railway shares for her, pltf. gave an order for the purchase of the shares to a firm of brokers on the London Stock Exchange, between whom & himself there was an arrangement that in such cases they should deal at a "net" price for the shares, i.e., a price arrived at by adding to the purchase price such sum as the London brokers might fix as their remuneration for the transaction. The London brokers thereupon bought the shares from a jobber, & sent a bought note to pltf. charging "98½ net" for the shares, the price at which they bought from the jobber not being disclosed. Pltf. then sent a bought note to deft., charging her 98½ for the shares, without adding the word "net" plus a commission of 7s. 6d. & 1s. for the stamp. It appeared that the amount added by the London brokers for their remuneration did not exceed the usual commission payable in respect of such a purchase. In an action brought by pltf. against deft. for a balance alleged to be due to him in respect of the above-mentioned transactions:—Held: the contracts effected by pltf. being contracts, not made through the London brokers as agents, but made with them as principals, were not in accordance with the authority given to pltf. by deft., & therefore he was not entitled to indemnity from deft. in respect of them; & consequently, the action was not maintainable.

The office of a broker is to make privity of contract between two principals, & this is utterly incompatible with making a contract at one price with the one & a corresponding contract at another price with the other & pocketing the difference, the amount of which is unknown to either (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).—*JOHNSON v. 126. — Extent of deprivation of right—Part of transactions valid.—A stockbroker who on behalf of a principal buys stock upon the Stock Exchange for the next settling day, & without authority from his principal, & contrary to the agreement between them, sells the stock before that day at a loss cannot claim indemnity from his principal.

Pltf., a stockbroker, having prior to Nov. 10 bought stock of a railway co. for deft. on the London Stock Exchange, it was agreed between them that pltf. should take part of the stock so purchased off the market by paying for it with money advanced by him for the purpose, which he accordingly did, & that he should hold that stock as security for his advance with interest, & should not sell the same before the account of Nov. 26. On Nov. 10 pltf. by deft.'s instructions carried over the residue of the stock till Nov. 26, & bought a further amount of stock for that day. On Nov. 19 pltf., without deft.'s authority, & contrary to his agreement, sold the whole amount of stock purchased at a loss in order to close the account between them. If the stock had been sold on Nov. 26, it would have realised a price higher than that at which pltf. sold, but lower than that at which he had bought it for deft. In an action by pltf. against deft. for indemnity in respect of the difference between the prices at which he had bought & sold the stock:—Held: (1) as to pltf.'s claim in respect of the stock paid for & taken off the market by pltf. as before mentioned, pltf. was entitled to recover as for money paid for deft. at his request, subject to deft.'s right to counterclaim damages for the loss occasioned by pltf.'s wrongfully selling the stock before Nov. 26; (2) as to pltf.'s claim in respect of the stock carried over & that which was purchased on Nov. 10 as before mentioned no action for indemnity was maintainable.

As to that part of the stock which pltf. had actually taken & paid for, his right to be recouped had actually attached & was not undone or divested by his subsequent breach of his contract to carry over . . . no subsequent default of the agent could annul his vested right of action in respect of them (COLLINS, L.J.).—*ELLIS v. Default of broker—Not due to contracts on client's behalf.]—Pltfs., brokers on the London Stock Exchange, bought for deft., who was not a member of the Stock Exchange, certain shares for the account of July 15, 1870, & on that day, by his instructions, carried them over to the account of July 29, & paid differences amounting to £1,688. Deft. & various others, principals of pltfs., not having paid the amount due from them in respect of contracts for July 15 pltfs. became defaulters, & on the 18th, in conformity with the Rules of the Stock Exchange, they were declared defaulters, & their transactions were closed, & accounts were made up at the prices current on that day. On the closing of the accounts a further sum became due from them in respect of differences upon the contracts carried over by them for deft. In an action to recover is sum & the £1,688 :—Held : deft. was not liable for anything beyond the £1,688, there being no implied promise by a principal to his agent to indemnify him for loss caused, not by reason of his having entered into the contracts which he was authorised to enter into by the principal, but by reason of his own insolvency.

It must be admitted that pltfs. were authorised by defts. to enter into contracts in their behalf according to the Rules of the Stock Exchange. It must be admitted that for any loss incurred by the agent by reason of his having entered into such contracts according to such rules, unless they be wholly unreasonable & where the loss is without any personal default of his own, he is entitled to be indemnified by his principal upon an implied contract to that effect (per CUR.).—*DUNCAN v. 131. ——— Client treating agency as continuing.]—Deft. employed pltf., a broker on the Stock Exchange, to purchase shares, which he accordingly did. Before the settling day pltf. became a defaulter on the Stock Exchange through inability to meet his engagements, & in accordance with the rules of the Stock Exchange, the accounts which he had opened were closed as between himself & the jobbers at the then current prices as fixed by the official assignee of the Stock Exchange. The account in respect of the shares bought for deft. when closed, as above mentioned, showed a balance in favour of the jobbers against pltf. According to the practice of the Stock Exchange such closing of the account does not affect the client if he, nevertheless, desires to have the contract completed, & is not in default to the defaulting broker; & the jobber in that case is bound to complete on the settling day. Pltf., on the same day when he was declared a defaulter & his accounts closed, subsequently informed deft. that he could either have the contract completed, as above-mentioned, or he might accept the official prices. Deft. said that he would do the latter—Held : deft., having ratified the closing of the account before the settling day, was liable to indemnify pltf. against the amount for which pltf. was liable to the jobbers on such closing.

Deft. might then have rejected pltf. as his agent altogether & have himself completed the contract with the jobbers or have had his account transferred to another broker (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—HARTAS v. RIBBONS (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 254; 58 L. J. Q. B. 187; 37 W. R. 278; 5 T. L. R. 200, C. A.

143. Reasonableness of remuneration.]—(1) In Nov. 1904, pltf. instructed brokers on the London Stock Exchange to buy certain mining shares for him, it being understood that the shares were not to be taken up on the setting day, but were to be carried over. No agreement was made as to the remuneration of the brokers for arranging the carry-over. The brokers bought the shares from a jobber, & in the bought notes sent by them to pltf. they charged an opening commission of 1s. per share. They arranged the carry over with the jobber, & the first continuation account sent by them to pltf. contained a charge of "8½d. net." The shares were carried over in this way every fortnight until Jan. 1906, the "net" rate varying with the market price of the shares. Pltf. having failed to pay the balance against him on the mid-Oct. 1905 carry over, they pressed for payment, & pltf. deposited with them as security a certificate for 390 gas shares & signed a blank transfer of the same. The fortnightly balances continued adverse to pltf. & were not paid by him, & after repeated applications to pltf. for payment, the brokers, in Jan. 1906, closed the account with a balance of £69 10s. against him, & sold the 390 shares for £162 10s.

Throughout the above transactions pltf. thought that the "net" rate charged for every carry over represented only the jobber's contango; but it included also, in fact, a charge by the brokers for arranging the carry over which they did not disclose to pltf. It appeared that the "net" rate was well known on the Stock Exchange to indicate that with the jobbers contango was included the broker's remuneration, & that the charge of the brokers, which amounted in the aggregate to £17 odd, was reasonable.

Pltf. brought an action against the brokers for an account & payment of the secret profit made by them in carrying over the mining shares & for damages for wrongful conversion of the gas shares. Defts. counterclaimed for payment of reasonable remuneration for carrying over the mining shares:—Held: defts., not having been guilty of any breach of duty as agents, were entitled to retain the £17 as reasonable remuneration.

(2) They obtained from him by way of security, or "cover" as it is technically called, 390 shares (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—STUBBS v. SLATER, [1910] 1 Ch. 632; 79 L. J. Ch. 420; 102 L. T. 444, C. A.

144 i. Right of broker to close account.]—Where a stockbroker has incurred personal responsibility by purchasing stock for a client on the faith of representations made by him as to his means, which proved not to be correct, & the client has refused to give satisfactory explanations or references, the stockbroker is entitled to realise the stock held for his client, & close the account.—RISK v. AULD &

145. —.]—Defts., who were stockbrokers, by pltf.'s instructions effected on his behalf contracts on the Stock Exchange for the purchase of shares, upon which they incurred liability to a considerable amount. Pltf. not providing defts. with funds to meet that liability, defts. became entitled to close the account, which they did in respect of the various contracts in the following manner. They got a jobber in the market to make a price for the shares, & the jobber naming a fair market price, a bargain was made by defts. with the jobber for the sale of the shares to him at the price fixed & for the repurchase of the shares by them from him for the next account. Pltf. sued defts. for wrongfully selling the shares in contravention of an alleged agreement by them to keep the account open. Defts. counterclaimed the difference between the amount of the prices at which the shares were sold to the different jobbers as aforesaid & the amount of the prices at which they were purchased for pltf. The jury at the trial found that defts. had agreed to keep the account open only on condition that pltf. would provide them with money to meet the liability incurred, & that pltf. had not done so. Thereupon the judge gave judgment for defts. for the amount claimed by them on their counterclaim. On application to the Ct. of Appeal for judgment or a new trial, pltf. contended that the closing of the account was not valid, on the ground that the sale of the shares was a mere form, & defts., acting in a fiduciary capacity, were not entitled to purchase the shares on closing the account:—Held: defts. were entitled to retain their judgment.—MACOUN v. 146. — Necessity for notice to client of balance due.]—In an action by stockbrokers, members of the London Stock Exchange, against their principal, it was proved that, according to the usage of the London Stock Exchange, it is competent to a broker, who has been instructed by his principal to carry over stock to the next settlement, to close his principal's account, if a balance of differences in the broker's favour has not been paid to him by his principal upon the pay day of the current settlement, provided that the broker has given his principal notice of the amount of the balance before the pay day, & that the principal has not placed at the broker's disposal funds or available, collateral security sufficient to cover the amount of the balance:—Held: this usage was reasonable.—DAVIS & Co. v.
